Big Voices Put Verve In 'Otello'

By JOHN GRUBER James McCracken presented an extremely virile Othello last night at the Bushnell as the Connecticut Opera Association offered another in its series of operas. A very large audience was on hand despite the weather and was tremendously pleased with the production.

Gabriel Bacquier was well cast as Iago and together with Mr. McCracken provided some highly thrilling moments, particlarly at the close of Act II. The voices were well balanced and extremely large so that Carlo Moresco, who conducted, did not have to keep his orches tra under wraps, offering i vibrant interpretation of the score that was altogether in keeping with the composer's in-

Manchester in Days Gone By

Probably the first formal organization of students in the Scuth Manchester High School was Boethia, founded late in December of 1895 or vary early in January of 1896 by the princi pal, Arthur Peterson, The name Boethia was suggested by Mr. Peterson. It derives from the breek word boetheia, which, in lassical Greek, meant help or aid, or, in military usage, ar unillary force. Its appropriateness as a name for the new organization is evident. It is possible that the full Greek spelling was originally used, bu impler form Boethia was soon adopted. The first meeting of which there is any record was held on Jan. 6, 1896, Clearly, a previous meeting had been held, since the minutes of the January 6th meeting state that It was called to order by the president and that the reports of the secreary and treasurer were read Rather, he was a handsome, slender young man with clear, penetrating eyes and a pleasant smile. Although he enjoyed shop talk with squadron mates, he was shy and a loner, preferring the silent fields and forests of his native Silesia to the frenetic glitter of the cabaret. One of his closest friends was Moritz, a Great Dane that followed him through the war. He seemed to care little for women. Romance touched him only fleetingly, and that was when (like many wounded sol-

The emotional choke in the voice of a Senator from New Jersey, the scholarly wistfulness in the hope of a Senator from Montana, the tortured hawkishness of a Senator from South Dakota, the burning anger at our fate in the face of the Senator from Tennesseeall these, flailing against the heavily armored face of the Secretary condemned to the defense of what even he

Such a demonstration of how many faces our agony wears, of how powerless it seems to unite on any way out, may be of some good if it begins to heat up some instinctive folk wisdom among us which can simplify something for

Such a demonstration of the clusiveness of truth between the bland and practiced and distorted assumptions the Secretary of State produces like a programmed computer and the sometimes emotional exaggerations the tortured hopes of the Senators reach for in an effort to get themselves heard may have some use if it tells ordinary Americans the truth has to be found in their own hearts, and had better, at last, be reported out by them.

The country is not in good hands. Not even the best hands we have trying to hold and turn the country are good enough for the task. All leadership is confused, and the possession and exercise of power by those who are confused merely drives the flesh harder upon the nail. Out of this ordeal, this agony, there must some day come some kind of resolution. But only as a perhaps necessary intensification of the agony, before it does burst in one direction or another, does public parade of the confused stalemate between Senate and Administration seem to have possible value.

Conscription Under Criticism Such opposite sides of the political picture as former Vice President Richard Nixon and Senator Edward Kennedy have now united in a common recommendation that this country shift from its present selective service system to one in which we maintain an army of volunteers - well-paid volunteers highly skilled in the techniques of modern war-

We do not quite understand just how such a proposal has come to have such respectable bi-partisan sponsorship. Perhaps it results from the continued spotlight on the unfairness, injustices and inconsistencies of the present draft system, as it has been put under the critical magnifying glass of the public's at-

But, although it is a risky business to be pleased with some development whose origins you do not understand, we cannot but cheer the growing talk about abolishing peace-time conscription (the system we are using now for North Vietnam) from the life of this country. It was in order to be able to live a life free of peace-time conscription that

And one of the prime elements in the brutal totalitarianism we hoped we were defeating in World War II was the system in which a nation's youth could be sent goose-stepping its way to its own

We knew well enough, when we thought we were fighting to have less of it in the world, that peace-time conscription was prized not merely as a method of obtaining military manpower, but as an instrument for regimenting a nation's thought and custom and society into patterns more easily led and directed by some supreme authority.

It seems to be a perverse part of every victory democracy wins that its own militarists, and some of its own would-be statesmen, have an instinct to are some of the customs and institutions and even adopt some of the values they

But now politicians from both sides of the fence are attacking our selective service system, and nobody is accusing them of being un-American, or coward ly pacifists, or flimsy idealists, or of seeking to undermine the American way of life, all of which lifts the hope that America, some day, might really be America again.

But until then, at least, the 3lizzard of '88, more than any great pattle, or great dramatic moment concerning kings or presidents, remains the one thing that actually happened directy to more people than any other event n the history of man. We here in the Northeast all have known somebody who was in it and now, even though memory has been edged down toward that of those who happened to be born in it we all still have more than just a cold historical appreciation of it, and can imagine ourselves in it

Dissent Through Political Action In just about any undertaking one night want to attempt, it does seem there is a right and a wrong way to do

So it goes, we would say, with the dissent to the Vietnam war. We can understand the troubled state of mind and conscience of those who sincerely believe the war is wrong. We can also understand the distress of a youth who may be called upon to give s life for a cause his soul and intellect annot accept. And we can appreciate the sense of futility dissenters must feel n failing to sway this country from its long as the form and extent of protest gives us no reason to doubt it is motivated by a love of country and loyalty to its ideals.

Dissenters raise substantial doubt as to their purpose when they resort to words and actions which readily offer 'aid and comfort" to Hanoi. There is no patriotism in dissent which would viciously label the American youth serving his country a "war criminal" and murderer." We can only recoil in anger at extremism which hoists a Viet Cong flag and openly cheers for a Hanoi vic

In balking at "surrendering conscience to the state," such dissent merely ands conscience over to the enemy. political sophisticates as a mouse who couldn't roar. No politician in this part of America entirely believes that any more, including President Johnson's men in Wisconsin. They are worried and puzzled by McCarthy. His impulsive presidential candidacy no longer appears to them as a hap-

His disciplined followers routed the regulars of the Democratic Farmer-Labor Party in urban Minnesota last week and eleced at least 15 pro-McCarthy delegates to the Democratic National Convention. The next day he won the Massachusetts delegation when President Johnson declined to challenge him in the primary. And now the stirrings in Wisconsin have begun.

They have been detected by Leslie Aspin, a young systems analyst who has left the Pentagon to run the President's cam paign for delegates in the Apri 2 presidential primary. "Of course we're concerned," says Aspin. "McCarthy is going to win some delegates.' Republicans have come to the same conclusion. Charles Davi of the Milwaukee public rela tions firm handling Richard Nixon's primary campaign here has decided that "something is moving for McCarthy." "I'm amazed," said Davis, "at the militant enthusiasm of the intellectuals and the academics. There's a real possibility that McCarthy will get 30 per cent of the Democratic vote. He could carry the second congressional district (Madison), the ninth (suburban Milwaukee) and maybe the tenth (Western That estimate coincides with the claims of the McCarthy organization, although some o AcCarthy's men are even more bullish. They are aiming at 50 per cent of the vote. The new mood infecting Wis consin is a product of many developments, some more distinct than others. The happer ings in Minnesota and Massa chusetts are involved. So is with withdrawal of Michigan Gov George Romney from the Re publican primary here. With Romney out, Republican week, thousands of Wisconsin Republicans are "going where the action is," which means the Democratic primary. Under Wisconsin law, voters may participate in whichever primary they choose, regardless of their party affiliation. In some areas, such as Chicago and possibly New Hampshire, the administration can rely on strong Democratic organizations to deliver the vote. But Wisconsin is not a "machine" state. The Democrats in most counties are loosely organized, with the exception of the labor unions and the ethnic groups (mainly poles) on Milwankee's south side. Both labor and the south side organization are supporting the President. So are most local democratic officials. But many of the state's most prominent democrats-Sens. Gaylord Nelson and William Proxmire, for example-are maintaining a fine neutrality. In this permissive atmos-phere, the McCarthy organization is mushrooming. Hundreds of volunteers are manning offices in the state's urban centers. The strong McCarthy organization in Minneapolis and st. Paul is moving into western Wisconsin, Hundreds and perhaps thousands of college students and teachers are coming in 10 days hence from Michigan, Illinois and other states to mass manpower required for litera-ture distribution and house-tohouse contacts.

They are drawn, said Mc-Carthylte Sykes, not by their affection for McCarthy so much as their opposition to the war in Vietnam. "I guess 90 per cent of us are in the same position," Sykes said, "McCarthy knows that." That the war is the overriding issue in the confrontation between McCarthy and the President is a fact not in dispute by the politicians. McCarthy, the governor said, will be the main beneficiary of that movement, getting the support of anti-war Republicans as well as the votes of Republicans intent on embarrassing the The Romney withdrawal has been helpful to McCarthy in an-

Experts See Horse Boom

Horse business is booming, according to the department of animal industries at the University of Connecticut. With ten per cent of income being spent on an increased amount of leisure time, about $5 billion is being spent annually on horses. In 1967 there were an estimated 6¼ million horses in the United States which if evenly split up would mean one horse for every 30 people. Horses are for riding and for acing, with the draft horse and he mule out of the picture in oday's mechanized society. Horse racing is America's num-

Britain Now Standardizes Undershorts

quardians of trade standards today came to the rescue of the poor slob whose underpants are always falling down. The British Standards Institu-tion, after a considerable survey, issued an 11-page set of rules for putting life into the old man's shorts. The regulations are highly technical but they demand the right kind of natural rubber, the right quantity, the proper size and cut for that elastic band that is supposed to hold up underpants but often doesn't after a washing or two. The institution was moved by complaints, some reaching the Vomen's Advisory Council, that certain brands of elastic-band shorts were a source of considerable frustration, if not downright embarrassment.

Why the Women's Advisory Council? The man in Britain might think he's wearing the pants but it's the average housewife who often buys them, has to deal with the laundry and cometimes gets the blame from her spouse for the way she washes them.

Generally, the survey Underpants' webbing shall be uniformly woven "and shall have straight and firm edges in the relaxed state." There shall be a minimum of six and one-half inches of rubper core in 10 inches of finished lengthwise shrinking due to washing shall not exceed

7 1-12 per cent."

To test the elastic webbing he Institution recommends: 'Mark off a distance of 10 inches on the specimen, grip the specimen with both hands about an inch outside the reference marks, with the thumbs uppermost and the clenched fists below. Holding the specimen above a ruler and with hands slowly apart until considerable resistance is felt. Relax the specimen and repeat he stretching. This massages he specimen. On the third

Markets Sell Encyclopedia In California

By JACK SMITH
The Les Angeles Times
Our supermarkets are often smeered at as the very symbols of our material wealth, almost vulgar in their abundance.
Now, though, they are dispensing culture, along with frozen ples and detergents.
A publicity man writes that the distinguished one-volume Columbia Encyclopedia is now being sold—in 19 installments—through thousands of Southern California markets. The first installment is given to shoppers free.

MEMPHIS (AP) — People leave some of the strangest things on buses. Take the Memphis city bus system: One driver found a purse. In-side was a loaded revolver. A messenger on the way to the bank left his weekly deposit—a-bout $2,000. Drivers also have found false teeth, ladies' undergarments and shoes.

Grim Tasks Confronting Army Branch

Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service WASHINGTON — In building B, an aging temporary struc-ture here, are 132 Army employes who hope and pray for the time their jobs can be abol-direct relation to the Vietnam War and presently they are over-burdened. As the war has become bloodier, the staff has been increased and increased again. It works round-the-clock shifts seven days a week. In adare required.

These employes are in the casualty branch of the Army's Adjutant General's Office. They numbered only 28 in 1965 when the Vietnam War was escalated after the Tonkin Bay encounter. Theirs is the grim and exacting task of identifying through official records the Army dead which includes 11,000 of the 18,-000 service personnel killed up to now in Vietnam, and also the Army wounded, Further, they perform these depressing

In death cases, they phone the Army installation closest to the next of kin to have an officer or senior non-commissioned officer break the news to the kin between the hours of 6 a.m. and 10 p.m. Visits are prohibit ed during the late night hours. The branch here follows up the visits with an official wire confirming the death of Maj. Gen. Kenneth G. Wickham, the adjutant general, and later it sends the kin a letter of condolence on White House stationary which is signed by President Johnson. It sends the kin ample supplies of death certificates and cerftifies the death to insurance companies. Up until the recent Commu nist offensive, the branch's goal was to start the notification process in death and missing-in-action cases within two hours after the names reached it direct from Saigon. This required employes to work with speed and accuracy. In wounded cases, the next of kin are notified by wire except in some of the more severe cases when it is done in person The branch uses the medical terms it gets from Saigon to describe the cases. "Very se verely wounded," means life is in danger; "severely wounded" means life is not in danger even though the soldier might have lost both arms or legs. In both types of cases the branch here follows up by advising the kin every week of the condition of the wounded Many soldiers who are 'slightly injured" prefer not to have their families notified and the Army Abides by their wishtwo wounded GI's were handled at the branch by enlisted men who had trained with them. Employes who man the branches phones must be as compassionate and tactful as diplomats. The branch gets a steady stream of calls from heart-broken and worried-sick parents, wives and sweethearts who are in search of additional information. The employes are instructed to do everything possible to accommodate the callet The most difficult cases are those from relatives who oppose our nation's participation in the war. Such callers can hardly restrain themselves from taking out their bitterness on branch employes who must take it, and try to comfort them at the same time. Several enlisted men asked for and were given other assignments because they felt they weren't tempermentally suited to handle such calls. Only 57 of the 132 employes are civilians under civil service, and they all work the day shift. The 75 military personnel work the second and third shifts and 12-hour shifts on weekends and holidays. Civilian overtime averages over 8 hours weekly. Workweeks for enlistened personnel ranges from 50 to 60 hours, and to 60 to 70 hours for officers. The lack of transportation and eating facilities in the isolated section of building B makes it next to impossible to staff the office with civilians for night and weekend shifts. Despite the many problems, Col. Herbert Trattner, director of the branch, pays high tribute to the staff which he says is
