Hebron taxes will jump an estimated 10 mills, according to the Hebron Board of Finance, if the town accepts the recommended budget of $924,204.

The increased mill rate, from 47 to 57 mills, is based on the net grand list of $11,140,102. The budget will be offset by anticipated indirect revenues from schools and general government of $294,540.

The board further recommended that the balance of these major expenditures be financed by a five-year bond issue in the amount of $60,000.

Manchester Roads-2 What to Do About Main Street

By MALCOLM HARLOW

Manchester Police Chief James M. Reardon is caught in a dilemma on downtown Main St.

The State Highway Dept. took over maintenance of Main St. in 1962 after a road swap with the town under a roads reclassification act passed in 1961. General Highway State Highway engineers and officials said then and have repeated since that angle parking and the run-down signal light system have to go.

Merchants on Main St. have complained their business would be hurt even more if the parking were made parallel and the speed of the traffic increased.

flow off one of the Rt. 6 exits. Right now Downtown Renewal is merely federal applications and pretty maps on file in the MRA office.

The MRA has taken the official position of holding off on another try for Downtown Renewal until the new Road 6 area is near completion, which is expected by the end of 1968.

Local politicians have kept fairly quiet about Downtown Renewal since the 1966 defeat. Another answer was proposed by Wirt Craft, manager of the Town's Tennis store.

One of the state's best way and allow the new, faster signal system and remove angle parking. The ease of getting up and down Main St. may convince people it is easier to shop there than fight the clogged traffic around the shopping centers, Craft said.

He added, Main St. would have a spacious look and the congestion would be removed. Business would increase, he said.

A limited compromise appears to be in the making. Robert Brook, executive vice president of the Chamber of Commerce, said the merchants have asked Chief Reardon to put bags around three Main St. lights that the state has said are not necessary. These lights, the chief said, are at Hazel, Bessell and Birch streets.

Angle parking may be allowed as far south on Main St. as Locust St., Chief Reardon said. "Anything south of that, it's the state's problem."

The chief noted that Main St. is usually busy from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. "It's usually crowded," he said, "but the traffic moves slow and if you're alert, there's no problem. The girls say they like angle parking and the boys don't say anything."

"I tell them to take Spruce St. or Pine St. if they want to get North and South in a hurry," Mazzotta said.

Chief Reardon is in charge of traffic flow in town. His department police traffic on all roads including Main St. which is also part of Rt. 6.

Because of his position, the chief has become a middle-man in the argument between state traffic engineers and town merchants over Main St.

Chief Reardon said, "The state has made survey on the street and has a plan. It will take about $100,000 for new signal lights. The town's share is $40,000 and has been in my budget for the last few years."

"But the state has said they agree to remove the angle parking. They say the parking will defeat the purpose of the lighting."

The chief said the lighting is more than 20 years old and is obsolete and cannot be properly maintained.

The coming of the eight-lane Rt. 6 to the south end of Manchester makes the problem even more urgent. Rt. 6 will have two exits at the south end of Downtown Main St., dumping potentially heavy traffic into the chief's dilemma.

One answer is contained in the booklet, "Downtown Manchester Faces the Future," put out by the Manchester Redevelopment Agency before the 1966 referendum in which a $2 million bonding issue for downtown renewal was defeated by 158 votes.

The booklet shows a portion of Main St. relocated slightly to the west. Parking on the street is limited but there are plenty of large parking lots using the old portion of Main St. and land cleared of houses and other stores. The total cost of the project was to be $16 million in clearing federal funds. Chief Reardon said the plan was to expand to Charter Oak St. to pick up some of the traffic vice people it is easier to shop there than fight the clogged traffic around the shopping centers, Craft said.

He added, Main St. would have a spacious look and the congestion would be removed. Business would increase, he said.

er education course, gave his impression of his students' feelings about the city.

"They look on Main St. as an obstacle," Mazzotta said. "But they usually find it not that bad."

Here's What Businessmen Say

Main St. businessmen make it harder for women to park. Business would definitely be hurt.

The signal lights have never bothered the any."

Robert Seaman of Blush Hardware: "Ever since the state took over the street in 1963, it has never looked so dirty, dusty. They don't clean it like the town did."

"We're dead set against anything like the removal of angle parking from the street. It's a road from a safety angle if for no other reason."

George Marlow of Marlow's Department Store: "Rt. 6 is almost upon us and we're not going to be ready for it. By me, I mean Main St. and the community at large."

"We have only superficial planning of roads. We have no place to put the cars coming from out of the two exits at South Main St."

You can learn something from the success of the other side of the street. People don't want to park in our rear lots, pass by retail piles and go through stock rooms to get to the store."

"I, too, am against removing angle parking because we haven't made any other provisions."

But Main St. can be saved with leadership and financing. We could do it and do it very well.

"Older stores could be condemned and torn down to make way for parking lots and access routes to rear parking. Buildings like mine could be torn down and rebuilt with back parking."

"Something must be done."

Dirksen Loses Another Fight To Keep Subversive Board

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Republican Leader Everett Dirksen has lost another round in his dogged bid to keep the moribund Subversive Activities Control Board alive beyond this year.

A desk-thumping, shouting speech in which Dirksen urged President Johnson to back him, Dirksen said, and called on the House to pass a bill to allow the attorneys-general of each of the 50 states to prosecute alleged subversive organizations before the board.

Dirksen said he had carried his complaint to the President personally in a 30-minute meeting last Friday night and asked Johnson to act.

"Why don't you go something," was Johnson's answer to Dirksen's plea. The Republican leader said the rejected proposal was his answer to the President's question.

SOME CONSOLATION

MEYER (AP) — William M. McElroy, who was in the Air Corps at Pearl Harbor when the Japanese struck Dec. 7, 1941, wrote the Pentagon recently to see whether he had ever received his recommended promotion to sergeant.

Eventually he got a package award but had never received before his discharge in 1943.

He also found out he'd never made sergeant.

Otherwise, it would go out of business June 30.

The agency was set up in 1950 during the anti-Communist activity sparked by the late Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy, R-Wis.

Its original authority was to identify subversives and subversive organizations and compel them to register.

But Supreme Court decisions have struck most of the basic authority of the agency.

Dirksen charged that Chief Justice Warren was "subverting and distorting" the intent of Congress by not bringing any cases before the board.

He noted it had been five months since the President signed the new law providing for continuance providing the board got some business.

Dirksen said he had carried his complaint to the President personally in a 30-minute meeting last Friday night and asked Johnson to act.

"Why don't you go something," was Johnson's answer to Dirksen's plea. The Republican leader said the rejected proposal was his answer to the President's question.

Air Attacks Intensified At Borders

A Marine F4 Phantom supporting ground troops south of the sweep was shot down by enemy ground fire today, but the two crewmen bailed out and were rescued unharmed. It was the 28th U.S. warplane reported lost in combat over South Vietnam.

Sharp ground fighting was also reported near Saigon.

South-Vietnamese infantrymen said they killed 19 enemy soldiers in a two-hour battle 12 miles south of the capital. One Vietnamese soldier was reported wounded. About two miles southeast of this clash, another South Vietnamese force reported killing 11 of the enemy in a 20-minute fight and said it suffered no casualties.

Two miles south of Saigon, a Vietnamese military headquarters came under mortar and ground attack from an enemy force of unknown size. The defenders suffered eight casualties, and four Viet Cong were killed, a spokesman said.

Elsewhere, the Viet Cong continued shelling provincial capitals and airfields.

The enemy also purged eight Viet Cong gunners hit Tra Noe airfield near Can Tho. In the Mekong Delta 50 miles southwest of Saigon, two Vietnamese soldiers were wounded.

The enemy also purged eight trucks of mortar fire into Rach Gia, capital of Kien Giang province 120 miles southwest of Saigon. Two Vietnamese soldiers were killed and 10 wounded. Thursday on trucks, barges and bridges.

Pilots from the carrier Kitty Hawk claimed they destroyed or damaged 12 supply barges and started several oil fires at a truck park 16 miles northeast of Vinh.

A pilot from the carrier Bon Homme Richard reported blowing up a bridge 24 miles north of Vinh, while U.S. Air Force pilots claimed they destroyed or damaged seven trucks, a bridge and two gun positions.

The U.S. Command said American pilots flew 129 missions against the North Thursday, bringing the total for May so far to 2,774. This is a record 126 more than were flown during all of March, before President Johnson limited U.S. bombing of the southern part of North Vietnam. At that time the northeast monsoons curtailed the bombing, but the weather is now improving.

U.S. headquarters, in one of its periodic summaries of losses in the air war, reported Friday that 2,152 American planes and psychiatrist can tell him how to vote, and the pollster tells him how he is going to vote, and yet there must be some kind of reason for preserving him as a power of the election process. One thing that still seems to stand in his favor is that nobody has, as yet, found any way of using a voter for what he may do inside the voting machine.

Lightning As A Handicapper
 Lightning struck a tree down at Belmont Race Track the other day, and the electronic effects of the blow knocked out some of the equipment at the windows where the gentlemen and ladies of the afternoon were normally engaged in betting on the horses.
 The trouble was simple, and beyond immediate remedy. Patrons of the ancient and honorable sport of kings found that the equipment had failed in such a way as to prevent their voting their esteem for horses running in the 1, 2, 4 and 8 positions. And, in the three races left to be run after the lightning had struck, horses wearing one of these numbers came in with the order of finish which, in the vernacular, is classified as being "in the money."

This makes lightning the best handicapper in the business, a race track term signifying expressiveness in being able to predict which horses are more likely to win in a given race—ever to appear on the racing scene so early in a new meeting. Find the numbers lightning prevents you from betting on, and that's one way of leaving the track a winner.

Pupil Busing City To Suburb
 The busing of city children to suburban schools does not, in our opinion, provide protective long-term or short-term answers to the serious and complex problem of educating today's pupils to become understanding and responsible citizens.

It has only a tenuous relationship to the real issue—which is sound and realistic educational opportunity for the children of poor neighborhoods. It cannot be given a broad application without a total revolution in the American tradition of local control of the schools. And any proposal which such radical change on the part of professional educators seems to be emphasizing countered at the moment by the demands of black people for more, not less, control of school buildings, school staffs, and school programs right down at the neighborhood level.

So we see little lasting educational value in busing, and we conclude that the entire concept must be weighed, instead, in terms of gesture or token.

In this year 1968, in the name of Martin Luther King's death, in a period when the American people are sincerely striving to bring about a more just and white conciliation and toward unqualified justice and opportunity for every citizen, we believe that a busing program which is being justified in its title, "Project Concern."

We do not see anything transporting some 200 or 300 youngsters from New Haven to suburban classrooms in a half-dozen trips, in the name of busing, as a means of identity and instruction paid for more than 10,000 disadvantaged Negro children who will remain in New Haven classrooms.

But it might be that transporting those 200 or 300 children, and scattering them two or three youngsters per suburban classroom, could demonstrate to the white people of greater New Haven that the people of color are capable of accomplishing the kind of changes that are essential in jobs, and housing, and vocational training, and good education in full-run schools down the street and in the inner city.

It is the District itself that is ready to take any official representative would say openly? Is there a new consensus which is merely waiting for the opportunity to register itself?
 If the new Eighth District President, whoever he is to be, were to ask a committee of District citizens to study consolidation from the point of view of the future welfare of the District itself, what would it report?

Leave Something To The Voter?
 A half page advertisement appeared in the New York Times the other day, signed by a rather famous individual who described himself as a psychoanalyst, and who was taking the ad to announce and explain his support for a particular candidate for the Presidency.

It is for a candidate because of his perfect voting record or the wisdom of his campaign statements," declared this famous psychoanalyst, "is naive."
 "As a psychoanalyst who has observed political figures and movements for quite a few years," he continued, "I am less interested in what people say at the moment than what they are likely to do in the future."
 He then proceeded to use a modest display of his own analytical talents to penetrate to the inner worth of the particular candidate he was endorsing.

Perhaps, then, this is one way for us to run our presidential campaigns—to have our psychoanalysts make recommendations to us.
 First, however, we had better await the outcome of a little legal matter hanging over from a previous use of purported psychiatric opinion in a previous presidential campaign. Barry Goldwater is suing a certain magazine for $200,000 because, while he was running for President in 1964, it published a headline and a story suggesting that a headline psychiatrist had pronounced Mr. Goldwater psychologically unfit to serve well in the Presidency.

This was, of course, an instance in which the use of long range psychoanalysis was employed against a particular candidate instead of for him. But it would more or less have to be accepted that, once the psychoanalysts were admitted to any status in our political campaigns similar to that already achieved by the pollsters, they would inevitably be reporting unpleasant as well as pleasant findings.

Other than the fact that the employment of psychiatrists might lead to all kinds of political alienation suits in the courts, there is also the consideration of what role, if any, is to be left in American political campaigns to that forgotten individual, the voter himself. The

But it might be that transporting those 200 or 300 children, and scattering them two or three youngsters per suburban classroom, could demonstrate to the white people of greater New Haven that the people of color are capable of accomplishing the kind of changes that are essential in jobs, and housing, and vocational training, and good education in full-run schools down the street and in the inner city.

It is the District itself that is ready to take any official representative would say openly? Is there a new consensus which is merely waiting for the opportunity to register itself?
 If the new Eighth District President, whoever he is to be, were to ask a committee of District citizens to study consolidation from the point of view of the future welfare of the District itself, what would it report?

 A half page advertisement appeared in the New York Times the other day, signed by a rather famous individual who described himself as a psychoanalyst, and who was taking the ad to announce and explain his support for a particular candidate for the Presidency.

It is for a candidate because of his perfect voting record or the wisdom of his campaign statements," declared this famous psychoanalyst, "is naive."
 "As a psychoanalyst who has observed political figures and movements for quite a few years," he continued, "I am less interested in what people say at the moment than what they are likely to do in the future."
 He then proceeded to use a modest display of his own analytical talents to penetrate to the inner worth of the particular candidate he was endorsing.

Perhaps, then, this is one way for us to run our presidential campaigns—to have our psychoanalysts make recommendations to us.
 First, however, we had better await the outcome of a little legal matter hanging over from a previous use of purported psychiatric opinion in a previous presidential campaign. Barry Goldwater is suing a certain magazine for $200,000 because, while he was running for President in 1964, it published a headline and a story suggesting that a headline psychiatrist had pronounced Mr. Goldwater psychologically unfit to serve well in the Presidency.

This was, of course, an instance in which the use of long range psychoanalysis was employed against a particular candidate instead of for him. But it would more or less have to be accepted that, once the psychoanalysts were admitted to any status in our political campaigns similar to that already achieved by the pollsters, they would inevitably be reporting unpleasant as well as pleasant findings.

Other than the fact that the employment of psychiatrists might lead to all kinds of political alienation suits in the courts, there is also the consideration of what role, if any, is to be left in American political campaigns to that forgotten individual, the voter himself. The

Lightning struck a tree down at Belmont Race Track the other day, and the electronic effects of the blow knocked out some of the equipment at the windows where the gentlemen and ladies of the afternoon were normally engaged in betting on the horses.

This makes lightning the best handicapper in the business, a race track term signifying expressiveness in being able to predict which horses are more likely to win in a given race—ever to appear on the racing scene so early in a new meeting.

It has only a tenuous relationship to the real issue—which is sound and realistic educational opportunity for the children of poor neighborhoods.

So we see little lasting educational value in busing, and we conclude that the entire concept must be weighed, instead, in terms of gesture or token.

In this year 1968, in the name of Martin Luther King's death, in a period when the American people are sincerely striving to bring about a more just and white conciliation and toward unqualified justice and opportunity for every citizen, we believe that a busing program which is being justified in its title, "Project Concern."

We do not see anything transporting some 200 or 300 youngsters from New Haven to suburban classrooms in a half-dozen trips, in the name of busing, as a means of identity and instruction paid for more than 10,000 disadvantaged Negro children who will remain in New Haven classrooms.

But it might be that transporting those 200 or 300 children, and scattering them two or three youngsters per suburban classroom, could demonstrate to the white people of greater New Haven that the people of color are capable of accomplishing the kind of changes that are essential in jobs, and housing, and vocational training, and good education in full-run schools down the street and in the inner city.

Has Consolidation's Moment Come?

For a number of years, it has been recognized and tacitly conceded in both sections of town that eventually there would come the psychological moment in which "consolidation" of the functioning of the Eighth Utilities District with those of the Town of Manchester would begin to happen almost of its own accord, with none of the old historic controversy rearing its once formidable head.

One thing that helps make the moment seem psychological is the redevelopment program which is changing the appearance of what used to be the core area of the North End.

Another is the development of a lively possibility for the acquisition, by the town, of the Manchester Water Company.

That this may be a psychological moment is something also strongly suggested by the fact that the Eighth District is approaching its annual meeting on June 25 with an apparent surging of non-candidates over candidates.

Could this be a moment, when experienced service to the District seems tiring, to consider some candidates which would be publicly pledged to open-mindedness on the consolidation issue?

The movement for consolidation about ready to come from the people of the District itself? That, after all, has always been the only proper and effective place for it to come from, for it cannot prove itself an advantage to the people of the District itself, consolidation has no business trying to sell itself at all.

Perhaps that leads to the key question: Is the District itself ready to stand ready to take any official representative would say openly? Is there a new consensus which is merely waiting for the opportunity to register itself?

If the new Eighth District President, whoever he is to be, were to ask a committee of District citizens to study consolidation from the point of view of the future welfare of the District itself, what would it report?

Pupil Busing City To Suburb

The busing of city children to suburban schools does not, in our opinion, provide protective long-term or short-term answers to the serious and complex problem of educating today's pupils to become understanding and responsible citizens.

It has only a tenuous relationship to the real issue—which is sound and realistic educational opportunity for the children of poor neighborhoods. It cannot be given a broad application without a total revolution in the American tradition of local control of the schools.

So we see little lasting educational value in busing, and we conclude that the entire concept must be weighed, instead, in terms of gesture or token.

In this year 1968, in the name of Martin Luther King's death, in a period when the American people are sincerely striving to bring about a more just and white conciliation and toward unqualified justice and opportunity for every citizen, we believe that a busing program which is being justified in its title, "Project Concern."

Monica Baldwin: Happy But Longing to Meet Death

By GODFREY ANDERSON
KINGWOOD, England (AP)—Nearly three decades since quitting the convent after eloping with a man she described as "a man's life unbearable," best-selling author Monica Baldwin says today:

"I'm very, very happy—but longing to die," she said. "I don't want to die, but I don't want to live either."

"I had not been more than a few hours out of the convent when I realized that I didn't know the first thing about modern life," she wrote. "I'd never heard of the authors, the poets, the film stars, the politicians, the Church to marry."

"I was," she said then, "a potential grandparent with the outlook and mind of a pre-1914 schoolgirl."

"I think self-seeking in some form was behind the action of us both. It could be self-importance, self-interest, self-indulgence, self-love, selfishly. The only cure is prayer."

Bolton 2nd Budget Vote on Monday

Residents will be asked to go to a second annual budget meeting Monday to adopt a budget of $1,176,000. Of this, $380,491 is for town boards and commissions and $795,509 for the Board of Education. It is estimated that this budget will raise the tax rate from 50 to 68 cents.

At a meeting May 13, the budget was rejected for the first time in the town's history and sent back to the Board of Finance.

An opinion poll vote indicated that the majority wanted the finance board to increase the school budget to a figure more acceptable to both boards. The school board budget had been set at $779,700.

At a joint meeting after the budget meeting, the two boards agreed on some $100,000 worth of cuts. At a subsequent meeting, the finance board added about $300 more, making the total cut $227,000.

The budget passes this time, the town will be asked.

Stock Market Grows Firm: Volume Big

NEW YORK (AP)—An irregular stock market grew firmer this afternoon. Volume was heavy.

Turnover at noon was 6.18 million shares compared with 5.48 million Thursday.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks at noon was up .1 at 20.8, with industrials off .1 to 20.7, and utilities off .1 to 20.6.

Gains outnumbered losses from the start.

The Dow Jones Industrial average at noon was off 1.04 at 921.1.

A series of large blocks was traded. Standard Oil (New Jersey) was off $1 at 47 on 104,700 shares. Southwestern Public Service dropped $1/2 to 12 1/2 on a block of 28,800 shares.

A spokesman for an eight-man team of National Transportation Safety Board experts sent from Washington, D.C., to investigate the disaster said the FAA would complete its take-over of Sweeney Industries as early as next week. Glen Alden traded on the stock market at 15 1/2.

Western Union was very active. It rose to 47 1/2 on 104,700 shares, half way on the 25-mile hop from Disneyland to the airport.

The dead included Mayor John R. Trainor, 46, of Red Bank, Md., who died of a heart attack at the University of California at Berkeley, and Morris Kromm, 48, professor of education at the University of California, Berkeley, a New York investment banker from West Longmeadow, N.Y.

Nine relatives of Mrs. Jack Garner of Columbus, Ohio, also were aboard. They were near the end of a vacation.

A spokesman for the FAA in Washington said 60 to 70 witnesses are being interviewed. Investigations are scheduled to continue at the site of the crash until your hot off in coming days of debris is formed.

Politics at A Glance

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Here is a summary of top developments in the presidential nomination campaign:

Republicans—Former Vice President Richard M. Nixon, considered the likely winner of next Tuesday's GOP presidential primary in Oregon, begins campaigning there today. In Atlanta, Ga., Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York accuses Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, one of the Democratic hopefuls, of changing his position on one day, and Kennedy, in turn, accuses Rockefeller of doing the same.

Democrats—Prepping for Tuesday's Democratic primary in Oregon, Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy again challenges Kennedy to a debate. But Kennedy seems to be ignoring McCarthy. He's more concerned with holding down Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey's write-in harvest in California.

Investigations are scheduled to continue at the site of the crash until your hot off in coming days of debris is formed.

Coast Copter Crash Probed In Cow Pasture, Morgue

A rotor blade broke away from the big craft before it fell, the Los Angeles County coroner said today in a report on the crash of a helicopter in a cow pasture.

The wreckage is being moved to the Los Angeles International Airport and the craft will be reconstructed "like a puzzle" on a chicken-wire national airport from Disney-Franks, the FAA spokesman said.

Residents of the Paramount Agency to ground all of the firm's Sikorsky 561 helicopters until the cause of the crash was determined.

"It sounds very melodramatic," the FAA spokesman said, "but it is very possible that some dangerous-lead teenager will come strolling up the ropes there today or tomorrow with a piece of wreckage that will provide the clue to the whole accident."

The bodies of the 20 passengers and three crewmen were found in or near the charred wreckage in a cow pasture near a busy intersection of Paramount, which halved its dividend Thursday, was under selling pressure and dropped 1 1/2 or so in heavy trading.

Hebron Edwin May Says State Discontented

Edwin H. May Jr., Republican candidate for United States Senator, spoke last night at the Hebron Elementary School to 60 Republicans from Hebron, East Hampton, Columbia, Marlborough and other area towns. May called this year's election "the most critical election in some time if not the most crucial." He noted that GOP party unity is at an all time high in Connecticut and throughout the nation. He said whoever gets the GOP presidential nomination in Miami will receive full support. Other GOP leaders have indicated they will support fully the party nominee, he said.

He said, "A look at the record will show that in almost every instance, the present administration has failed over the last four years. We see wild spending, discontent of the people, moral problems, excitement of combat. Either Republican candidate for president can lead, select a new cabinet and tangle with the crucial problems we face today."

May pointed out that in all his years of going around the state he had never seen people so ready for a change, "and the Republican Party can be that change. It's up to us. I'm interested in taking on the job of meeting Mr. Ribicoff, who only won by 31 per cent in 1962."

He concluded, "Elections aren't won in Washington, they're won in towns like Marlborough, Hebron and Columbia, on street corners. The Republican Party has a mission this year, and that is to restore a sense of confidence in the people."

Among those who attended the program last night were Andrew Repko, State Senator; John Fossano, GOP town chairman from East Hampton and candidate for representation from the 2nd district; Mrs. Jane Christophor, of East Hampton, State Committee woman from the fourth district; Mrs. Virginia Lewis, of Columbia, State Central Committee woman from the 20th district; Mrs. Mullen of Stafford, State Central Committee woman from the 20th district; Douglas Pallone of Hebron and Karl Links of Hebron, both former state legislators.

Convention which is to be held in Miami Beach, Fla. Miss Alden was selected F.H.A. girl of the Rham Chapter for the year and Irene Sibohian was elected state parliamentarian for 1968.

Rules Announced For Boat Owners

The Connecticut State Department of Health says a higher proportion of Connecticut's people will be out in power-driven boats than ever in 1968. In view of this fact, the department urges all those who plan to use the waterways this summer to familiarize themselves with all rules and regulations regarding safety afloat.

The Connecticut Boating Commission received reports of 51 boating accidents in 1967, among which 21 were collisions with other vessels. Fatalities known to have occurred in boating accidents totaled 24, with capsizing leading 434 as the principal cause in 18 deaths. Nine people using canoes, rowboats and rafts died, while 9 fatalities occurred from outboard motor activity. Two deaths were due to falling overboard, two from falls on water skis, and two from explosions.

Some specific boating regulations for 1968 are: All motorboats must now be registered; life preserving devices will be required; moderate speeds will be enforced; accident reports must be filed in case of death, injury and property damage to amount of $100 or more.

Any harbor master, deputy harbor master, conservation officer, state, municipal or auxiliary police certified by the commission for marine police duty may enforce the provisions of the charter.

Coventry Petition Asks Police Budget Be Restored

A petition calling for reconsideration of action taken at Monday night's secret town meeting is being circulated, and if acted upon at a special town meeting, would restore some $21,000 in cuts to the police budget.

The petition, being circulated by Albert Myers, proprietor of the Waterfront Restaurant, requires 20 signatures of qualified voters in the town before being filed with the town clerk. Myers said late yesterday he feels the petition will be ready by Monday.

By law, voters can call for a special town meeting in this way and it must be called within 21 days of filing with the town clerk. At the budget meeting Monday night, taxpayers by a 75-71 secret ballot vote, cut to $31,750 the appropriation for the police department. This is the figure in the current budget, and is $21,000 below the recommended figure of the Board of Finance for next year's budget.

Police Chief Eugene Menard had no comment last night when he learned about the petition but had said earlier yesterday that he planned to carry out the wishes of the voters at the town meeting and live within the $31,750 figure.

This would involve, Menard said, some curtailment in police service, and would mean the town would not have full 24-hour police protection.

Menard further outlined his figure by saying that only one man would be laid off at a time. He said he would also substitute a full-time clerk by using police officers. Menard said a telephone answering service would forego his own salary increase.

The cut figure would give no allowance for new equipment. Menard pointed out, but would allow $3,000 for purchase of a new cruiser early in 1969. The 1968 cruiser would then have about 120,000 miles, would be turned in for the new vehicle at that time.

Menard also reported that the auxiliary police are established last fall, will become inactive.

"These men have given about 400 free hours per month on the desk and cruiser," Menard said, "and they see no reason to continue if they are not receiving the support of the community."

Martin Honored By Police Group

James P. Martin of 5 Grant Rd. was honored by the Manchester Police Association Wednesday at a dinner held in the Army and Navy Club. Martin is a former member of the Manchester Police Association and left last February after serving on the force for ten years.

Nearly fifty attended the affair and heard testimonials given for Martin by members of the Manchester Police Association. Guest speakers included Capt. Everett Shaw of the New Haven Police Department, Sgt. Richard Thurston of the Manchester Police Association and Deputy Mayor Harold A. Turkington.

President Samuel Maltempo of the MPA presented Martin with a desk calendar containing a gold badge inscribed with the number Martin had as a member of the force and a display of the number of years he served. He also received an honorary plaque.

Martin is now with the State Tax Department in Hartford.

Instant Hairpieces NEW YORK (AP)—For the man who has spent 20 years watching his hair fall out, a toupee is not an hour away. It used to take weeks to have a toupee made. Individual hairs had to be sewn piece by piece with a curved needle onto a face or hat foundation.

Now wig designer Richard Harwich is using a machine which can make a toupee or woman's hairpiece while the customer is having lunch. All Harwich does is take the customer's measurements and match his hair. One hour later it's ready.

The machine-made hairpiece utilizes a hair root embedded in an artificial plastic scalp.

Most Unusual Back to Back Wins

Talk about consistency, East Catholic High notched two come-from-behind victories this week by 2-1 scores. The victims were Pulaski High of New Britain on Tuesday and Aquinas High of New Britain on Wednesday.

Off the Cuff

Young Brian Maher, promoted from the jockey, turned in a creditable pitching performance for Coach Hal Pierske with the Manchester High varsity in his maiden start. He worked seven strong innings against Platt High of Meriden Wednesday afternoon and held a 4-0 lead before the roof caved in the eighth inning when he tried. Platt went on to win 18-4, but the showing by the slender right-hander was an indication of better things in the future.

 JUST Listed on prestige Boulder Rd. Beauty is its own excuse for being and this is a beautiful property. 1 1/2 acres wooded lot. Nicely landscaped, truly beautiful. Enough trees to provide ample shade but spaced so that sunlight filters through. Located at the end of a cul-de-sac on one of the most beautiful streets in the area, we think the combination of street and site makes it worth well over $20,000. Add to this a fine Colonial home with two-car garage and finished family room, and you might expect a price in the five figures. It's barely into the forties. We might describe all the features to you, but frankly, we'd rather show you. Let Frank Filoramo take you through and around this lovely wooded area. It's still a new home, yet the active life time buy — or lease or both, you won't want to miss this opportunity. Call about one hour Saturday or Sunday at 643-2711. The Bel Air Agency, 647-1413.

Spector Student Captain Of School Fire Department

Seventeen students at the Nichols College of Business Administration in Dudley, Mass. are satisfying a burning desire for knowledge and extinguishing the flames that may threaten campus buildings at the same time. They are members of a unique organization, a student fire department, charged with the responsibility of protecting life and property from fire damage. The fire department came into existence in 1965 after the captain of this year's department, Kenneth M. Spector, outlined the requirements for membership.

Interested students make written application to the department and officers meet to make a decision on acceptance. The Massachusetts Institute of Fire Instruction sends an instructor to the campus every year to teach an advanced officers course in fire fighting techniques. All candidates must successfully complete this course. The department at Cranston, R.I., has given its wholehearted support to the organization, both moral and tangible. In the past, it has provided equipment that was used to good use. Spector says with some pride that, "A mutual aid system exists with departments in the surrounding area. If an alarm is entered in any of the local departments, we can hear it here on the hill and our equipment and entire crew are rushed to the scene." Spector is also active in the Dramatic Club, and Hillel Society at Nichols.

At present, the department is made up of three battalions each manning one truck. The apparatus consists of a 1945 International forest fire truck, a 1940 Mack 500-gallon pumper, and a 1957 Mack City Service ladder truck. Each fireman contributes $5 a semester to help maintain the equipment. Any major finances involving larger sums of money are handled by the department.

U.S. Seeks Avowal Ho Troops in South

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER AP Special Correspondent. PARIS (AP)—The United States intends to step up pressure on Hanoi to force its negotiators in the Paris talks to admit that thousands of North Vietnamese troops are fighting in South Vietnam.

Pham Van Dong may have made a basic move toward a concession on that point Friday when he said in a speech in Hanoi: "Wherever the enemy exerts its pressure, we will fight him." This stopped short of admitting that northern troops had gone into the South but provided a basis for such a concession later—probably much later. U.S. Ambassador W. Averell Harriman and Xuan Thuy, the North Vietnamese representative, will meet again Monday after a four-day recess, to open their third week of talks. But some experts here believe U.S. authorities are now preparing heavy enemy offensive.

New Fighting Hits Northern Saigon

SAIGON (AP)—New fighting broke out on Saigon's northern fringes today as South Vietnamese marines and U.S. helicopter gunships moved against Viet Cong forces possibly threatening another offensive against the capital. Enemy soldiers holed up in huts on both sides of the Binh Loi bridge 2 1/2 miles from the heart of Saigon. Estimates of their number ranged from 100 to 400. Vietnamese tanks set up a blockade at a key road junction leading into Saigon.

'Poor' Widen Targets Despite Own Worries

WASHINGTON (AP)—Despite problems in their own mid-level backyards, the Poor People's demonstrators are broadening their target area to include the homes as well as the offices of government figures. About 100 of the poor clapped, sang and shouted their disapproval last night outside the apartment building of Rep. Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark., a chief architect of the welfare program. They laughed and clapped in derision after singing "Happy Birthdays" for the poor.

De Gaulle European Reaction

LONDON (AP)—European commentators say French President Charles de Gaulle may be crushed to death by a rock-land truck that rammed a speech Friday night, but they question his ability to proceed. Streets in Paris' Latin Quarter and in Strasbourg were like battlefields, a litter of killed and wounded. De Gaulle's speech was broadcast in French and English. He appealed to the people to exercise the greatest prudence and not to join in assemblies or parades.
