MEMBER AUDIT BUREAU OF CIRCULA

Wednesday, August 6 Too Early For Any Fair Audit This nation is getting so it wears its sentiment on its sleeve, on its purchasing, on its stock market. Consequently, there is little news, but merely confirmation of something we had already been showing ourselves, when one of the national polls reports that President Nixon's popularity was sinking from 62 per cent in June to only 44 per cent in mid July, as sharp and precipitous a drop in prestige as has ever befallen any President in such a short time. What happened during this period was obviously some kind of rather sudden mass crystallization of opinions and doubts which had been accumulating inside the national reaction to the new administration and its top leadership. The nation had, up to that point, been going along with the new President in the spirit of his Inaugural, in acceptance of his own optimistic, gradualistic approach, in patient willingness to see what would happen if we all kept our voices down and took good long careful looks at all our options before we began to make hard and binding ded, and that it was really nothing at all except a well intentioned camouflage for delay and for the unexpectedly difficult task of trying to reach decisions which did not, after all, yield easily to lowered voices or to either patient or crash program analysis.

We do not happen to believe that the American people, having elected this President, and then having given their attention and hope freely to the kind of operation he set out to achieve, had any valid right to turn so far toward instant disillusionment at some point in the month of June. What kind of a constituency is it which would give a President so many weeks, but no more, to make good on a low-keyed gradualistic program? If any of us accepted the premises with which Mr. Nixon started out last January we should also be capable of realizing that the delivery date on such premises and promises has not even begun to ar-

Unfortunately, sanity, reason, proportion are not qualities guaranteed in the mass psychology of a nation. We are quite capable of giving a new President his chance, and of then calling for an audit before the logical time for the chance has expired. We are quite capable of revoking our confidence and trust just because we do not like the turn of a nose or the thrust of a smile. We get impressions we do not even bother to define or analyze, and ride off on them as if they were legitimate basis for action and verdict.

It would be not merely kindness to Mr. Nixon, but fairness to ourselves and to our own commitment with him, for as to leave the book of verdict and judgment open a long while longer before we begin to make any indelible

The Television Confessional In a performance which was at once a confession and a claim of innocence. the Most Rev. Matthias Defregger, Aux-Iliary Bishop of Munich, has gone on West German television to respond to the month-old uproar in the press about his role in the execution of 17 Italian villagers back in World War II.

while reemingly being in favor of their The Bishop admitted that, as the press disclosures have claimed, he passed along the order which resulted in the massacre of Italian civilians, in response to Italian guerrilla action against Ger-

The memory of the executions, the Bishop said, has become "a heavy burden I carry with me that no confessor and no public can relieve me of." At the same time, however, contending that only a field officer in his position in time of war would have the right to judge his actions, the Bishop declared that "I feel myself legally, and above all, morally not guilty." He would not. he added, resign, in "the present period of uproar and excitement," his post as

This was, of course, the second instance, within a few days, in which television had been made the medium for the presentation of a personal confession, mixed with self defense, and consideration of the future career of the confessor-defendant.

In each case, the television audience was treated as if it were somehow empowered to serve as judge and jury. In each case, the individual in trouble, on the spot, took his case and his defense and his appeal "to the people."

We wonder, now, if this is not going to become common practice for public figures who find themselves in trouble for some debatable unquiet something in their past. What kind of television program would former Justice Abe Fortas have presented, if he had realized how fashionable and standard the television confession-defense was about to

And what is the regular system of law going to think of such an unofficial system of justice, in which the defendant elects ordeal by television as something superior in jurisdiction and validity to anything mere courts or standard ethical codes can provide?

As for the attitude of the public, that we can predict. It is going to expect, from now on, that every fallen or wounded hero will avail himself of the television ritual.

No Martians

Only a few days ago, all was unspolled mystery. Now we have not only brought the Moon down to earth, but Mars as well.

The scientific landing on Moon, giving us our first concrete assurances that what previous sciontific calculations had indicated was accurate, and reducing that romantic planet to a few satchels full of moon dust, has given us a ready frame of reference and comparison for our conclusions about Mars. We need only to get some 2,000 miles near Mars to begin reading it with our cameras and our instruments and conclude that the possibility long kept alive by the possible illusions of our best telescopes has no existence in reality, and that Mars is, like Moon, a dried out spin of craters, with the little space men with antennae growing out of their head in the same class of reality as green

What we learn about Mars will, in turn, speed our ability to make conclusions about Jupiter and Venus and Saturn and Mercury, and there, in a veritable twinkle, twinkle, twinkle go the exploratory resources of our own small home-sky galaxy .Where do we for the next unknown, for the next encounter that can make us all hold our breath the way we did when Neil Armstrong was first dangling that one foot down off the ladder to the Moon soll? Somehow ave will have to bounce our way out of our own galaxy, and into some neighbor which may, somewhere in its own vast resources, be lucky enough to have a green and blue jewel like our own Earth, something worthdiscovering, colonizing, or making peace and war with.

Until then, the story in this galaxy is, we are afraid, that once you've seen one planet you've seen them all.

Who Ambushed This Legislation! Legislation to outlaw gus station giveaway games was one of the victime of 11th-hour confusion in the General Ascembly. The bill has been pronounced dead by State Atty. Gen. Robert Killian. . A technical maneuver admidst the

Many Turned From Sports To Acting By BOB THOMAS Associated Press Writer HOLLYWOOD (AP) - Last week Bill Russell announced he was giving up his career in basketball to become a movie actor. If he carries out his plan, he will join a sizable fraternity of athletes-turned-actors. "Russell might make it," a film producer commented. "He commands attention with his size and power, and he's a ready-made celebrity, at least in this country. And there have never been more opportunities for Negro actors. "His only drawback might be his height (6-foot-9). It'll be tough to find actors tall enough o play in scenes with him." The comment points up why athletes and movies have long had an affinity: 1. The athletes are already stars in the public's eyes; 2. Their physiques and grace are well suited to films. The casting of athletes in movies has been going on since the earliest days of motion pictures. One of the earliest "stars" of the nickelodeons was Sandow, the strongman who was first managed by Florenz Ziegfeld. He did little but flex his abundant muscles, but that was enough to fascinate viewers of the new medium. Most of the superstars of 1920s sports were enlisted for movies, . among then Babe Ruth, Jack Dempsey, Lou Gehrig, Bobby Jones. All returned to their sport careers without setting any acting records. More successful was Johnny Mack Brown, who starred in the Rose Bowl for the University of Alabama. He costarred opposite Greta Garbo and Joan Graw ford, later appeared in western Heavyweight champ Max Baer proved a passable per-former in "The Prizefighter and Commission's proposed com-peals for variances."

A Connecticut State Park

Devil's Hopyard

A great favorite for visitors from throughout the United States, and referred to as one of the wildest ravines in Connecticut, Devil's Hopyard State Park, in E. Haddam, covers 860 acres.

On the Eight Mile River, and highlighted by the exciting Chapman Falls, the park offers rustic foot bridges and trails for the walker and hiker, fishing for the sportsman, and picnic areas and tables for the all-day visitor.

Connecticut is proud of its many fine state parks and Devil's Hopyard State Park is one of the finest.
