> Whale-Shaped Jumbo Jets Take to Air This Month

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS The jumbo jetliners start flying commercially this month and officials at many of the nation's major airports and some in Europe say they are ready for them. Pan American World Airways plans to inaugurate Boeing 747 service next Wednesday with a New York-to-London flight. Trans World Airknes starts 747 service Feb. 25 with a flight from New York to Los Angeles Pan Am and TWA together expect to have a total of 40 of the 355-ton planes in the air by the end of the year. By the end of 1971, 28 of the world's airlines expect to be flying 186 of the whale-shaped planes which car-

An Associated Press survey shows that major U.S. airports and those in such citles as London, Paris, Rome and Hong Kong are deep in enlarging and remodeling projects. Officials say some of these airports-al though already overcrowded-are ready to handle the first few of the planes and that they expect to keep pace as the number of 747s in service grows. Most construction and remodeling projects are scheduled for completion by or during 1971. Airports where officials say they are now ready for the first

D.C., Dade County in Miami and Atlanta, and London and Paris, the survey shows. In general, airports are extending and buttressing runways and building new ones, enlarging and erecting terminals, readying new docking gates, improving baggage handling facil-ities, and improving and building parking lots. Kennedy Airport already has strengthened ramp areas, improved customs and baggage facilities, added parking lots, and virtually completed one new terminal designed for the 747. It also is expanding its International Arrivals Building and enlarging another terminal. The 231-foot long 747 is the largest commercial airliner in history, 80 feet longer than its predecessor, the Boeing 707. It has a tail more than six stories high and holds 46,770 gallons of fuel-enough to run the average family car for almost 60 years. -for its four engines. It can carry 350 to 490 passen-gers-twice as many as the largest jetliner now in service. The interior cabin is 20 feet wide and passengers sit nine abreast, separated by two aisles that run the length of the aircraft. The plane has 12 restrooms and even a "penthouse"

Town Woman Makes Plaque As Present for Astronauts By SOL R. COHEN

When Apollo 11 astronauts Neil A. Armstrong, Edwin E. Aldrin Jr. and Michael Collins made their historic landing and walk on the moon, Mrs. Raymond F. Merriman of 96 Norman St., as she tells it, felt compelled to congratulate them with an unusual memento. She made a moon-shaped plaque of clear, baking crystals, nd baked into both sides of it ctures and clippings from the 21, 1969 Manchester lerald, the day of the moon-First, she had to choose the lippings she wanted. Then, she had o cut them, splice them, and arrange them so that they would fit the plaque and still be readable. All that took hours, but was well worth the time and effort, Mrs. Meriman says. She made the plaque in an aluminum mold, baking the crystals in her oven. After she had arranged the news accounts and pictures, she repeated the process, and the articles and pictures were sealed tight, on both sides.

She sent the plaque to the astronauts, care of the Houston Manned Space Center. She received a formal acknowledgement and reply, but with an added bonus mes-

On the back of the printed acknowledgement is a handwritten message from Armstrong, "Thank you very much for sending us your news-clipping plaque." Mrs. Merriman has made a smaller plaque and has permanently baked the acknowledgement onto it. The printed message on the thank-you letter reads:

Gray, who said he was standing near the head of the stairs when the six men arrived, told newsmen they "literally battered down the door" to Johnson's inner office. The president was not in his office at the time. Staff members and employee left the building as the demonstrators appeared. With the door breached, a crowd of about 200 guickly 'swept into the two offices and the corporation's reception room. Shouting antiwar slogans, they unfurled Viet Cong flags and hung one in a window of the president's office. Others broke out guitars and tambourines.

A few carried water pistols and used them to squirt newsmen and university officials. They told newsmen they intended to spend the night, and in early evening sent out for food. Some passed the long night sitting in the corridor list tening to speeches by leaders of the occupation. The seizure came one day after release of Johnson's annual report, in which he said that de-

Cool Helmsman In Narrow Straits When it comes out of Washington that President Nixon, taking a look at the next federal budget, has ordered further cuts in the spending scheduled for the fiscal year of 1971, that means he has decided to steer a little closer to the danger of recession in order to open a little more distance between our economy and the danger of inflation.

By this time, we think, the whole nation has begun to sense that the Nixon Administration is now engaged in, and has been engaged in for several months past, and will continue to be engaged in a highly delicate effort to steer a path between the two perils, inflation and recession, without having the economy pile itself up in wreck on either.

The problem is to slow down the economy enough to get us past the danger of inflation without having the slowdown turn into a drift into reces-

This is a perilous task of helmsmanship for either a politician or an economist. President Nixon, as a politician, undoubtedly senses that it would be worse for his reputation to have a recession, with more unemployment, and business, than it would be tor him to allow inflation continue its natural course. But he has to know that inflation itself must, in the end, lead to something worse than recession.

much it ought to be held back in another. As in some of his other policies-notaby Vietnam abroad and integration at home-President Nixon is under attack from two directions.

Some of those who have their own balloon-type prosperity tied to the assumption that things can keep going up and up forever are angry with the President because he has obviously succeeded in slowing things down to some degree, in the area of federal contracting, federal spending, and federal money supply.

And those who can see that inflation still keeps on making its own cancerous advances, with continued wage and price increases outling more money that is worth less into some pockets while, in many other pockets, it merely makes the limited supply of money already there worth much less, are angry with the President because he does not mount a more sensationalized, heavier-weaponed attack on inflation.

The complaint about President Nixon s, as we said, familiar. He moves too fast, he does not move fast enough, toward peace in Vietnam. He moves too fast, he does not move fast enough, toward progress on the racial front.

In between there is, of course, a third possibility. It is that he tries to move at the pace which will have a chance of gaining something everybody wants without risking something nobody wants to lone.

There is such a good chance that he might be right, and might be going to reach success in such objectives that we owe him some patience in Vietnam, some time on the racial front, and even some confidence on the economic front, where he is doing the steering in what some observers label a dangerous game of "economic chicken." He has negotiated some rather dangerous curves without piling us up yet.

The Collagen Look

We don't know whether we will ever see a thing called the contraction-mechanochemical turbine in successful industrial operation, but it has been operating, on a very minute scale, in the laboratory, and we therefore salute the scientific minds involved for their amazing feat in reversing all the normal systems for the creation of power.

The two scientists are Prof. Martin V. Sussman of Tufts and Prof. Aharon Katchalsky, of the Weizmann Institute in Rehovot, Israel.

'Their "contraction turbine" is an engine which is heatless, when the normal engine requires cooling.

It gets its power from the contraction, rather than the expansive explosion, of materials. It transmits its power directly, without having to use it, for instance, to boil water to produce steam to drive turbine.

On top of all this, it is an engine which employs salt water in one of its processes.

The way it works is this: there is a glue-like substance in nature called collagen, which holds animal and human bodies together. When collagen is processed into sheets and strips it has the unique property of shrinking whenever it is exposed to salt water. A long circular strip of collagen is run from a tank of fresh water up through a tank of salt water and then back through the fresh water again. On its way through the salt water it contracts and thus turns the spindles it traverses on its way through the salt water tank. A pulley attached to the spindles transmits the

All this, in itself, is ingenious and interesting, and there may come the day when an engine which consumes nothing and emits no pollution proves to be the thing that saves us all.

The big immediate salute, however, goes to the human minds involved, who first turned all normal concepts for the production of power upside down and inside out, and then invented from there. Of all the wonders of earth and life none surpasses that of the mind which can turn things over and look at them with eyes not inhibited by what men have seen before.

Dempsey will never be confused with "Minnesota Fats," but neither will he be confused with that breed of politician who can't relate to his constituency on human terms. John Dempsey's political style has al ways been human in the most precise sense of the word. It is said that politica candidates are selected in smoky cloak rooms by state and local bosses, but in the end it is the people who have tovote. And it is the people who have kept John Dempsey in politics for the past 35 years. Last Saturday John Dempsey told the people of Connecticut that he would remove himself from political life when his present term as governor expires in January of 1971. His voice cracked several times as he read his statement to the press. No one would ever accus John Dempsey of false emotion. When he cried it was because he was moved, when he laughed it was with gusto and honesty. He was a man of emotion and did not try to hide himself from the people. This was his style. A Republican politician, musing on his future a few years ago, decided the worse thing he could do was run on a ballot opposite the name John Dempsey. The reason? John Dempsey knew how to go to the people. Many of the hings politicians must do in the course of a campaign-kissing babies, shaking hands, slapping backs-John Dempsey did with a sincerity that was hard to match. Carping about Potter's three-year operation as executive director of the camcommittee stemmed less from his judgment in doling out campaign funds than from his limited expertise in nuts-and-bolts campaign techniques and time devoted to his business ventures. Hence, some political pros would like to see him restricted to the money end of the business.

Nevertheless, there is deep concern over Potter's lateral move. Without the power of the purse strings so central to politics, the inexperienced Calkins may well be dominated by Pot-

In a few European countries an increasing number of priests are giving up active office, many to wed. Four hundred left in Holland in two years; around a hundred left last year in Britain. But most of Europe's priests are content with their lot or at least keep silent. And most of those who have left say they would continue to exercise their priestly functions or return t them, if permitted to do so as married men.

Some bishops worry more about the effect all this talk may have on recruiting clergy. Many young men, they say, are adopting a walt-and-see attitude 3-Pc. Stainly toward the celibacy question before committing themselves to the priesthood.

A German magazine poll in several seminaries indicated that more than 90 per cent of those questioned opposed the unmarried life which lay ahead of them as priests.

the fact that it is one team that anyone may join, and no one has to worry about being "out. Anyone who wishes to join needs only to buy a gun (which could cost anywhere from $40 $150), a 75 cent box of ammunition (which is enough for 50 rounds) and see A. Alibrio, coach.

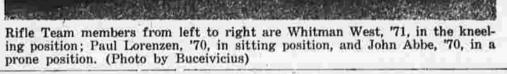

There are four positions used for shooting; when practicing the members shoot exactly a they do for a meet. These posttions are: Kneeling, offhand (standing), sitting (Cross-legged) and prone (lying).

In a match, each team is allowed to have ten members shoot, and then their scores are added up. The top five scores provide the team's total.

This means that only the ten best shooters will actually com pete in any given meet, but there are about 14 members on Squad A. These members do

The Latin roots of "con dominium" mean "common ownership." "Today's condominium is a form of coop-erative ownership of a resi-dence. Each buyer purchases a proportionate share of the common areas - and owns outright one of a high-rise, a town house, or some garden apartments. You receive deed to the space, but at the same time you are freed from general maintenance. Give most motorists as inch and they'll switch lanes.
