The Flaw In The Architecture fork's tall buildings were built research and analysis might say, on a number of things.

They were built on remarkable foundations, coming up from bed rock lower han the surrounding sea. They were built on marvelously precise engineering calculations, by daring use of materials. They were built by the courage and skill of workmen of many crafts. They were built by an imagination which truly saw only the aky as a limit to man's archi-

They were also, however, built on something else not likely to find its way into any discussion of the possibility and practicability of such structures. They were built on faith in the human

The builders of tall buildings never freamed for a moment that there might come a time when the members of a mion specializing in the service and repair of the elevators in such tall buildings would go on strike and, in an effort to win their strike, let the elevators go out of service in building after building, making virtual prisoners of those tenants who might be infirm.

But now, after what the elevator re-York, planners of tall buildings will have at least a stray thought or two about what would happen if the human beings required to keep tall buildings in operation should prove unreliable.

And we all need, for that matter, to occustom ourselves to a new kind of human behavior - that of elevator repairmen who do not hemitate to strand the infirm and the aged hopelessly that of public safety and law enforcement officials who do not hesitate to deliver their cities over to the hoodlums that of garbage collectors who do not hesitate to plunge their city and its health risks back to the middle ages that of teachers who do not hesitate to close schools against children. Once we assumed - and built buildings and society on such an assumptionthat we could depend on all these vocations not to use the uninvolved innocent as pawns in any struggle of their own over such a thing as a rate of pay. No matter how just their own grievance, we were once privileged to assume, they cerning the nature of the reform. would never forget their own higher obligation to their profession, their com-

There may be a choice among a number of practical maxima, such as: "The way to reduce the number of casualties in a war is to scale down your own effort to inflict them."

"The soundest formula for stopping the killing in a war is to stop killing." "The last-ditch resort for those who want peace is to stop fighting." It is not that simple, of course.

fighting even in situations where hop and cause have become unclear - have often been equally simple and mistaken. It has always seemed to some mill tary observers, from the very beginning of our armed participation in the Vietnam struggle, that we could have served our role there, and accomplished our objective of preventing victory for the Vietcong, by a military strategy which rould have been defensive rather than saved many lives on both sides of the conflict, as well as lives of those who were merely caught between the two

President Nixon's conduct of the war has finally taken us out of that perpeclear out military victory. Every week we behave this way saves the lives of hundreds of young Americans and young Vietnamese, and yet leaves us relatively as strong and our cause as secure as it was before, or as it might have been made, if past experience and effort provide any guide, by all-out action into the arena of kill and be killed.

"Operation Grandstand" "Operation Intercept," the gigantic bungle the Nixon Administration has invoked along our border with Mexico has about as much real relation to the problem involved as the one-time concentration of Connecticut State Police on stopping cars near the New York State line had to the problem of teenage drinking

'In Connecticut, the border patrol createstablish the fact that the Dempsey Administration was conducting a great big crackdown on teenage drinking in the State. While the State Police watched the border, and created unreasonable inconvenience for many innocent motorists, the youth of the state was getting its supply of beer and liquor from normal sources inside the state, and littering our streets, parks, and shopping centers nightly with their discards.

By setting up "Operation Intercept," the Nixon Administration created for itself those headlines which were supposed to prove that it was really cracking down on marijuana. All it has really accomplished is to insuit and enrage the government and the people of Mexico and annoy a lot of innocent travelers Turrabout On The Electoral President Nixon has reversed himself and came out in favor of the abolish ment of the Electoral College in a move that has the earmarks of reform for reform's sake.

Certainly there has been little that anspired between last winter, when the President had espoused some modification in the operation of the electoral system rather than its elimination, and now, to suggest any other reason for his

"We ought to obey God rather than men," Acts 5:29. This statement of Christian principle by Peter has been tortured from its context to justify every kind of defiance of established authority. In recent years, law violations have been so rationalized in support of racial integration and in opposition to the Vietnam conflict. Next week a national student boycott is planned in protest of the latter, encouraging student insubordination to constituted jurisdiction.

In fact, says Dr. William Robertson, a recent check shows that the level of DDT and simiar pesticides is so high in the overglades that the bald engle y become extinct there. Robertson, a biologist with the U.S. Park Services, said Friday the poison pollution is causing female eagles to lay eggs with shells so thin that they crack during incubation.

"The pesticide, levels are the music of the "Manhattans."

"The pesticide, levels are much higher than we would have articipated. I would call them alarming," Robertson told a group of scientists at the University of Miami.

"The levels are at the point where they are interfering with where they are interfering with the reproductive process."

Robertson urged that something be done to save the vanishing species used. shing species, used on many with the 22nd Artillery.

11 Nations Silent In Policy Talks

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)-Some thought it had been said already. Some got tired of returning sniper fire. Others just kept their opinions

That's why 11 of the 126 memclined to speak in the annual policy debate that opened the General Assembly session. The 16 days of oratory wound up Wednesday night.

Not participating were Dahomey, Gambia, Ghana, Guatemala, Malawi, Nicaragua, Nigér, Portugal South Africa, Spain and Togo.

"It is not, after all, an obligation for a pation to great his tion for a nation to speak," said Ambassador Guillermo Lang of Nicaragua. "We just didn't think it was necessary this year.

"If the Communist officials of Cuba had chosen to renew some of their charges that we were helping to mount an invasio against their country, we would have spoken quickly enough. "But why just repeat what so "It would really be a waste of time to air our views on Viet subjects when scores of others have given their opinions."

South Africa kept silent for different reason.
"We see no reason for re plying to these repeated allega-tions of apartheid," said South African spokesman J. V. Delport. "Our views on this are briefly to give our view on tha

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) -Secret indictments have been returned against 15 persons allegedly involved in an arson ring that burned homes of poor people to collect insurance pay-The indictments resulted from an eight-month investigation conducted by Atty Gen. Herbert

F. DeSimone who said today the total amount of insurance claims involved may reach $2 million.

"Their work was deliberately planned to make it look as if the neighborhood kids were doing it," DeSimone said. He said the ring operated by buying proper-ty, insuring it and then burning it to collect the insurance. "Eleven children were sleep-ing in one place that was fired." he said of the fires at 18 loca-Eleven persons were ar-raigned by a grand jury in Sep-tember and arrest orders were ert Andrew, Carmine Distante. Star System Alive and Well

By JEERY BUCK

NHW YORK (AP) - Proof that television's star system is alive and well was supplied in recent days when OBS signed three top attractions, andy Griffith, Dick Van Dyke and Mary

New situation comedies will last be created for the return of NBC Griffith, Van Dyke and Miss Moore, who left CBS to pursue movie careers.

The signing of stars with no programs in mind is a fairly common practice. Most often the star forms his own production company for extra profits.

That keeps the stars happy, but it is causing some grumbling by the movie studies, the traditional packagers of television programs.

Popularity in one medium does not always transfer suc-cessfully to television, although that's always the hope Doris Day consistently drew fans to her movies, but when she was put into one of CHS's rustic comdedies last year the ratings were not spectacular.

This year, with a more urbane setting, as better suits bliss

The signing of Griffith, Van Dyke and Miss Moore, as well as Tim Conway earlier, is insurance against the retirement of such talent as Lucille Ball, Red Skelton, Ed Sullivan, Jackie Gleason and Fred MacMurray.

Griffith's new series is being comedy vehice for Miss Moore, who spent five years as Van Dyke's on-the-air wife. Carl Reiner, who created the original Van Dyke show, will develop a 1971-72 season. Conway may be brought in at midseason in a comedy about a group of com-bat photographers.

the other networks, particularly NBC, which has Bob Hope, Alan King, Johnny Carson and many others. NBC hopes to develop a series for Flip Wilson and is betting heavily—with a series of specials to start—that "Laugh-In's" Goldie Hawn will develop into a major star.

ABC has some heavyweights in the wings: Johnny Cash, Pearl Bailey, Englebert Hum-perdinck and Robert Goulet. Only Cash is a sure thing, with his country music show penciled in to return at midseason.

ABC is taping a special with Humperdinck in London this month, in the expectation that the English singer will catch fire as Tom Jones did.

Miss Bailey and Goulet are committed to specials, too, and an offer of a series could devel

NEW YORK (AP) - In an chance to see him on his first age of rock and pop, Frank Si-natra Jr. is unique among EDT Sunday, Oct. 19, on CBS, young singers. His appeal is to His father follows him in a spean older audience.

Actually, young people have few opportunities to hear him. He eschews pop music for old standards and show tunes, so he makes few records.

His only regular television appearance was last year as one of the stars of the Dean Martin summer show, which was aimed for mature viewers.

And, most of his appearances are in night clubs, where, as he points out, "you have to be over 21 to get in."

But Sinatra isn't worried. He figures he has the kind of voice and repertoire that will go on forever. Crossing his fingers, he said, "I don't see how a good old-fashioned singer in front of an audience can lose." Viewers will get another

Young Sinatra has been described as "5 going on 40." His outlook is mature and serious. "I must be a complete square," he says. His clothes are show ess hip, but several cons from being mod. He says he lis-tens to rock music only "to see if I'm making too harsh a judg-ment about R."

He demurs at being called a star, even the star of his own special. He points out that the special is loaded with such taient as his father and sister, Nancy, Sammy Davis Jr., Jack E. Leonard, Jack Benny and Arte Johnson. 'I think of myself more as a master of ceremonies than star," he said.

The whole thing points up a dilemma for young Sinatra: he is still thought of very much as his father's son.

A visitor to his New York office cannot help being struck by the overwhelming resemblance. Not only looks and singing, but the way he wears his clothes, cigarette. Has having a famous father helped or hurt him in his career? He know the question would come up sooner or later and he was not disturbed by it. "R's been a little hit of both," he answered. "I'm ju sorry people have to look at it at in everything else. He'd be all, but human nature being what it is, I guess they always will. It's too bad people can't look at it for what it is and not for what they think it is.

"Actually," he said, with a trace of a smile, "Nancy is more of a competitive spirit to me than my father. We're closer to the same age. Nowadays I
