"The myth of the melting pot has becured the great degree to which Americans have historically identified with their national citizenship through heir myriad subnational affiliations This has meant inevitable group comsetition, friction and conflict."

Aside from these two observations, the cholars offer statistical evidence about our addiction to violence. In the long or peoples are, of course, less given to violence than their betters. What is perthe moment is that it has not joined in what seems to be a modern decline of violence among its civilized western

As the scholars put it: "The grievances and satisfactions of violence have so reinforced one another that we have become a rather bloodyminded people in both action and rection. We are likely to remain so as long as so many of us think violence is an ultimate solution to social problems." Although the scholars thus concede the heavy proportion of violence in our past, and its probably continuation in our future, they never concede it very much effect in any situation where the nation itself is substantially divided. However necessary violence may seem to one egment or another in the day of its own oppression, the scholars find that violence as a technique is more likely to breed more reaction and repression than it fosters gain. Progress usually comes when a persistent appeal to reason and justice replaces the resort to the brick or the club. The basic cure lies not so much in sermons to ourselves, as in getting ourselves busy about eliminating those injustices and oppressions which goad people into thinking that violence is a justified technique, and sometimes an

But meanwhile, perhaps we should, for a time, stop thinking of ourselves as the most civilized nation in the history of the world, and imagine what our judgment would be if we saw the facts and statistics of our own behavior set before us as the record of some other nation.

Of course, we are not "bloodyminded." Many of us hate the sight of blood, except when it is being given to others. But what we do and feel as individuals, and what comes out as the action of ourselves as a group or as a nation are not always one and the same thing. This difference between our individual decency and our occasional collective barbarism demands some searching of souls, to find out why the individual decency so often yields to, or allows itself to be engulfed by, the col-

During the session of ASPAC, the Asian and Pacific Council, at Tokyo this week, Carlos Romulo, the foreign secretary of the Philippines, and often good the actual policy decisioning of the conference, which was very little, and newsworthy primarily in its omissions. What it omitted to do, this ASPAC, was to develop any resounding conation of Communium, express anything more than "deep sympathy" for fouth Vietnam, or evidence any readiness to join together in doing anything which recognised North Korea, China, or North Vistnam as enemies. This, for an organization United States diplomacy encouraged into being on the theory that if might gradually evolve into another regional alliance against mmunism, or at least into some united backing for American policies in Asia, was a neglect close to heresy. In actuality, the conduct of this conference did even worse. The foreign minister of Japan, who presided at the conference, even suggested that North Korea, mainland China and North Vietnam might some day become members of the Council. The foreign minister of Thailand, the country we regard as our most dependable ally on the Asian mainland, and the one we have favored with our large military installations, talked about the possibility of talking with Communist Chins, in the hope of finding "mockus vivendi." Only Chiang Kaiseemed to have real fight left for the theory that Communism must be smashed instead of merely tolerated or deal with. Even Australia's foreign minister referred to the present day role of Rus sia in Southeast Asia as "an expression of their desire to play the role of a global power, a phenomenon of diplomacy and

The Decline Of Laughter

Though it is sometimes said that ours is an immoral or at least an amoral generation, this is manifestly untrue. would be far closer to the truth to say that we are too moral, too judgmental too condemning. The photographs of campus confrontations and violence normally depict those who are "angry." 'Professor faces trate students" is a standard headline. Always there is some claim about injustice or unfairness, and the faces in the photographs are contorted by bitterness. If there is any pleasure, it is the pleasure of demunciwhat is lacking is laughter! Since the issues in the confrontation are uniformly simple, in the eyes of the receives the most publicity is strikingly similar to that of John Brown at Harpers Ferry. The ones who are featured the headlines are not marked by a lack of concern for morals, but by that the essence of fanaticism. We are, in fact, plagued by an inverted Puritan

The lack of humor is abundantly evident in contemporary student assemblies. The speaker, in addressing a thou sand students, employs an approach which has appealed to many other student generations as very funny, but only a small minority now laughs. The others is not that they have heard the joke before; it is simply a failure to respond to subtle approaches to the truth. Violent attack is a different matter and this brings instant response, but dull people are not made wise simply by becoming

The decline of laughter is not merely an evidence of the widely publicized "generation gap." Indeed, there is grave doubt whether the generation gap so often mentioned exists at all. Though there is always some difficulty in communication between different ages of human beings, this is not now the chief roblem. What has appeared is an "idea gap." I realize how nearly independent of age this is when I encounter the enormous difficulty of communication between groups of the same age. I feel actually closer in thought to some persons of twenty than to some of my own

The decline of laughter appears to depend on nothing more profound than the recognition that ours is an imperfect world. Why this should be a shocking discovery, I have no idea, but it seems to be such to many in our generation Much of the problem is really philo sophical. Millions have imbibed the sentimental idea of natural human goodness and have really expected Utopia right around the corner. When it does not come, they are angry in their disappointment and begin to indulge in harsh judgment of others. The emphasis, accordingly, is always on other people's sins, but never on our own. If only the establishment could be changed or replaced, then the problem would be solved! But, of course, it is not solved. In the progress of the French Revolution the establishment was displaced, all right, but what ensued was a reign

What we need in our time is a mature realism which makes us understand that the human predicament is with us to rtay. We shall not eliminate sin in others and we shall not eliminate it in ourselves. We shall not achieve Utopia in universities or anywhere else, though we can make some things relatively better than they are. Meanwhile we are wise to learn again to laugh, primarily at ourselves .- D. ELTON TRUEBLOOD QUAKER AUTHOR AND PHILOSO-PHER WRITING IN QUAKER LIFE. PUBLISHED BY THE FRIENDS UNIT-

"That Lindsay is a stiff," said a comely housewife. "He's sold out to the blacks." Racial fears, in fact, were at the heart of the venomous attacks we heard on two successive evenings in the quiet, lower-middle income neighborhoods of East Bronx. Race, more than any other complaint, explained the fact that, of the 47 voters, fully 31 gave Lindsay a "poor" rating at best ("Don't you have a better word than poor?" exploded one voter). In sharp contrast 33 of these same registered Republicans or "excellent" rating and 19 so rated Gov. Nelson Rockfeller.

Accordingly, the political raw material for a Marchi sweep of ethnic Italians was in abun dant evidence. But Marchi's that he cannot exploit a political situation tailer-made for a major upset. Few of our 47 voters knew anything about him. Moreover, Marchi ironically suffers from the happenstance that Mario Procaccino, now city controller, is running for mayor in the Democratic primary. If hearts of ethnic Italians, it is the hard-lining, law-and-order Procaccino, particularly in his own heartland of East Bronx.

ESTATE 649-5241 963 MAIN STREET, MANCHESTER

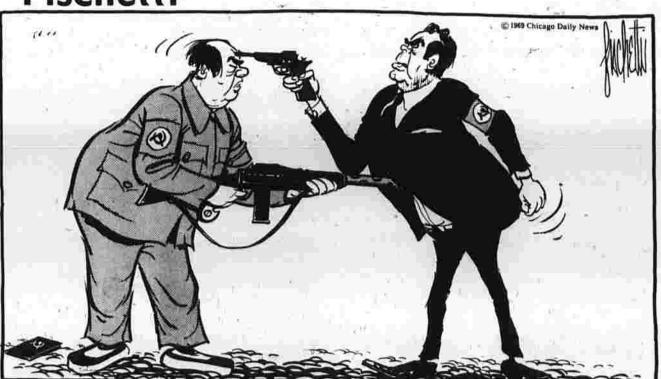

We keep telling people that 65 is a golden age and they keep telling us about retirement checks that don't go too far.

So we're introducing a new service to help stretch retirement budgets. It's called Complimentary-65 Checking Accounts. And it means exactly what it implies. If you're 65 or over there's no service charge of any kind on this new CBT checking service. Complimentary-65 Checking Accounts mean that you can pay everything by check and never worry about monthly or by-the-check service charges of any kind. There's no minimum balance required and you get free, personalized checks. You can even deposit your entire retirement check by mail and then write checks for everything: cash, groceries, rent, etc. We'd like all senior citizens to take advantage of this new service. And it's yours for the asking.

My first favorite is the money it saves me.

l just love the Great Indoors . . . especially since Bryant gas air conditioning came into my life. Now my summers at home are cool, quiet and so very comfortable. And the air is fresh and clean. Bryant gas air conditioning wrings out humidity . . . filters out dust, dirt and pollen, too. There are no major moving parts in the cooling system, so there's less to wear out . . . less to service. Gas air conditioning can cool any home. And if you're adding gas air conditioning to a gas warm air heating system, you enjoy Fresh Air Living all year, In winter, you're cozy and warm and the air is humidified for comfort and health. In summer, you're cool with Bryant. Special low rates from May 15 to October 15 on gas for air conditioning and all other gas uses in the home, make it a beautiful bargain. For a free estimate on gas air conditioning, call your local Bryant dealer or CNG in Hartford (525-0111) or New Britain (223-2774), Cool it.

following a four-hour town meeting last week. No final ac tion was taken at that meeting to the board.

The meeting left no doubt in the minds of board members that residents wanted the budget reduced and the mill increase kept to a minimum.

A new town meeting will be held tomorrow night at 7:30 at the Vernon Center Middle School. The board will then meet to set the mill rate if the budget is approved. Held on Murder Charge
