The Twenty Questions average voter going to the referendum polls here in Manchester on April 30 additional support for, these questions on April 30. Below these two top important issues there are declining priorities. To our mind there is nothing beneficial, merely dangerous weakening of present political structure, in the proposal to abolish the staggered system of membership on the Board of Education. And, although we can understand and share the feeling that anybody who earns a living from paid service to the town government of Manchester should have the good grace to try to live in this town, we question the real wisdom or necessity of trying to put irrevocable residence rules in the It is likewise difficult to see any emergency priority for those minor bonding Items which are intended to finance such projects as the installation of air conditioning in existing municipal buildings. It would seem that items of this nature could best be afforded when they can be afforded out of current income. It has to be remembered that every time anything is to be paid for out of the bonding process, that increases its total cost to the taxpayers by at least one

There are likely to be a good many Manchester voters, then, who will not -feel able to go into the voting booth and discharge their idea of their duty to themselves and to their town by pulling down 20 yes levers. Everyone will need to do a little homework, noticing which question is which, before going to the

Hubert Changes Course No formal announcement Vice President Hubert Humphrey may make later in the week is likely to be much more clear and decisive than the indirect announcement he made in his New York speech Monday night. In that speech, he liberated himself from his long record of spirited defense of the fighting we are doing in Vietnam and placed his emphasis on what he called the "arts of peace" and the "building of bridges" rather than "Iron - If the Vice President thus took his liberty, it was also something that had already been offered him by the last policy action of the superior whose decisions he had been defending so faithfully for so long. When President Johnson himself pulled back the bombing. and declared himself ready to work for more de-escalation, he was himself abandoning what had hitherto been his And, from the point of view of realis-

so long and trying on the softer feathers There will be a general judgment that Hubert will be more at home, in his new attitude toward the war, than he was during the period when his opinions had been drafted into the service of the administration's established policy.

But the truth about Hubert Humphrey, as it has also been truth about another very voluble mid-Westerner, Senator Everett McKinley Dirksen of Illinois, is that he has never had too much difficulty going it in either direction. The Vice President has made almost as convincing a hawk on Vietnam as he was once a convincing pioneer in advocating more strength for the United Nations we have been ignoring in Vietnam. And it was in the relatively early hey-day of lumphrey liberalism that he somehow succeeded in presenting himself as the champion of legislation restraining the political activities of American Communists to an extent the Supreme Court later held to be unconstitutional. One thing we will always be able to now about Mr. Humphrey, if he ever gets to be President. He has as quick a sense of which way the wind blows, and as quick a hand with the halyard, as anybody in American politics today. A Perfect Sense Of Touch? Japanese doctors have developed an artificial "sensory" hand which seems almost certain to prove more accurate > than any mere human hand. What is meant by that is, we think that the artificial hand, with its refined electrical system, will be much less likely to misjudge the size, shape, temperature, or content of any object it touches. t will be as if the human being had finger tips honed down perpetually to the finest degree of sensitivity, as if all the talent of the human nervous system were consistently being funneled down to the hand, so that it never touched mything without feeling it to the utmost. The attention of the artificial sensory hand, we suppose, will never relax or stray. It would, therefore, seem likely to prove the master instrument for a number of human endeavors, like feel-

n some of its uses of the sense of touch ing the quality of goods, creating the firm grip for a firm business deal, executing the alternating responses of an affection being exchanged between lovers, or weighing words even as they hang in mid air. It is, of course, getting to be a commonplace that any number of human functionaries can now be manufactured more perfectly than they were created. In the case of human necessity, when somebody needs a spare part, this is a blessing beyond price or estimate. But unless it should be a case of necessity most of us, we think, would shrink back from the prospect of perfect sensing. Where there is no room for error and doubt, there is also none for grace There are things it is better not to know with too much finality.

Putting Grief To Work The wave of grief which has swept America with the murder of Martin Luther King is unmatched since the death of John F. Kennedy. This time the grief is mixed with fear, and with the belated realization that here is a man to whom he nation should have listened more closely. From Washington to City Hall and then down to the fellow in the next street, it's what's done about this that's going to count. In Washington the impetus should send through a new civil rights law, complete with open housing provisions. It may not be enough -indeed, Connecticut's experience with open housing legislation suggests that it is not - but it is at least a oken and a measure of performance. It should speed additional low cost housing programs, and will probably trigger additional funds for law enforcement -which will directly protect and benefit

A minimum guaranteed income, through a reverse ncome tax or otherwise, may be th most positive, constructive, and in the end the cheapest way to keep disadvantaged families together and help them out of the vicious cycle of poverty. Following our study of the oratorical techniques of Senator Eugene McCarthy, we have recently been exposed to another version of campaign oratory, 1968, and we discover, from our analysis of this version, and the reception it is being given b its audiences, that Senator Mo Carthy will probably do very well for himself if he continue pretending that he does no know how to begin, make, or end a political speech.

On April 30th the Property Owners of Manchester will vote on 20 questions which call for the expenditure of many thousands of dollars IN ADDITION TO THE $12,076,225 DOLLARS already included in this year's budget.

THIS YEAR'S BUDGET IS ALREADY ABOUT A MILLION AND A HALF DOLLARS OVER LAST YEAR'S BUDGET!

Thousands of taxpayers are puzzled by the many questions on the referendum. Therefore the executive committee of the Property Owners has made a study of the questions with one thought in mind:

To make recommendations on how to vote, to provide essential services, but to vote against proposals which would increase the already high mill rate.

These recommendations will be outlined in a series of advertisements starting today.

This is your referendum, BE SURE TO VOTE! Help keep your taxes from skyrocketing by following the Property Owners recommendations, and HELP MAKE MANCHESTER A PLACE WHERE PEOPLE AND INDUSTRY CAN AF-FORD TO LIVE!

Question 1. Shall the town install and furnish school improvements at an estimated cost of $879,660?

This question is composed of 81 different expenditures, some of which are essential, others on the border line. Spending $40,600 to put sinks in some classrooms, $99,800 for site improvements, $6,000 for concrete slab under bleachers, — and still others like spending $5,000 to rejuvinate an abandoned tennis court — are absolutely out of order at this time, especially when there is some talk of closing schools because of lack of funds.

Inasmuch as this question is loaded with non-essentials, and is a package deal, WE RECOMMEND A NO VOTE!

In 1893, anyone who could tell the difference between drinking water and raw sewage could understand Connecticut's second sewage treatment plant, built by Manchester.

The sewage was piped to one snot at Olcott St. and spread over sand beds to dry then the hardened remains were skim-
