As Memorial to Protest Czechs March, Mourning Youth

PRAGUE (AP)—Thousands of Czechoslovak students, workers and teachers massed today in Wenceslas Square for a huge procession through Prague streets in memory of Jan Palach.

Palach died Sunday after setting himself Thursday aflame to protest the loss of freedoms under Soviet occupation.

The march was about a mile to a square in front of the philosophical school where Palach was a student. The square is named Red Army Square and the students planned to rename it Jan Palach Square at a ceremony.

Groups of students arrived with Czech flags and black flags of mourning. The square round the status of St. Wenceslas and

Soviets Ask Parley on N-Missiles

MOSCOW (AP)—The Soviet Union today reaffirmed its willingness to begin a "serious exchange of opinions" with the United States on the reduction of nuclear missile systems for both attack and defense.

The timing of the statement, coincident with the inauguration of President Nixon, emphasized the new Soviet effort to get missile talks started with the United States.

The Soviet government is ready to discuss the "mutual restriction and subsequent reduction of strategic means of delivery of nuclear weapons, including defensive systems," the statement said.

State Drops Try To Delay Shaw's Trial

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—The state today abandoned its effort to delay the trial of Clay L. Shaw, 65, the wealthy retired New Orleans businessman charged with conspiring to murder President John F. Kennedy.

Asst. Dist. Atty. James Alcock withdrew the state's motion for continuance at a hearing before Criminal Dist. Court Judge Edward J. Haggerty and said the state would be ready to go with the long-delayed trial scheduled to start Tuesday.

Defense Attorney F. Irvin Dymond's only comment during the five-minute hearing was, "We just announced our readiness to go to trial."

Navy Court Opens Probe Into Pueblo

CORONADO, Calif. (AP)—A Navy court of inquiry opened today into the seizure of the USS Pueblo and her 83-man crew by North Korea.

Cmdr. Lloyd M. Bucher, skipper of the intelligence ship, was the only Pueblo crewman in the room as the court opened. Consisting of five admirals, Bucher was expected to be an exhaustive inquiry.

Navy personnel, civilians and 46 newsmen filled the small amphitheater where the inquiry is being conducted at the Naval Amphibious Base here. The 111-seat room ordinarily is used for classroom training.

A question facing the high ranking court of inquiry is: Did the ship intrude into North Korean territorial waters before it was boarded by the North Koreans last Jan. 23?

North Korea says it did. The skipper of the ship, Cmdr. Lloyd M. Bucher, says it didn't.

Adm. Thomas I. Moore, chief of naval operations, has said that the Navy never doubted Bucher's word. U.S. evidence, Moore said shows the Pueblo as 16 miles from Ye Do Island—four miles beyond the Communist country's territorial limit—when she was boarded.

Even if the court finds the ship was where Bucher says it was, the five admirals on the court of inquiry seek answers to many other questions.

Among them, one raised by Sen. Richard B. Russell, D-Ga., chairman of the Senate Armed

He Urges Nation To Heal Divisions

WASHINGTON (AP)—Richard M. Nixon solemnly took the oath as the nation's 37th president today and dedicated his administration in this time of war and turmoil "to the cause of peace among nations."

Address Excerpts

Ed. Note—The full text of President Richard M. Nixon's Inaugural Address may be found on P. 6 of today's Herald.

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Nixon launched his administration today, declaring that "the times are on the side of peace" and that history beckons America "to help lead the world at last out of the valley of turmoil."

In the text of his inaugural address from the steps of the capitol, Nixon said that at home the nation faces "a crisis of the spirit" and needs an answer of the spirit.

We have found ourselves rich in goods but ragged in spirit; reaching with magnificent precision for the moon, but falling into raucous discord here on earth," he said.

The first official inaugural event, the reception for distinguished ladies, took place Saturday afternoon at the National Gallery of Art. Attendance was by invitation only and was limited to a mere 11,000 by Gallery regulation.

It was a rainy, miserable day in Washington. As we stepped out of our special bus, three young demonstrators were screaming at four or five policemen. With distorted faces, they were purposely baiting the uniformed men who stood quietly, hands at their sides, saying nothing.

One young girl turned to me and said, "Do you know what they're doing? They won't let us demonstrate for pro-feminism. They will even throw us to the ground, while ladies inside are sipping tea."

In the meantime many ardent Republican Party workers who might be classified as feminists were climbing the marble steps to the rousing music of the Marine Band.

Four receiving lines had been formed in the East and West Courts. We were told by the numerous hostesses that Mrs. Nixon was to circulate from one receiving line to another. Wives of members of Congress and of members of the Diplomatic Corps circulated among the guests.

With over 100 military aides in full dress uniform, the exquisite paintings were a magnificent background for such a reception. Nancy LaBonne (Mrs. G.T.), daughter Lynde and Nina Parker (Mrs. Albert), all of Glastonbury, had to wait because their invitations had not been mailed in advance. Mrs. Parker is the first woman member of the Glastonbury Town Council. My daughter Lorraine and I were directed toward a reasonable wait, but several wives of Cabinet members. We elected to try one of the three remaining lines. By this time I had decided it would be impossible for Mrs. Nixon to move from one place to another and was determined to get into the right line. I kept my eyes on the working press, all of whom wore huge pink tags about three times the size of a luggage tag. It appeared that they were being taken in small groups to a certain area, so we made the right line. It was extremely hot, crowded, and the marble floors were tough. The Republican ladies were dressed, as protocol demanded, in simple street or afternoon outfits.

Laurie and I finally reached the end of the rainbow after a two-and-a-half-hour wait. Mrs. Nixon, looking younger and prettier than she did when her husband was vice-president. She wore a pale blue silk afternoon dress and medium heeled, bone-colored pumps.

I now discovered why the wait was so long—Pat Nixon spoke to each lady after shaking hands for more than three hours, she projected a feeling of personal interest to each guest. Sen. Hugh Scott's wife of Pennsylvania received with her, as well as a second lovely dark-haired woman who said to me, "I'm Mrs. Finch." I responded spontaneously, "Oh, you're a friend of the Grassidick, (George and Mary of California.) George was born and brought up in Manchester and we had heard about Robert Finch long before he was selected for secretary of health, education and welfare.

The afternoon ended happily for me the way it had begun. There were, however, many disappointed ladies and many angry ones. Almost all were considerably patient and understanding.

The Connecticut Group held its banquet of the week Saturday evening. Among those attending were Gov. and Mrs. John Dempsey, The Honorable Ann Uccello, mayor of Hartford, Congressman Thomas Meskill, and Lowell Welcher, Howard Hausman, chairman of the Republican State Central Committee, John Aloop, national committee man, and Tina Harrower, national committee woman.

Area guests included State

As the cannons boomed out the 21-gun salute, the red-coated Marine band struck up "Hail to the Chief" and then Richard Nixon, 37th president of the United States, began his inaugural address—the charting of his administration's course.

He spoke solemnly and with deliberation, calling for the nation to go forward as a peace-maker and together, both blacks and whites.

"For the first time, because the peoples of the world want peace and the leaders are afraid of war, the times are on the side of peace," he said.

"We are caught in war, wanting peace," said Nixon. "We are torn by division, wanting unity. We see around us empty lives, wanting fulfillment. We see tasks that need doing, waiting for hands to do them."

"To a crisis of the spirit, we need an answer of the spirit," he added.

But, the new President said, "We cannot learn from one another until we stop shouting at one another."

The chilly crowd punctuated his brief applause for Nixon at times during his speech by thumping cold feet on the floor of the wooden stands.

Johnson accompanied Nixon to the Capitol after a coffee-chat at the White House. Both men smiled at each other and shook hands as they met.

In launching his administration, Nixon said, "I do not offer a life of unending ease. I do not call for a life of grim sacrifice. I ask you to join in a high adventure—one as rich as humanity itself and exciting as the times we live in."

Gathered around Nixon on the platform outside the Capitol were many of the nation's leaders—including the Republican and Democratic chiefs of Congress and the Nixon Cabinet—as well as the outgoing president

He promised to "press urgently forward" toward such goals as rebuilding cities, providing better housing, strengthening education, protecting the environment and seeking full employment.

Citing his inaugural motto, Nixon said all must go forward together if any is to advance.

"No man can be fully free while his neighbor is not," he said.

"This means black and white together as one nation, not two," the President declared. "The laws have caught up with our conscience. What remains is to give light to what is in the law: To insure at last that all are born equal in dignity before God, all are born equal in dignity before man."

Nixon's principal emphasis clearly was on the search for peace.

Hickel's Nomination Is Approved, 14-3

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Senate Interior Committee approved today, by a 14-3 vote, the controversial nomination of Gov. Walter J. Hickel of Alaska as secretary of the interior in the Nixon administration.

The endorsement, hard won by Hickel in five days of committee scrutiny, came less than two hours before the presidential inauguration of Richard M. Nixon.

The other 11 new Cabinet members had won declared or tacit approval of various Senate committees without major difficulty last week.

Most appointments were due to go to the floor for confirmation today.

Chairman Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., of the Interior Committee said Hickel's nomination would not be acted upon by the Senate until Tuesday at the earliest.

Jackson said the committee still had to complete the record on Hickel's financial interests, which were a key point during extended committee deliberations.

The governor has promised to divert himself of all holdings that could raise a conflict of interest, Jackson said.

The Hickel nomination was opposed in the committee by Sen. Gaylord Nelson of Wisconsin, George S. McGovern of South Dakota and Frank E. Moss of Utah, all Democrats.

The committee had been expected to act over the weekend, but announced after a closed session Saturday that it had asked Hickel for a statement pledging he did not hold any oil or gas leases in his home state.

The action followed three days of hearings last week during which the controversial Hickel apparently convinced the committee that his views on water pollution and conservation were in line with most of its members.

Remarks made by Hickel after his appointment was announced had been widely interpreted as indicating a pro-industry approach to both problems.

The governor, however, who

"THE WAY I HEARD IT"

by John Gruber

We're finally ready for the beginning of "Die Walkure" which will occur at the Bushnell at 8 o'clock Feb. 6. And that doesn't mean $15, either, so be on time for once and may nasty things about intercomers on your own account. This work starts with a prelude that is an integral part of the music-drama and not just something to quiet the audience before the curtain rises.

As I have pointed out, the orchestra is most important in Wagner; it starts this work; it sets the mood before the curtain goes up. Start listening to it at once and keep listening all evening. You'll hear the strings all right, despite concentration on myriads of instruments and the orchestra.

The prelude begins and there is no doing that it has been a stormy day. Thunder and lightning as well as driving rain enfold the listener, and every flitting horn and trumpet call show that it has been a stormy day of battle, as well. This is one of two places in the work where the immense orchestra is used. In general, the opera is quiet.

The storm calms eventually and becomes so quiet that we realize we are no longer under it but inside, somewhere, listening to it to record. The curtain goes up on an stage with nobody on it.

In the center of the stage is a large ash tree which supports the hut of Hunding, the villain of the piece. Usually a double door at the right in the rear opens outside, and a door at the left in the rear leads to a bedroom of some sort. On the right wall, near the front, is a fireplace with a fire burning, and a few chairs and a table comprise the sparse furnishings.

The storm music gives way to a sort of stumbling motive as Siegmund (the tenor) enters in exhausted condition. He is obviously in flight, for he has no sword, no helmet, and no shield. No Norse or Teutonic man of the Iron Age would go anywhere without them.

Siegmund stumbles down to the fireplace and says in effect: "I've got to rest here, no matter where home this is. Wherever he collapses, Sieglinde (a soprano but not the lead) enters thinking she has heard her husband, Hunding, return. Naturally she is surprised at an unconscious stranger whom she decides is over-tired. Father-son and not in the least frightened.

Siegmund rouses and asks for a drink of water, which Sieglinde brings immediately. The orchestra (tell there) tells us that not only is she sympathetic but she finds the stranger more than merely interesting. A beautiful solo solo makes the transition from mere sympathy, to love on her part.

She questions Siegmund and finds he has been on the losing side in today's battle, though the loss was the result of superior force rather than lack of bravery. She, too, takes a sip of the water, and Siegmund takes another draught. Now the orchestra tells us that Siegmund is more than slightly interested in Sieglinde.

Nevertheless, he thinks her for her kindness and starts to depart. Sieglinde asks why, and gets the reply that misfortune follows him wherever he goes and he does not want to bring misfortune on someone who has helped him. He goes hastily to the door.

But Sieglinde stops him with the cry, "Stay! You can't bring misfortune to the place where misfortune makes its home!" The orchestra develops the sympathy and love themes as well as a sorrowful one, as Siegmund prepares to await Hunding.

Hunding arrives back-stage quite softly in the orchestra but usually with some noisy chains from a prop man, for no good reason. His motive sounds a little louder and Sieglinde rushes to the door. The orchestra and her actions tell us she is scared to death of her husband.

She opens the door and Hunding is there, as five tubes growl out one of the most graphic portraits in music. We know at once Hunding is craft, overbearing, and nasty. Seeing a strange man, he gives Sieglinde a dirty look. She explains matters.

"You restrained him?" asks

MAKE SURE OF DISCARD BEFORE DRAWING TRUMPS

BY ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Almost all experts in the United States use the weak opening two-bid. An opening bid of two spades, two hearts or two diamonds shows a strong six-card suit in a hand that is not quite worth an ordinary bid of one. (The opening bid of two clubs, reserved for all very powerful hands, will be our subject next week.)

South dealer.
East-West vulnerable.
Opening lead—king of spades.
South's opening bid of two hearts is a typical example of the weak two-bid. If South passed, West would open with one club and would rebid in spades. East and West would bid at least two or three spades, perhaps even four.

West would make 10 tricks at spades, adding up the diamonds to get rid of his two low clubs. South is far better off playing the hand at two hearts, which may well be the case if both East and West are conservative customers. What's more, South can even make his part score.

West opens the king of spades, and East signals encouragement by playing the ace. West continues spades, and South ruffs the third round. Now South must immediately lead a club, postponing the trumps until a more convenient time.

Finishes Works
West plays a low club, and South tries a finesse with dummy's ten. Luck is with declarer, for East must use the king to win the trick. East starts to a diamond, but it is too late to do so.

South wins with the king of diamonds and leads his other club. West steps up with the ace of clubs and leads another diamond, but South ruffs with the king of hearts and draws trumps with the queen and jack.

Partner opens with two hearts (a weak two-bid), and the next player passes. You hold: Spades, Q-9-7-3; Hearts, A-8; Diamonds, Q-10-8-3; Clubs, K-8-4.

What do you say?
Answer: Pass. Partner has less than an ordinary opening bid, and so do you. If you both had opening bids, you would have a game. Since you both pass, you are out of the game.

President who initially favored the bomb delivered to Hiroshima.

But we doubt that Einstein, after the event, ever managed to feel as almost fully hard-boiled about it as Dr. Hook does. He had a right to. And we doubt that Dr. Hook has comforted other scientists who are uneasy, or ended the debate. For our part, we prefer to have the debate in existence, and continuing, than to have all science commander Hoffenberg and his associates under Dr. Hook's special license and oversight.

Traffic Violations Don't Pay

Down in New York City the other night an individual whose name does not appear to be Andrew Harris, was stopped by one of the city's finest because the automobile he was operating had a defective light. After being stopped, he produced a registration of questionable date. Then it developed that there were in the car within a number of checks which had obviously been stolen from the Housing and Development Administration, a large number of identification cards, presenting himself with a wide assortment of different names, and a total of 187 bank passbooks located all over the country and representing a total of some $40,000 on deposit.

This signaled the beginning of an investigation to see whether the New York City headquarters of the Housing and Development Administration, where the apparent thefts by one device or another have apparently reached into the millions and where housing was even extended to Switzerland.

The enormity of these scandals is still to be measured, and commented upon after it has been established.

Meanwhile, it is one small but hardly incidental detail which fascinates us. The probe into the grandiose theft operation itself arrested for a key violation of the traffic laws.

One would think that a criminal clever enough to plot a high speed delivery from a public agency would have brains enough to keep their automobile lights, their registrations, and their own driving techniques in compliance with the law. The trouble seems to be that those engaged in defying the law in mammoth operations are constitutionally unable to do the pedestrian stuff of the law, or the law in little things. This is one of the incalculable the law has on its side. Some of the people it wants most are sure to transfer their way into custody.

One can sympathize with Senator Majority Leader Mansfield in his protest against the super assamblages with which his Democratic colleagues have been driving their own pet dilemmas into the financial conditions of such countries as Nixon appointees are to be allowed to enter office with Senate approval.

The attitude crystallized by the behavior of several Senators in this matter is that no man who has progressed this far in this world is likely to be honest.

There is also a presumption that it has become totally impossible, in this American society of excess, to expect anybody to bring into office a sense of personal conscience and principle strong enough to keep his official conduct and desist from free of personal economic interest.

This is a presumption which, not only denounces and discredits those to whom the possible possession of such conscience and principle is denied, it also denounces and discredits those who hold such a presumption about all their fellow men.

Understand all this without assuming to guarantee there will be no conflict of interest there is a neglected but fundamental truth of great importance. It is that trust, in the end, does not create honesty; that regulation can, it is that no amount of regulation can ever catch up to and restrict the unscrupulous, but that the most consistent on regulation and structure can pour cynicism and fraud on the virtuous who do happen to be among us. If there are good men and women among appointees, the process by which they have been welcomed by the volunteer moralists in the Senate has been one based on the basic assumption that they are potential crooks. This is not only an injustice, in some instances we are sure, to some of these particular individuals, but it is also a potential discouragement to other good citizens who may be asked, by one administration or another in our future, to enter the field of public service.

Dr. Hook's Absolution

Some people argue the possible social responsibility of the scholar and the scientist in his research and his invention, debating whether he should not feel guilty for putting into the hands of mankind some scientific activities that they could may use for barbaric rather than civilized purpose.

Among the scientists themselves, in the age of powers nuclear and perhaps worse, the debate is continual, and the sense of guilt often very strong. Frequently we see scientists devoting much of their non-scientific activities to trying to see to it that some power they themselves have developed is put on the shelf, out of human reach again.

In contrast, there is a certain dawning and reawakening back of concern and worry in the verdict of Professor Sidney Hook, who operates as a philosopher, and who has no hesitancy whatsoever in treating the quality of the discoverers as so much inanimate baby talk.

What Professor Hook has to say on the subject he sums up in one short, powerful paragraph.

"To hold the discoverer or the scholar responsible for the practical uses of knowledge is vitiously absurd," says Dr. Hook. "It is to hold the unknown genius who discovered fire responsible for arson; to blame Gutenberg for the fact that there is type; Galileo for the slide gun; Einstein for Hiroshima."

To have so much certainty gives, if one can imitate it, a comfortable feeling and posture.

But Dr. Hook's inclusion of the Einstein example may seem, on reflection, to weaken his case. Einstein not only performed the pure science which led toward the atomic formula, but actually wrote the letter to the White House which suggested and put in motion the plan to produce the atomic bomb for potential military use. This was pretty strong venturing into the field of "practical uses" on the part of the gentle genius. No doubt he intended to put the weapon into the hands of Roosevelt, not into the hands of the perhaps less sensitive

Along Country Roads With Byrnes Orlans

Inside Report

by Rowland Evans Jr. and Robert D. Novak

WASHINGTON—To the predictable outrage of the anti-Communist far right, their lone representative on the White House staff—Dr. Richard V. Allen—is being quietly submerged in favor of a full professional foreign policy specialist.

Allen, 32, a right-wing pamphleteer and tough political fighter, climbed aboard the Nixon bandwagon early in the campaign and was named as deputy to the highly respected Dr. Henry Kissinger of Harvard in one of the President-elect's first announced appointments.

However, a decision has been made at high levels of the new administration to isolate him from substantive duties. Moreover, Kissinger has quietly assembled a professional staff almost entirely from present Johnson administration officials—that will not mollify Allen's colleagues on the right.

Included among the aides being selected for the Kissinger staff, besides the previously announced Daniel Davidson (presently assistant to Ambassador Averell Harriman), are Mortimer Halperin (an arms control expert) from the Pentagon, and Helmut Sonnenfeldt (Soviet intelligence), Lawrence Eagleburger (Under Secretary Nicholas Katzenbach's office), Richard Snyder (Japanese desk), and Wren Vaky (Latin American affairs) from the State Department. From outside the government, Prof. Robert Osgood of Johns Hopkins is a top prospect to join the staff.

The request for power made by the water company is massive. The firm can now sit back and magnanimously agree to eliminate its own stream and that one and still come out with control of one of the state's major water resources. This time has come for the state to take over the entire state with the exception of areas presently reserved by other firms. When it will agree to eliminate Putnam and East Haven and North Canaan and Greenwich and as few other towns as it can get away with.

The General Assembly should not give away to any private firm the water resources of this state. The time has come for the state to maintain control over the remaining water supply. The time has come for the state to take over the distribution of this most important of all natural resources. Individual cities and individual companies cannot take it upon themselves to grab these resources. They are needed for all of the citizens of the state.

The General Assembly should reject entirely the bid by the Seymour Water Co. or substitute Bridgeport Hydraulic. Instead it should start developing a state-wide commission with power to allocate water in such a way that the best interests of all the citizens are preserved. Citizens should be given the right to participate in the smaller communities with large water resources but no immediate need for them at this time.

This is a time for protection of resources, not for giving them away to any private concern interested in making a profit. Care must also be taken just any private firm set up an interlocking system which would give the state a high profit.

Legislators throughout the state should be concerned. If the Seymour Water Co. (substitute Bridgeport Hydraulic) is a walk off with this franchise, what is to stop it or any other firm from taking another big chunk of the resources of this state? This is a time for caution.

—WATERBURY REPUBLICAN.

Instead of examining Southern political agents, President-elect Nixon has fully backed the Republican National Committee's announced decision to lift its 1969 budget for political work among minorities to a non-election-year record.

The plan, originating with Clarence Townsend, leader of the Citizens' Committee for the Americas, is to spend $175,000 at the National Committee to proselytize Negro and Mexican-Americans for the

Bolton

High School To Give Demerits

Demerits have replaced detentions as a system of discipline at Bolton High School. The new system will see tonight at 8 p.m. in announcing the new method, explaining that "no rules have been changed. We are merely trying to find a way of enforcing discipline. Detentions were an inadequate method." Detentions meant "being kept after school."

The demerit system was worked out by a staff committee and was submitted to the entire faculty three times before final approval. It is based on a study of systems used in other schools, including Manchester High School.

Blaw emphasized that it should not be a static system. "I hope it will be under constant review by faculty and students to be involved."

Under the demerit system parents will be notified if their child has four demerits. Six demerits will put a student on probation (the student cannot take part in extracurricular activities). Eight demerits suspends the student for three days, and he must be accompanied by a parent when he returns to school.

Two demerits may be removed from a student's record if he receives no additional demerits for 30 days or if he improves his academic standing to a full credit course in one full letter grade.

A student can receive one demerit for "continuing failure to follow directions" and unexcused tardiness for three times.

A student who receives two demerits for abusing the pass privilege, absence from class without permission, carrying smoking items, causing minor disturbances in the school rooms and halls to report to the principal.

A student can receive four demerits for missing school parties, "improper language," inappropriate actions or attitudes, and leaving the school building without permission.

Six demerits (automatic suspension) will be given for "violation of school rules."

British Telegraphers Strike for More Pay

LONDON (AP)—More than 3,500 overseas telegraphers struck for more pay today, disrupting cable and telex communications to and from Britain.

Government officials said the strike could have a serious effect on the stock exchange and money markets, trading companies, banks and newspapers.

Tony Jackson, general secretary of the Union of Post Office Workers, told newsmen: "This union was formed in 1971 and it is our first strike. It is very important to us. We are going ahead resolutely, but determined."

The telegraphers are employed by the General Post Office, a government department. It has offered pay increases of 7 per cent, retroactive to last July, in return for measures the union claims would cut out more than 300 jobs.
