Honduras Charges Cease Fire Breach

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
El Salvador and Honduras agreed provisionally to halt their war at dawn today but Honduras charged its neighboring country with breaking the cease-fire about two hours later by opening fire on the western front.

A government spokesman in Tegucigalpa, Honduras' capital, said the Honduran forces at Nuevo Ocotepique returned the fire.

Up to that time, prospects had appeared good for a halt to the fighting that had been under a cease-fire which both nations would respect.

Foreign Minister Francisco Jose Guerrero of El Salvador said the temporary cease-fire orders had been sent to commanders on both sides to withdraw from the Salvadoran front.

Some of these fronts is around Nuevo Ocotepique. A Honduran spokesman said Thursday the Salvadoran aim in that direction was to serve as a base for a drive northward to Honduras' Caribbean coast.

Honduras and El Salvador had agreed to a temporary cease-fire Wednesday night, but this collapsed Thursday. Honduras' spokesman said the OAS negotiated without letup in the capital of the two countries, and late Thursday night OAS Secretary-General Golo Fias announced in Washington that El Salvador and Honduras had agreed to a basis for a negotiated settlement.

The peace plan calls for a cease-fire accompanied by the withdrawal of all Salvadoran troops for the safety of the more than 27,000 Salvadorans living in Honduras, and the stationing of OAS observers in both countries to guard against violations.

Golo Fias said a team headed by OAS Council Chairman Carlos Holguin of Colombia was working through the night on a draft of resolutions for ending the conflict.

The resolutions were expected to be voted on in Washington today by the OAS Council. Holguin's group was in constant telephone communication with the OAS peacekeepers shuttling back and forth between San Salvador and Tegucigalpa, the capitals of the two warring nations.

While the negotiating went on, El Salvador's larger, better equipped army made new advances in western and southern Honduras Thursday, and the Hondurans said their little air force hit back at several points.

There was no official word on casualties in the four-day-old war, but informants in Tegucigalpa said close to 1,000 Hondurans had been killed or wounded. The Honduran government rarely begins broadcasting results of soldiers killed.

Birth Control Advice Proposed by Nixon

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Nixon told Congress today he wants to make available within five years free birth control advice to American women of child-bearing age with low incomes.

In a special message, Nixon estimated that nearly 8 million U.S. women do not have adequate access to family planning assistance.

"Proposing an expansion and reorganization of federal family planning services, but giving no estimate of the increased spending involved, Nixon said:

"I believe it is in the national interest to make available to all women of child-bearing age with low incomes the services and information which are necessary to help them decide if and when to have children.

"To expand family planning services, Nixon said, the secretary of health, education and welfare, Goldwater, should be authorized to make available to all women of child-bearing age with low incomes the services and information which are necessary to help them decide if and when to have children.

"The chief executive in the 5,000 word document, sketched out a rather bold picture of the potential impact of the global population explosion if governments, private agencies and the United Nations fail to begin dealing now with anticipated problems.

In the United States alone, the population will increase nearly 50 million by the year 2000, he predicted.

Pointing to just one consequence of the expected population growth, Nixon said: "If we fail to accommodate the full 100 million persons in new communities, we would have to build a new city of 200,000 persons each month from now until the end of the century."

Saying this was an advance plan "in growing very short," he asked Congress to make a Commission on Population Growth and the American Future.

The panel would study population trends, evaluate government action, and make recommendations with a larger population and study ways in which population growth would affect the federal, state and local governments.

Highlights Of Moon Trip

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP)—Here are highlights of Apollo 11's second and third days in space, all times Eastern Daylight.

The day ahead:

Astronauts Neil A. Armstrong, Edwin E. Aldrin Jr. and Michael Collins awake from a 10-hour rest period at 8:30 a.m. and eat a breakfast of peaches, bacon squares, apricot cereals and grape and orange drinks.

After a morning of little activity they eat lunch at 1:30 p.m. and then eat a dinner of turkey, key with gravy, fruit drink and cheese cracker cubes.

"We're very comfortable up here," Collins said Thursday.

"We do have a happy home. There's a plenty of room for the three of us and I think we're all getting used to it."

Collins said weightlessness is comfortable, "but after a while you get to the point where you're sort of tired of rattling around and banging off the ceiling and the floor and the sides."

So you just "find a little corner and keep your feet on it and the floor and the ceiling and the sides." Collins said.

During Thursday evening's television viewing how the astronauts look through TV screens on a tour of the planet.

"Well, it looks like it's about 11:30 a.m. when mission control made the first call and read them the morning news. Aldrin said he got 1/2 hours sleep. Armstrong and Collins each got seven."

They gave a weather report of earth, noting clouds over Houston, where it was raining, and predicting the sky would soon begin clearing, which it did.

Shortly after noon, they triggered their main spacecraft engine for the first time since lift-off and put Apollo 11 on a more perfect path toward the moon.

Lunch consisted of salmon salad and a fruit drink. Collins said he found a new way to load coffee-put the cup against some equipment which was warm.

They exercised by jogging in place while ground controllers monitored their heartbeats.

A thirty-five minute telecast with the Apollo 11 mission that began at 11:22 p.m. EDT tonight, just their appointed wakeup time.

While the astronauts slept, their spaceship hurtled toward a so-called "twilight zone" in which the gravitational influence of the earth and moon is about equal.

"How do all our systems look?" Edwin E. Aldrin Jr. asked on waking.

"They're looking great," Collins replied from the ground.

Aldrin, Neil A. Armstrong and Michael Collins had rested 11 hours, spanning an entire shift of controllers.

The old black team is complaining that they didn't have a chance to make any transmissions during the night, mission control said. "Ron Evans is getting a little more than an hour's sleep."

Astronaut Evans is the capsule communicator for the overnight or black shift.

Both Countries Badly Damaged

By ELOY O. AGUILAR Associated Press Writer
MEXICO CITY (AP)—Mexico may have set up its own permanent damage to the Central American Common Market.

Honduras, the smallest but most industrialized country in Central America, has lost its main export, coffee, to El Salvador and Costa Rica are the other two members of the Central American Common Market.

The economies of both countries will suffer. The common market of history, culture and language may not be strong enough to eliminate the hatred growing from the graves in the two countries.

Both Honduras and El Salvador were in a process of economic growth, at a rate close to 7 per cent annually, spurred by their active participation in the Central American Common Market.

Nine Vetoes Target Of State Democrats

MERIDEN, Conn. (AP)—On the amount of money to be spent for legislative staff and studies "with no required reporting of expenditures to any committee."

The other bills the House leaders recommend include: giving cities and towns the option to allow Sunday bar closings at 11 p.m. instead of the current limit of 8 p.m.; setting workmen's compensation payments on a cost-of-living basis; increasing Circuit Court judges' salaries; and giving accused persons the right to counsel during grand jury hearings.

Other vetoed bills favored by the House leaders are measures: to give accused persons the right to examine statements made by witnesses; to require that public service companies give first option to local communities rather than the state — when selling land owned by the companies; to award additional damages when highway condemnation proceedings are delayed.

Dempsey's veto message last month said the bills no curbs

Against the Mexican empire of Agustin de Iturbide in 1821. But their separation into individual nations in 1841 began their differences over territory.

Minor at first, they became important, then insuperable as they next door with five times as many people as the logical destination for immigrants.

It is estimated that more than 300,000 Salvadorans reside in Honduras most in farming lands.

At this and the potential for increased economic cooperation have been trumped by the two clashing armies.

It is said in Latin America that nothing can be as bitter as the fight between two brothers.

Reconciliation are extremely difficult, and may be the case between Honduras and El Salvador, two geographic and historic brothers who started their war of independence from Spain in 1821 as a single province.

Primarily an agricultural country, Honduras sold many of its new products to Salvadorans.

Producers from the five countries moved on truck convoys through Salvador and Honduras.

Dehydrated food, weightlessness, a picture window view of the earth, sleeping under the Apollo-11 astronaut.

How Crew Will Talk To World

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP)— The first man to leave Neil A. Armstrong's words from the lunar surface will be Apollo 11 astronaut Edwin E. Aldrin Jr.

Aldrin will have the jump on the world for less than two seconds—the time it will take man's first words from the moon to reach earth.

Armstrong's message must be relayed to the world through an antenna aboard the lunar landing craft, where Aldrin will be listening before he steps out on the lunar surface.

At 11:22 p.m. EDT tonight, the moon will win the gravitational tug-of-war and Apollo 11 will be in the grip of the moon's gravity. The astronauts will be 24,000 miles from earth, 214,000 miles from their shrinking home planet.

Once across this line Apollo 11's speed will increase from about 2,000 to 8,000 miles an hour as the pilots sweep toward the moon.

Apollo commander Neil A. Armstrong's home is on a street traveled frequently by heavy trucks during Thursday by the Johnson Space Center's electrical power plant.

Well-Slept Crew Nearing Target

USSR Says Luna Path No Threat

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP)— The Soviet Union has given American space officials assurance that the orbit of its Luna 16 would not interfere with the flight of Apollo 11, astronaut Frank Borman said today.

The Soviet response was received from here, relayed by Borman, gave no hint of whether the Luna spacecraft would make a landing.

In a cable from academicians M. V. Kelyayev, president of the Soviet Academy of Sciences, Borman was told that the Luna orb would not "intersect the published trajectory" of Apollo 11 and that Soviet officials would inform Borman if there were any changes.

Earthly Problems Beseet Home Front

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP)— The near-perfect smoothness of the flight of Apollo 11 so far has been marred by a series of problems on the home front.

Tuesday night, before the launch, a dozen thunderstorms blew down a big shade tree beside Michael Collins' front door.

Michael Spacemaster Center officials sent an emergency call to Nassau Bay city workers, who had the backery tree sawed into fireplace wood within a few hours.

On the same day, workmen started digging a swimming pool behind a house adjacent to the backery tree would be used in a short land and drain.

First, the workers cut into an underground electric power cable. A work crew hurriedly dug up the cable, and the narrow space in front of the house would be used in a short land and drain.

Then, the neighbors complained about the noise of the backery tree sawing.

Jack Hand gets the lowdown from Red Schoendienst.

OUR WINNING HAND

JACK HAND is one of The Associated Press byline writers covering sports for this newspaper. He's typical of the talented world-wide AP staff that brings you perceptive accounts of sports events and the people who make them—on and off the field.

Jack writes with the expert's knowledge on almost any sport, but specializes in baseball, football and boxing. He's on first-name basis with great and small in those fields. Why not? Jack's been writing national and international sports for AP since 1943. That's before some of today's stars were born.

Whether it's a season opener, World Series or Superbowl, a title fight, an international contest in some far-off land—AP sports experts are there to report not only who won, but why. Watch for their stories in...

Marines Get 'Combat Fatigue' Keeping Up with Pfc. Smith

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—Marines in a U.S. Marine who has spent most of his time of late in the jungles and camps. The U.S. government says he has been trying to launch his own mini-war.

In the past five months, Smith has been a deers twice, charged with murder once, arrested in a secret jungle training camp and accused of trying to invade his homeland—the Caribbean island nation of Haiti.

Smith's background is as elusive as he is. The Marine Corps says Smith—still a private first class after four years in uniform—has deserted three times. His most recent escape, the Marines say, came last April at Camp Lejeune, N. C., while he was under guard and wearing handcuffs.

Now he is in the Duke County Jail at Miami, charged with conspiracy to launch a military expedition against a friendly country—Haiti.

Smith has been unable to raise $50,000 bond. Even if he could, though, he faces a hold order on the desertion charge.

Smith and eight other men are charged with attempting to invade Haiti, the country where Smith was born 22 years ago. And Haiti has been connected with all of his recent brushes with the law.

The latest episode began when a car-borne posse followed a dead man's trail deep into the Florida Everglades last March 13. Monroe County Sheriff Robert Brown said the posse found 12 heavily armed men training with live ammunition in a jungle camp. Eugene Maximilien, the Haitian consul general in Miami, said the camouflage-clad men were training to invade his country.

A day before the raid, Florida Highway Patrol troopers answering a telephone report of a shooting 50 miles deep in the swampy wilds of the Everglades, found a car carrying Gerald D. Baker, a Haitian who had been shot in the chest. He was dead on arrival at a Miami hospital.

Duplets swarmed into the area. Smith and the 11 other men surrounded without a fight. The posse seized 18 pistols, 18 rifles and a collection of knives.

A murder charge was lodged against Smith and accessory complaints against the other men. But a coroner's jury empaneled in the Florida Keys ruled Baker was killed "by a person or persons unknown." The charges against Smith and his companions were dropped.

Monroe County Detective Sgt. A. C. Vidal testified at the hearing that Baker was shot during a practice skirmish at the exile guerrilla training site. Vidal said shots were fired by men practicing as an attack force and men acting as an ambush squad.

After the murder charge was dropped, Smith was handed over to the Marine Baracks at the naval air station in Key West. He traveled through a series of brigades to Camp Lejeune where he had been missing since February. Smith arrived on a charge of conducting activities against the Haitian government, the records show.

A special court-martial sentenced Smith to two months at hard labor and loss of pay for being AWOL and violating Haiti without authorization.

Leathernecks joke among themselves that there are two kinds of Marines, those in Vietnam and those on their way. The 6-foot, 175-pound Smith started a Vietnam tour but it ended prematurely with a medical evacuation to a New York hospital. The Marine Corps does not explain his injuries, but a spokesman said they were not combat wounds.

Smith did a brief hospital tour and then was shipped to Camp Lejeune last August. Six months later he went over to the island of the Florida Everglades and the jungle camp.

A Marine spokesman says the corps now is interested in Smith's activities.

"He's never stayed in a comforter and promoting anybody to know they own him," one of the records will get careful study.

"The guy's never stood still long who he is, what he is doing and all."

But Duke County authorities say Smith's running days are over, at least for a while. Lt. William Armstrong of the jail staff said, "We're a maximum security jail as long as we can help it."

State Employees Benefit in Lift Of Wage-Freeze

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP)—About 11,000 state employees will share salary increases totaling $483,000 per year beginning this month as a result of the lifting of a year-long salary freeze.

The action Thursday by the State Personnel Policy Board reaches mostly to inspectors in the areas of consumer protection, pharmacology, motor vehicles, liquor, public utilities, aeronautics, optics, hairdressing, highways, health, taxes and unemployment.

In other sections, the board adopted new standards for considering future requests for salary readjustments. It will limit the judgment on Personnel Department recommendations to whether the increase is "proper and equitable from a salary classification standpoint." It will also consider recommendations only twice a year—in December and January.

Salaries had been frozen as a result of the state financial budget-cutting program.

The board called on the Department of Finance and Control to determine if funds available to cover future salary increases. The legislature has made about $2.6 million available for this purpose to cover 42,000 employees.

Chief Sob Gets in Stew Over Stew Cooked by SOT

McCLEARY, Wash. (AP)—So who wants to pick a pot of bear stew?

Well, a Seattle private detective, Winward L. Olson, 42, who calls himself the Chief SOB, says his group plans to do just that—all in the name of bear preservation.

It's all part of this Saturday's annual McCleary Bear Festival when the Save Our Bears (SOB) members, led by Olson, square off against the Save Our Trees members.

"We're dead serious," Olson claims. "We will be marching around the stew pot—we probably will have 10 or 12 pickets."

The festival, highlighted by the bear feed, is sponsored by the SOB, a local group that claims the bears are eating up the forest and destroying the timber.

Olson's group is opposed to killing bears by professional hunters and in shovels later today and tonight. Visibility 5 miles or more Saturday except lower during showers.

Worth Every Billion Of It

That is the question even the most enthusiastic proponents of space exploration usually have some trouble answering. They answer in the affirmative, all right. They have trouble making their supporting reasons sound practical and convincing. And they fail, a little, before the assumption that these perhaps nebulous, unproved benefits from $24,000,000,000 spent in getting a man to the moon could be replaced by more precise, tangible results—no many houses, so many illnesses prevented or cured, so many stomachs a little fuller—if the same billions had been spent on taking care of a few basic needs down here on Earth.

There is never going to be any real decision in this debate. This page happens to feel that, even were the attempt to prove a tragic, final failure, the $24,000,000,000 has been well spent.

But the main argument in that direction has to veer away from the usual efforts to justify the moon trip. It has already produced all kinds of tangible scientific benefits and may lead on to many more—and go back to the old philosophical observation that man doesn't live by bread, or by housing, or by health alone.

Man lives by spirit and imagination. And we would point out, apologetically and respectfully, that the ordinary mortal's spirit and imagination are stimulated and inspired much more by the prospect of a man walking on the moon than they ever could be or ever will be by some grand humanitarian concept of a world in which nobody is ever hungry again. The eager willingness of the ordinary mortal to accept of the moon and leave nearby earthly problems behind, to seek and achieve perfection in the manufacture of moon travel hardware does not demand for his own ride down to the common, the familiar, the credit of man. But it reflects rather truly and accurately the kind of creature he is, the kind of choice he likes to make. Let him have his moon flag, if he wants to afford it. We feel he does.

And it may be that the best way to persuade man that he can really afford, in addition to the moon, a somewhat faster pace in improvements in his living here on Earth is to let him see how much he has spent on the moon, without hurting.

The Atmosphere Is Picky
 It's not an easy matter, even for practical politicians, to function successfully in the supercharged atmosphere of present day Washington.

Government Is A Drag
 Let's be honest—government of, by, and for the people is a drag. Not only is it real work taking a turn at various local offices, it is a chore just going to the polls to elect officers to these posts. We don't have to do it. There are those sitting around the county courthouse waiting for township government to fold up and silently fade away. There are those in Springfield who would be delighted to get complete control of the schools. And it goes without saying that there are some persons in Washington who would like to run the whole shebang.

Secretary Laird was being persistent, urged by Senator Gore of Tennessee, a dove who was trying to find out whether, despite all the current administration acknowledgments of de-escalation by the enemy in Vietnam, our troops were still under orders to maintain presence as usual on all fronts.

Secretary Laird obviously didn't want to give this a yes or no answer, perhaps because he didn't know, perhaps because it is a matter of policy under review at this very moment. At any rate, in one of his roll-out attempts to escape from Senator Gore and also please him, Secretary Laird said this:

"I fervently hope that the day will come when peace can be restored in Vietnam. I think we've certainly turned the corner."
 That might, in another city in another time, have seemed an innocent enough remark.
 But "turned the corner" headlines flourished all over the nation. Secretary Laird's tentative pious hope was somehow translated into a military appraisal, or an administration pronouncement. Suddenly there seemed to be too much prominence too much optimism, given to the Laird statement.
 What happened next? A "Pentagon spokesman" volunteered to supply context and meaning for the Laird remark. It certainly never seemed to be in its original utterance. The secretary, the spokesman said, was not really talking about having turned any corner to "peace" but merely about having turned the corner toward giving more responsibility for the war over to the Vietnamese themselves.
 It has to be an off-balance world, no matter how truly it aims at the moon, to give such a remark so much original importance and interpretation, or to consider official re-interpretation necessary. Less talk, more doing, that's the need.

Inside Report
 by Rowland Evans Jr. and Robert D. Novak

WASHINGTON—While formal proceedings droned on in languorous debate over the anti-ballistic missile, the real action in the Senate Tuesday afternoon was in the rear of the chamber where mercenary Sen. Russell B. Long of Louisiana was in a white-hot rage.
 In a pungent voice often louder than the Senate debaters themselves, Long gave vent to his anger with the Senate Democratic leadership in general and Majority Whip Edward M. Kennedy in particular. His audience? Aides seated along the benches. As chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, Long roared, he was being eclipsed by the Kennedy-dominated Senate Democratic Policy Committee in setting tax strategy. Never before had a senior standing committee chairman, he complained, been so mistreated by his party's leadership.
 When he took the floor himself later that afternoon, Long made the same points in subdued form. Responding to a speech by Kennedy, opposing Senate passage of the 10 percent surtax extension until tax reform also is on the floor, Long spoke less of substantive tax questions than about the Policy Committee's taking over Finance Committee prerogatives.
 Long's anger shows that the confused jockeying over President Nixon's surtax extension has non-economic implications rooted in internal Senate politics.
 The tax issue resumes the bitter Democratic dispute of last January when Kennedy unseated Long as majority whip. More important, it dramatizes the effect by Majority Leader Mike Mansfield and Kennedy to challenge the feudal sovereignty of committee chairmen with leadership more attuned to national politics.
 What gives these maneuverers their distinctive tension is the importance of the tax fight. As weeks roll by with Senate action on the surtax blocked by Mansfield-Kennedy demands for reform, there will be political repercussions between the Nixon administration and the Senate Democratic leadership over who is responsible for soaring market prices. The political stakes are high and the risks immense.
 The origins of this confrontation are mundane enough. Whip House, Mansfield and Kennedy decided early this year that the Senate Democratic leadership had to take a stand on issues. The forum they chose: the virtually unopposed Democratic Policy Committee.
 Whatever it was supposed to do when created in 1946, the committee's only useful function has been mechanically

The New Taxes
 To the Editor,
 Being the father of four children, earning approximately $9,400 per year, I expect that the new tax program added to the present cost of living in this area will make it near impossible to adequately meet the needs of my family.
 It was my observation that the Democratic majority supported the bill only to get home at a reasonable hour. I still can not believe that honest lawmakers would "rape" the taxpayers of Connecticut for this reason.
 Taxation is inevitable, but I feel that a state income tax would be fairer than the program which has been approved. I am no politician, no tax expert; therefore my comments may appear naive.
 My point in discussion is the case of two employees at Pratt & Whitney Aircraft (buyers, like myself) who earn $14,000 annually. Mr. A has a family of 6 (my case again) for which he spends $5,000 a year in food and clothing. His state sales tax would amount to approximately $200.00. Mr. B has a family of 3 for which he spends approximately $4,000 a year in food and clothing. His state sales tax would amount to approximately $200.00. Why should I have to pay more state taxes simply because I have a larger family for which I have to buy more food and clothing?
 My wife and I are smokers despite the constant medical advice of the U. S. Government. This is our privilege for as long as it may last. Why should we be taxed an additional $8 per pack where non-smokers are not taxed?
 My wife and I occasionally purchase liquor to complete social obligations. This is our privilege for as long as it may last. Why should we be taxed an additional $6 per gallon where non-drinkers are not taxed?
 My family, being normal, occasionally wishes to go to the movies, swimming pools, Hartford Knights football games, and Hartford Capital basketball games. Why should we be taxed 10 percent where uninterested non-spectators are not taxed?
 My family, being normal, requires the benefits of gas, water, telephone and electric companies. I do not believe that the corporation business tax increase from 3 1/4 to 8 percent will not effect the rates which I am now paying. That tax increase directly effects the average consumer who will be paying the corporation business tax increase through increased costs to purchase their products or services.
 My rented home (I cannot afford to purchase a home) is not located on a bus line; therefore, I use my car to go to work and return. Why should I be

For the Moon-Shy: Around the Town in a Balloon

Story by Bette Quatrle

In practice ascent are Bette Quatrle, center; Felix Pankiewicz, operator, and Mrs. A. E. Buccievicius, photographer's wife, who hitched short ride.

At Tolland High lot, propane gas is pumped into balloon.

Stephen Small of Tolland, on whose land balloon is landing, helps guide it.

Tolland may one day be known as the "balloon capital of the world" if balloonist Charles MacArthur's dream comes true.

The sight of MacArthur's red and white hot air balloons, while becoming a familiar one to residents of this town, remains a curiosity to most of the country. MacArthur will be the subject of several television network shows during the coming year.

MacArthur, owner of the Aerostat Balloon School in Tolland, is responsible for training over one-third of the world's licensed balloonists. He has trained 25 licensed pilots and has another 12 students in various stages of training.

Curious about how it feels to fly "up" and away in a beautiful balloon, this reporter and a Herald photographer arranged a "moon-country flight" in one of MacArthur's flying vehicles.

The trip proved relatively uneventful for those in the balloon, although the ground crew suffered a king-sized headache trying to locate the landing point.

As do most balloons, flames emanating from the Tolland High School field, it began at 6 a.m. on a quiet Sunday morning while most of the town was asleep.

After driving along deserted country roads, we arrived at the high school, where considerable activity was already under way.

Cars from New York as well as Connecticut were on the scene and the normal half-hour preparation period for equipping and inflating the balloons was under way.

Becoming somewhat apprehensive about the trip, we watched the ground crew inflate the eight-story high balloon with approximately two tons of hot air, until it took on the shape of a giant red and white mushroom.

After the first few bluffs from the propane torch the balloon gracefully took on several eerie shapes, while the crew carefully kept the plastic lined, 2,510 to 400 feet up, in an open basket with a railing which comes just to our waist, or "just above the center of gravity" in MacArthur's more colorful descriptions.

When flying in a balloon, a passenger is barely aware of any movement until he watches the scenery below. The traffic on the highway became momentarily confused as the "slower" early morning drivers grazed at us with open curiosity, only to have the flame burners re-emerge sharply with the quiet, rural surroundings and cows graze nearby.

MacArthur took us on a short flight while we remained on a 10-foot tether line. Learning to bend our knees on landing, we rose slowly into the air and then would land in a series of slow hops across the field.

After two of these practice flights, MacArthur turned over the balloon to pilot Felix Pankiewicz, who took us on the "moon country flight."

A mild feeling of reduction, as if the balloon were being pulled, terminated its movement and direction. Pankiewicz turned on the propane burner trailing the about 300 feet over the Wilbur Cross Hwy., heading south-east.

Although sometimes afraid of heights, this reporter felt no such fear despite the fact we floated through the air from 200 to 400 feet up, in an open basket with a railing which comes just to our waist, or "just above the center of gravity" in MacArthur's more colorful descriptions.

The peacefulness of a quiet suburban town at 6:30 in the morning was viewed, as we floated over rooftops and acres of wooded landscape, with the shadow of the balloon following us and mist-shrouded hills to our left.

The quietness was only interrupted by the periodic roar of the propane burner. We crossed over the top of a large hill and found ourselves absolutely motionless.

Like a sailboat, a balloon must have some breeze to determine its movement and direction. Pankiewicz turned on the propane burner trailing the Charles MacArthur, who heads balloon venture.

But the wind died down again and we found the balloon determining its own point of landing in a field about 500 to 800 feet short of the target area.

The landing was the most exciting aspect of the flight.

Tolland Ellington School Aide Appointed Principal

An Ellington school administrator, Roger Olson, was appointed principal of Tolland High School by the Board of Education in a special meeting Wednesday night.

Olson was one of five candidates interviewed for the position by the school board. He has been employed by the Ellington schools for 10 years, including five as an industrial arts and physics teacher.

He has been employed as a director of Ellington's data processing system for the past five years, during which time he has been responsible for keeping attendance and marking records for the Tolland school system.

School board chairman David Cook described Olson as "very enthusiastic about his new position." The new principal has already set up interviews with several prospective teachers to fill the remaining vacancies at the high school.

Olson holds a Bachelor's degree from Central Connecticut State College and a Master's degree from Worcester Polytechnic Institute. He has done graduate work at Cornell University and the University of Southern California in Berkeley.

A member of the Episcopate Phi Theta Fraternity, Olson is the recipient of a National Science Foundation grant to study physics at Worcester Polytechnic Institute and area representative to the Youth Center on the town of Ellington.

Olson, his wife Frances and their children live in Somers.

Tolland Club Mountain Club Schedules Hike

The Connecticut Section of the Green Mountain Club will sponsor a short mystery hike for families July 27. Anyone interested may meet at the Lord and Taylor parking lot, Rt. 44, West Hartford, at 1 p.m.

President Alan Mead, 52 Skinner Rd., Rockville and active chairman George Englund, 46 Goodman St., Bloomfield, are in charge. Participants are asked to bring a box lunch and bathing suits.

The hike will be approximately 3.5 miles long.

Most Firms Stay Open
HARTFORD (AP)—A number of Connecticut cities are planning full or partial closing of offices in observance of the moon walk Monday, but a majority of the state private businesses will conduct a full workday.

New Haven, Bridgeport and Waterbury are among the cities that will follow the state's lead in closing all but essential services in anticipation of the U.S. astronauts walk on the moon.

The state's largest employer, United Aircraft, leads the long list of businesses remaining on a regular Monday work schedule. A special session of the Board of Directors will be held Monday at 11 a.m.

GIs Find PX Prices Wear Away Pay Raise

WASHINGTON (AP)—The GI who went to the PX to celebrate his new pay raise has found the inflation wracking the nation's economy has filtered down to the cost of his hamburger and coffee.

A spokesman for the Army and Air Force Exchange Service said the price hikes had been planned for some time and just happened to coincide with the pay raises which went in effect July 1.

"The timing was unfortunate," the spokesman said, while contending the price increases were overdue.

He claimed the exchange system is only now digging out of a $90 million debt caused by the Vietnam buildup.

Service men, who received an average 12.5 per cent pay increase, will be charged twice as much for a cup of coffee and up to 40 per cent more for a hamburger.

In cash terms, this means a GI will pay 10 cents for a cup of coffee that used to cost him a nickel, though he now will be able to get a refill free.

Hamburgers that used to be priced at 25 cents overseas and 30 cents at U.S. bases will now cost 45 cents.

Other price hikes have been ordered for such snackbar favorites as milk shakes, hotdogs, cheeseburgers and beer.

Though the increases amount only to a few cents, they impact most heavily on the lower paid enlisted men who like to patronize snack bars to get relief from mess hall food.

The Nixon administration currently is conducting a high level study of ways to make life more attractive to bring in more volunteers and reduce reliance on the draft.

Resident Thanks Director For Solutions to Problem

Something rare happened at last night's Board of Directors comment session at the Municipal Building—a resident came in to thank the directors for solving a problem.

Directors David Osgood and John Garate thanked the session at which townspeople lodge complaints directly and anonymously to the elected officials. Osgood said this morning that the man had complained in June about the dangerous intersection of Buckland Rd. and Toland Pike.

The directors brought the matter up at a full board meeting and two solutions were agreed upon. First, a stop sign would be placed on Toland Pike for eastbound traffic. Next, the whole intersection will be completely straightened out when the state widens Rt. 15 which is several blocks to the west of the intersection.

The man told the directors

Mr. and Mrs. John Moran of Hartford. Her fiance is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Clement Boardman, Broad and Mills Rd., Coventry.

Father Foley Going to Rome As College Academic Dean

The Rev. Richard L. Foley, a Manchester native, has been appointed academic dean at the North American College in Rome and will leave for Rome on his new duties on Aug. 23.

Father Foley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius R. Foley, 49 Scarborough Rd., was named to the post by the United States Catholic Bishops, who maintained the North American College for major seminarians from this country studying in Rome. The new dean is a graduate of the North American College, where he was ordained to the priesthood in 1968.

A priest of the Archdiocese of Hartford, Father Foley has been associate professor of church history since 1967 at Manhattanville College, Purchase, N.Y., and also has served as visiting professor of religion at St. Joseph College, West Hartford. While in West Hartford, from 1968 to 1969, he was in charge of the residence at St. Thomas Seminary, Elmfield.

He attended St. James' School and St. Thomas Seminary, Bloomfield. He received his BA and MA degrees in philosophy from Catholic University, Washington, D.C., and his degree in sacred theology from the Gregorian College University in Rome. In June 1968 he received his doctor of philosophy degree in the study of religion from Harvard University. He also was a graduate of Howell Cheney Technical School and is an electrician at Colt's Firearms Co., Hartford.

Zoners Hear Bids Monday

The final public hearing session until September will be conducted by the Zoning Board of Appeals Monday night at 7 in the Municipal Building's hearing room.

By JUNE LINTON The huge jet at Bradley Airport appeared to swallow up the laughing and waving crowd which had gathered in front of it a few minutes before. It was almost midnight and Coventry citizens (and some neighbors) were on their way to another Coventry across the sea.

This was a return visit to over a 100 people of Coventry, England, who spent three weeks as guests in Connecticut Coventry homes last summer. Individual adults, whole families and many teenagers, including most of the Coventry High School band, made the trip.

The plane touched down at Gatwick Airport south of London early this morning after meeting the rising sun halfway across the Atlantic. The landing would have been at 10:30 a.m., according to the English Big Ben, which is five hours ahead of our time. A two-hour trip to Coventry, which is 80 miles northwest of London, would put the actual reunion of the year-old friends at about 1 p.m. this afternoon, their time.

A year of preparation and planning led to the few hours of waiting for the chartered TWA Flight 818 to be called. The business of tagging baggage and checking passports had been taken care of earlier in the evening when they all assembled at Coventry High School.

Coventry's brand new Fire Engine 11 escorted the four busloads of travelers to the town line. Traffic stopped for Those departing had plenty of time for talk. Buses got them to Bradley Airport hours before takeoff. (Herald photo by Pinto)

Some groups which took care of last summer's arrangements. Milton A. White, Coventry High School principal, and his assistant, Larry Knight, were among the busiest of the waiting number last night. The teachers went as chaperones also had more than their own luggage on their minds, and these included Mrs. Marilyn Bowman, Keith Finkral and Edmund Daley.

Not all of the group were looking forward to buying from Coventry. A notable exception was one especially made. One has an order to pick up a was "invitation accepted by which they undoubtedly will. The Coventry High School Boosters Club is sponsoring the trip with the Caldon Castle story fascinated met, the town-to-town exchange, and we ac-

Arnold Palmer, Bill Casper Fire 73 Rounds U.S. Open Champion Collapses from Heat

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Orville Moody fell victim to the gasping heat, while Frank Boynton discovered the power of positive thinking words wondrous for him—but could be dangerous to anyone else without a tee shot.

"I almost killed Arnold Palmer and destroyed Chuck Courtney and myself," Moody said. "I was a technician, a technician who was a technician."

Following are the starting times and pairing for Sunday's Senior Championship Tournament at Manchester Country Club.

Navy Ends Evans Probe, Wolff Urges 'Yes' Vote In Monday's Referendum

By PAUL HANCE Associated Press Writer MAÑILA (AP) - The U.S. Australian naval board investigating the collision of the American destroyer Frank E. Evans and the Australian aircraft carrier Melbourne ended its inquiry today and sent a secret report to the navy. The report, which was by law and is in fact already public, said the panel's specific findings would not be passed now, but that the heretofore secret report would be made available to the public in a few days. The Evans was on a mission to the Philippines when it collided with the Melbourne on June 30, 1967. The Evans was on a mission to the Philippines when it collided with the Melbourne on June 30, 1967.
