No Two Power World Is Safe

The sacrifice the big powers have made n the non-proliferation treaty is mainly a pledge that they will do everything possible to perpetuate their own monopoly of the powers of nuclear destruc-

And the agreement of the United States and Russia to begin discussions on a limitation of the amount and varieties of nuclear power they will maintain against one another is merely the agreement of two powers who have such a surplus of power to kill one another they can easily afford to shave the total amount down without in the least impairing their power of total mutual destruction.

These are perhaps jaundiced views to offer concerning developments which have apparently brought considerable satisfaction and cheer to the two national leaderships involved, that of President Johnson in Washington, that of Premier Kosygin in Moscow. And no one should try to deny the fact that for these two great powers to get anywhere near this degree of calm rationality in their relationships is a pleasant and seemingly non-harmful development. In the vein and style of big power diplomacy it has indeed remired almost limitiess patience and ingenuity to bring even such fringefar more terrible than those of any other of coming down to the ground and staysphere of the time is very much like that of the various armament control pacts and treaties which were evolved in the period between World War I and II. These were largely an attempt to preserve existing monopolies or superiorities; there were always potential navericks waiting for the opportunistic noment to surge through their paper tiger enforcement clauses; the agreements hailed in so many speeches just like the one the President made in Washngton the other day were more illusion man reality. And when World War I imily came, because all armaments imitations and all pledges to the League of Nations proved to be things Italy, Japan and Germany could brush aside, sometimes with the tacit connivance of other nations, the main effect of a whole era of presumed progress toward limitation of armaments had been to limit the number of obsolete weapons nations would have to take into World War II.

Where is the promise of something better and more binding in the present interplay between Russia and the United Only, in something that no one mentions. It might conceivably be that the United States and Russia could so encourage themselves into mutual deemphasis of their military stance in the world that the day might come when both of these might be willing to stop being the world's foremost independent powers, and start being just commonplace members of the United Nations. When each of them becomes willing to surrender its own safety to the United Nations - when each of them is willing to concede to the United Nations the right to possess more military police force than it possesses for itself in its own name - then there will be some hope of a system of world life and armament control which will not merely be the preface to a new world war.

In other words, when the United States and Russia really begin to lead the world oward peace, they will no longer be dealing privately with one another, like two rival rulers of two half worlds, but they will each be conducting themselves as citizens of one world, under the superior peace and war jurisdiction and uw of the United Nations, which continues to possess and represent the one and only treaty which contains the possibility of true security for anybody.

The Trains We Should Have

The Interstate Commerce Commission, finding itself plagued with the problem of railroads seeking to abandon passenger service on the plea that such services are no longer profitable, has recommended, in its latest report to Congress, that somebody, either a Conressional committee, or the Department Transportation, undertake a com-

tional railroad personger system, and then, if the need is certified, of the nethods for developing such a modern rail network. We certify the need. The option t travel by railroad, and to travel by railroad to any reasonable major city destination, is not one this nation can afford to abandon. And one part of the method that will have to be followed in also, we would say, becoming obvious. A national passenger service should be maintained as a national governmentoperated facility, owning and operating and maintaining to own equipment, and sharing nothing with existing private rail roads except the use of their lines. The chief reason we, the wealthiest and most advanced nation in the world, have the worst passenger railroads in the world is because we have, so far, rather naively trusted private enterprise railroads to take care of us, out of some loyalty to the original nature of their franchise, out of the goodness of their corporate hearts.

They are not trying to take care of us. They are continually scheming to downgrade and eliminate such poor passenger service as they continue to offer us. And we are apparently never going to invoke our regulatory powers, or define the responsibilities of their franchise, in such a way as to compel them to maintain even that minimum of decent service which would seem a sane necessity for any civilized country. As things are going, they are succeeding in the gradual elimination of train after train, route after route.

> at need, they should have no more of their old fire and fight left if the nation itself now formulates its own plan for owning and operating its own passenger system. If private enterprise neither the inclination nor the capacity to operate such a system, it ought to be ready to relinquish the right, peacefully at last, to government. This country ought to have the finest, most handsome, the cleanest, the most comfortable, the most pleasant trains in the whole world, ready to take people where they want to go without forcing them into the lemming madness of the superhighways or the sardine madness of the sides.

Since they are so reluctant themselves to maintain a service which is a nation-

A Relativity Of Fatigue

We have news for those plane pilots or plane travelers who find themselves experiencing what they think to be the inique sensation of "time-zone faitgue." This is the weary, tired sensation which apparently floods through the individual when he has taken his personal "biological clock" and discombobulated it by rushing it through several time zones in the course of one uninterrupted flight. They err, these travelers of the stratosphere, in assuming that their experience is strictly limited to the air, and can be But, although the weapons involved are avoided forever by the simple expedient

> The sensation in question, when it comes during or immediately after air travel, results from a multiplication of factors of speed and height and distance versus the individual physiology which happens to be involved. But this physiology itself is a variable factor, subject to change from such inevitable factors as the passage of another kind of time -that we call age.

There comes a stage where the coefficient represented by the thing called age zooms higher and higher, producing curious result in which the same sensation as that of "time-zone fatigue" will be experienced at ground level, at moderate speeds, over very short distances. Those pilots who are just beginning to notice it when they fly from Los Angeles to London may come to the day when they get the same fatigue walking from the porch hammock down to the corner

Connecticut GOP

In this year of unsettled politics, it is good to have something which never changes. Connecticut is the "Land of Steady Habits" and nothing followed its old habits any better than the state GOP

The political leaders assembled shoose delegates for the national convention and a senatorial candidate. Never had so many met to do so little. Never were the "leaders" more docile in following their instructions.

Perhaps this is unfair. At a time of chaos one might be pleased to find order and discipline. The fact is the decisions were made months ago. The agreemen was that the convention delegation would go for Rockefeller and the nomination to Ed May. The moderate forces in the party became a bit restless and it was agreed to give three votes to Nixon. Everything came out exactly as planned. But this year things could be up-The liberal group in the GOP has not given the party what could be decribed as outstanding leadership. The GOP holds only a single congressional office and no statewide office. The idea that it could outspend the Democrats was a disaster. Leaving its base as the party of responsibility it lost its solid core followers and attracted few liberals staide its own diminished ranks. This year all across the nation the tide is turning toward a middle of the road approach to our problems. Al hough there are 13 votes from Connecticut that are "neutral for Rocke eller" this could change in the next few weeks. If Rockefeller should electriy the country during his election drive these votes will stay solid. If when the P meets in Miami Nixon has a comanding lead it will surprise no one if Connecticut spokesman arises and otes "16 for Richard M. Nixon." If that

The trouble began immediately after Kennedy's murder when Rockefeller, instead of quickly naming a successor, began to war game the situation with his advisors. Suspicious of Lindsay ever since the garbage affair, Rockefeller's chief lieutenants feared the Mayor would reject an offer of the Senate seat with a public pronouncement that he could not, in good conscience turn the city over to Democrat Frank O'Connor (president of the City Council). Lindsay would then seem the selfless party man. To smoke out Lindsay's intentions, Rockefeller let politicians and press know that he definitely had decided to offer him the

Survey Recommends Park Nature Center

A survey made by the National Audubon Society, in cooperation with the Vernon Junior Woman's Club, recommendation with the Vernon Junior Woman's Club, recommendation and educational day camping.

This recommendation, according to Donald Berger, Vernon's recreation director, would eliminate swimming and fishing, curtail libling, make it necessary to relocate scouting camping areas and limit picnicking.

The prjocot would take two years to develop and would need an estimated $80,000 in capital costs with a starting annual operating budget of $22,000. It would provide a complete nature center building, a year-round home for a caretaker and lise family, a maintenance building and a system of special trails.

Berger said the recreation commission feels that swimming which is one of the town's only could be phased out at the park two swimming areas. But, he noted, this should not be done until other provisions are made for swimming alsewhere.

Berger said regardless of how good the supervision, a pond does not compare with a pool and because of the Hability factors another swimming pool and because of the Hability factors another swimming pool and because of the Hability factors another swimming pool and because of the Hability factors another swimming pool and because of the Hability factors another swimming pool and because of the Hability factors another swimming pool and because of the Hability factors another swimming pool and because of the Hability factors another swimming pool and because of the heads its in mind it recommends that any formal opening be delayed until the proposed area and building are ready for the public.
