Factory Built Homes

Stepping Up Output By DON BATTLE average cost of the three-bed. Of eastern Pennsylvania room unit is $17.000. NEW YORK (AP) — As the price of home construction soars, factory home-builders are stepping up their output.

This year, prefabricated homes are expected to account for 30 per cent of the single-family units built.

Prefabricated homes captured 5 per cent of the market last year with 5,000 units, according to the Home Manufacturers Association. The figures do not include mobile homes, which are expected to reach 400,000 units this year.

At least half of all housing will be factory-built by 1975, the association predicts.

components and "in the last six months, 30 new companies have come on the scene," said Don Gilchrist, association executive vice president. "There is a very healthy growth picture."

The U.S. Housing Act of 1968 set a goal of 26 million new and rehabilitated units—6 million of which will be slated for low-income groups—over the next 10 years. The demand now is especially strong for homes under $20,000.

Agnew Says It For Us Somebody handed Vice President Spiro T. Agnew, who is becoming more and more the impolite spokesman for Americans who dislike what they see appening but don't want to run the poreally swinging piece of prose to deliver down at that party fund-raising dinner in New Orleans the other night.

The Vice President's speech addressed itself to the Oct. 15 Moratorium, in terms certain to delight many who had not managed to put their own instinctive feelings into words.

"If the Moratorium had any use whatever," said the Vice President, "It served as an emotional purgative for those of their lack of ability to offer a constructive solution to the problem."

That was the mild opener, the dispassionate overture to the crescendo of righteous denunciation which was to

"reflection of the confusion that exists in America today" when "persussion through speeches and books is too often discarded for disruptive demonstrations aimed at bludgeoning the unconvinced

Then came Mr. Agnew's smashing paragraph, as follows: "A spirit of national masochism prevails, encouraged by an effete corps of mpudent snobs who characterize them-What makes this paragraph classic is not merely the fact that it contains a

It is effective because there is a certain measure of truth in it. We, the world's most powerful and enlightened nation, are indeed in a mood when we even blame ourselves for being powerful and for not being more enlightened. We seem to get more of a psychological kick out of criticizing ourselves than in concentrating on the really evil people in the world. We are much too tolerant of insolent young pupples who haven't even begun to live yet, but who pretend to know more than we do about what is true and valuable in life. All this the Vice President's speech writer condensed into one ringing paragraph that seemed to say it all for everybody who had been feeling frustrated and choked by his or her inability to put the Moratorium people in their

The trouble is that, even after we buy the Vice President's words, even after we thank him for saying out loud what so many of us were thinking, even after we think that he has put those people in their place, we are still not quite sure he has really done all that.

Have we and Agnew real reason to be satisfied with what we have done and accomplished with our world? Are we are sick? Do we really want to have to choose between the "impudent snobs" who try to make policy in the streets and the complacent snobs who try to hand down tranquilizing assurances from high places? Has the world ever been so right and sane in the past, judging by its record, that it is entitled to automatic respect whenever it criticizes those who make proposals that are wild and new? Have we who fancy ourselves as of the establishment very much confitence in our own ability to solve the problems the decreasing size of our ighter knots? What have we ever done that was really right? What problem would we really trust Agnew to solve?

In the end, perhaps, the Vice President's ringing, emotion-satisfying paragraph may in itself have been a trick and a delusion. For it seemed to dispose of the issue, but didn't really do so at all, and left all the real questions of our time still to be answered. It's all right to take the Agnew speech for kicks, but

Any Difference Whose Plane? We wouldn't be surprised, human and national natures being what they are, to have nations of the Communist bloc beginning to show a slight increase of interest in proposals aimed at the practice of plane hi-jacking, now that a Polish airliner has been forced to make a landing in West Berlin.

In this instance, the hi-jacking was the tactic by which two young East Germans made their escape across the Berlin wall. Hitherto, the familiar hijacking has involved a trip to Cuba for the convenience of Cubans wishing to return to Castro's paradise after disappointments in this country or in South American countries. This made propaganda from a Communist point of view; Cuba has seemed in no hurry to end it: tions have not been very eager to support international moves against' the Teen Center Dexter Burnham, representing the Youth Council, brought the Town Council up to date on the Youth Council Plans for a teen center at last night's Town Council meeting.

Plans are developing so rapid ly, Burnham said, that the YC wants to go to referendum to get approval of a transfer o own land to the YC in either December or January. With a temporary land transfer out of the way, the YC could go ahead with its fund raising campaign and construction of a new $200,-

The original plans, which called for renovation of one or two tobacco sheds, have proven to be impractical, said Burnham, but the YC, with the assistance of local architect Roland Aubin, has come up with plans for a 93-foot by 122 foot building of steel and masonry which they expect to be completed by September of next year.

A referendum temporarily conveying the town property to the YC is necessary to enable the YC to qualify for mortgage money, according to Burnham As soon as construction was complete, Burnham assured the council, the title to the land and the building would be conveyed back to the town. The present proposed site of the Teen Center is on high school property adjacent to the parking lot. The building would be available for use by the elderly, as well as the youth of the town, Burnham added. The YC is presently organizing a fund raising committee, a public relations commitee and a speakers bureau before embarking on its fund drive, and Burnham assured the council that the YC would procred with fund raising shortly. Councilman Peter Nicholas, hairman of the Council Committee on Education and Recreation, reported that his committee has met with the Town Council, the Recreation Director, the Park and Recreation

Snow Plan Gets Town Manager Robert Weiss' recommendation for spending $1,800 of town funds for a snow-forecast service was shalled by a cold front last night. Lebanon Chief Resigns The Board of Directors listened to the request in frozen silence. When the di rectors finally did thaw out he idea was melted away by their lukewarm remarks. Weiss had recommended that they sign a bid waiver, so that the Travelers Re-search Corp. might be re-tained for the period to April 30. He said that early snow warnings could save the town at least the $1,800 cost of the service. When it was evident that the directors had turned an icy ear to the request, Weiss didn't plow any further into the matter.
