What Man Will Do To Do It. The only special moment of increased heart rate during the lunar module's ascent...

prohibition against their entering certain sections of the cities. But the main approach will have to be, if any real progress toward solution is made, that of trying to provide mass transportation so attractive and comfortable and convenient only a fool would try to do his own driving.

It is in connection with the possible effort to provide that kind of mass transit that Secretary Volpe makes a recommendation which might be classified, coming from him, in the administration of Richard Nixon, as mildly revolutionary.

"We ought to get rid of the idea once and for all," said Secretary Volpe recently, "that public transportation must make a profit. Public transportation is so important that we must look at its financing much like any other public service. We don't expect the army to make a profit."

Interestingly, his department has already approved a $3,000,000 grant to help the city of Rochester purchase its local bus lines and new equipment for them.

But the main thing the problem needs is the development and presentation of modes and styles of mass transportation which are something better than any mere clean-up, patch-up work or old existing systems. Our technology ought to be coming through with some interesting results, to involve actually doing anything new. Rather it was in the category of omitting the doing of something, of making a careless assumption that the right answer would happen without having special attention paid to it. Something was taken for granted.

Because what was supposed to be the moon trip was exposed to his moment of human fallibility. There was a quick human correction, but the remaining weakness in human endeavor had been spotted: the computer is flawless, the human mind and spirit are not.

For these space trips, the human beings involved, in land control as well as in the space itself, are trained and honed in the human ultimate in sharpness and fitness. They are the best of human beings, those moon voyagers of ours, these control center commanders. But they can still make the slight but potentially costly error of assuming that they do not have to repeat, on their list of things to do, a simple small action, the throwing of one switch, which they have done so many times before that they think it has become second nature with them.

It is the inflexible computer and fallible man, from here on in, for our space voyaging, and perhaps, in a larger sense, for our civilization. The computer will do precisely what we remember to tell it to do. It will execute wonders we design, but which we could never otherwise process toward any action of reality.

What this really means, in terms both philosophical and real, is that what really determines if a man can do it, his continuing imperfection, his continuing frailty, may constitute precisely of his continual assumption that there are some steps in the program of man which can be omitted, or swept under the rug, or taken for granted, without having any special effect on the general forward movement of civilization. We are now, sociologically and politically, in the midst of gyrations such as those which shook the lunar capsule last week, primarily, perhaps, because we have, at various times, told ourselves it was not absolutely necessary to pay full attention to the kind of programming which continuously and incessantly keeps the viable balance in the affairs and relationships of our journeying together.

The Transit Problem. Early reports on the Nixon Administration's approaches to the problem of urban traffic jam are encouraging, for they say that, despite Transportation Secretary Volpe's reputation as a roadblocker, his experts have really been concentrating on the development of mass transit as the only feasible formula for relief of the cities.

Not more roads to accommodate more automobiles, but more and better facilities to persuade people to leave their automobiles outside the cities—this is the approach reported.

One way Mr. Volpe's department has revealed its direction is in the nature of the grants it has been making for mass transit projects. One $200,000 grant is for study of a proposed system of moving sidewalks in Boston. Another $200,000 has been allocated to a planned demonstration of pollution-free elevated bus lanes in San Francisco. And the department has made a $200,000 grant for the purchase of new commuter cars for the Illinois Central Railroad's service into Chicago.

One thing being discussed is a tax on cars entering cities, or an outright prohibition against their entering certain sections of the cities. But the main approach will have to be, if any real progress toward solution is made, that of trying to provide mass transportation so attractive and comfortable and convenient only a fool would try to do his own driving.

Connecticut Yankee

By A.H.O.

Being new to the State Senate, and therefore not yet broken in to its comfortable way of doing business, Roger Batey of Newington raised a mild bit of opposition the other day. A bill had just come up for action on the Senate calendar, and the Senator to whom had fallen the task of moving the passage had consented himself with saying it was a "self-explanatory" good bill which should pass when Senator Batey rose to his feet and began with this impetuous observation:

"Self-explanatory or not, I would like to oppose it." He then proceeded, himself, briefly to explain the bill, and the Senate something of what it was in the bill.

That was the second time within a few brief moments that the mere statement that a bill was "self-explanatory" had been offered as the only reason for opposing it.

A little later in the same afternoon, a committee chairman moved the passage of a bill which contained a provision that "this is a good bill and ought to pass" without describing what the bill did.

Twice again during the Senate session, a senator's explanation of a bill it was passing, the explanation was a "housekeeping" measure, by which is meant, apparently, a bill which takes up the language and meaning in existing legislation.

On another occasion, a committee chairman said of a bill to be passed that it was "self-explanatory" and that it was "not what it did about the problem."

At later in the same session, the Senate listened gravely and obediently while one of its members proclaimed that it was "self-explanatory" and that it was "not what it did about the problem."

In Federal Taxes

(Continued from Page One) Informal, meeting of minds on the tax-writing committee. President Nixon announced some tax crackerjacks April 21 in urging extension of the 19 percent income surtax after June 30. He said administration proposals for a more complete overhaul would come until later in the year.

The committee had been waiting impatiently for Nixon's tax message so it could get started on reforms. "There is no Democratic or Republican way of delivering the mail," he said. "There is only the right way."

Blount said there would be a five-year period as a reasonable time for instituting the reorganization. During this "period of grace," he said, the system would not have to be entirely self-sustaining.

He said the financing arrangement calls for the system to be able to leave $1 billion in Treasury-guaranteed bonds.

The proposed scheme includes a provision to give employees the right to negotiate with management, over wages and working conditions, and Blount said he had discussed this feature with the various postal unions.

"While they haven't formally agreed, they are in the process of doing so," he said. "We have had very fruitful discussions."

The provision, he added, calls for a "fair and impartial mechanism" to resolve negotiating disputes. He repeatedly emphasized that plan is pending in Congress.

Blount said he took the Capitol Hill, along with several other members of the committee, to see the new post office jobs from the political patronage system. Nixon's bill to implement that plan is pending in Congress.

David Williams Selected
For Town Board Vacancy

David Williams of 14 Reed St., was named last night by the Democratic Town Committee to fill a vacancy on the Board of Representatives. The board will be called, as a normal, to approve the re-constitution of the town.

David Williams

Williams will take the vacancy created by the resignation last week of Democratic board member, Thomas McCusker. McCusker resigned due to the pressure of business.

At last night's meeting, McCusker placed Williams' name in nomination. When McCusker was appointed he had the board's approval. Williams' name had also been placed in nomination at that time.

Williams is presently serving as a member of the Board of Selectmen. That board's only official duty since consolidation is to admit selectmen. Williams will resign from that post and the next town committee meeting.

Mayor Lavit, a member of the town committee, spoke in recognition of the work done by McCusker, who was also the first Mayor of the new consolidated town government.

He also expressed the hope that McCusker would be back in government soon. McCusker has said he does not intend, at this time, to run again for the post of mayor.

Norman Freus, parade chairman, is arranging the line of march. Public meeting to be held at 7 in the town office.

Parade will begin at about 10 a.m. Friday at the elementary school and proceed to the Green for tea-agers. Roy Bona, park and recreation committee chairman, is arranging the line of march. Public meeting to be held at 7 in the town office.

Vernon

Non-Graded Classes Termed A Success - Extension Asked

The non-graded program, instituted in two Vernon elementary schools this year, is regarded as very successful and it is hoped that it will be extended to other schools in the district.

The program was tried this year in the Maple Street and Northeast schools and involved Grades 1-4. The two principals at the schools involved, Andrew Managetta and Joseph Bellis, explained the philosophy, definition of levels and other facets of the pilot program last night.

The program also needs professional help or special teacher aides, Bellis said. These aides would have to be special aides, not the type now used for recess periods, would help when a teacher is absent and also be used for tutorial purposes.

The program also needs port cards. The ungraded areas are marked B, excellent; S, satisfactory; U, unsatisfactory. The other subject areas are marked in the traditional A, B, C, D, manner.

Have we got a choice of savings plans to suit him!

No two people are exactly alike. People like to have a choice. Like the choice of savings plans at Hartford National. As an example, you might be the kind of person who wants to have a savings account but doesn't have the time or willpower to sustain it. For you we have Automatic Savings. Or maybe you have extra cash and want to make the most of it. Then you might select Preferred Savings or Growth Bonds or a number of other savings plans we have available. Just remember that Hartford National isn't a take it or leave it bank. It's the choice bank!
