

Health Cost Cut Faces Legislators

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress began an election-year session today with the Senate's Democratic leaders challenging President Nixon over $1.26 billion in education and health appropriations the White House doesn't want.

Atop the agenda: A left-over, $19.7 billion appropriation bill which Nixon has said he will veto as inflationary because it pushes spending $1.26 billion past his budget.

Sen. Warren G. Magnuson, D-Wash., in charge of managing Senate action on the bill, said he was ready for a swift roll call vote on the measure.

Senate approval—when even Republican leaders concede is likely—would send it to the White House and the threatened veto.

Sen. Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., the majority leader, said he hoped Congress would produce the two-thirds majorities to override the President. "Hope so, hope so," Mansfield mused as the Senate's Democratic majority discussed strategy at a session-opening caucus.

But Republican leaders hope for a vote backing Nixon's veto, and House Speaker John W. McCormack, D-Mass., has said it would be difficult to defeat the President.

Republicans planned an attempt to send the bill back to a House-Senate conference committee to fashion new spending levels more acceptable to the administration. But Sen. Robert P. Griffin, R-Mich., the whip, already has acknowledged that effort is unlikely to succeed.

Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., in a speech prepared for the spending debate, said the Senate should vote to order "reasonable cuts" in the bill, bringing it more closely into line with the budget "and putting the Congress on record in support of the administration's anti-inflationary drive."

Democratic leaders see the issue as one of national priorities, insisting that money for more education and health research can be pared from other outlays—primarily defense. Republican loyalists insist rejection of the extra spending is vital in Nixon's efforts to combat inflation.

Both sides have waged long distance and letter-writing campaigns to align their forces during the three-week congressional recess.

The House passed the bill before the break, so final Senate roll call, likely this week, would send the measure to the White House.

Even as the HEW spending debate begins, Nixon has ordered new cuts in his budget for fiscal 1971, which begins July 1.

That budget blueprint may go to Congress about Feb. 2.

Nixon wants original estimates trimmed by about $3 billion, to approximately $200 billion, to keep the budget in balance without new taxes.

The Nov. 3 congressional elections, with the entire House and 35 Senate seats at stake, will cast a political influence over much of the session.

But with his major proposals still awaiting action, Nixon is going to need Democratic votes

Senator Sees Man Going Up in Smoke

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Gaylord Nelson, charging that man may pollute himself into disaster by the end of the century, called today for a constitutional amendment guaranteeing that "every person has an inalienable right to a decent environment."

In a speech prepared for Senate delivery today, the Wisconsin Democrat said "the crisis of man's environment is the biggest challenge facing mankind."

As part of protecting man's right to clean air and water, Nelson listed besides a constitutional amendment several other proposals, including development of pollution-free automobiles, elimination of nonreturnable bottles, cans and jars.

The pollution legacy of the past, Nelson said, "adds up each year to 172 million tons of smoke and fumes, 7 million junked cars, 20 million tons of paper, 48 billion cans and 28 billion bottles."

It also adds up to "a growing fear that what the scientists have been saying is all too true, that man is on the way to defining the terms of his own extinction." Nel on stated.

There is, however, a new public awareness of the pollution threat, the senator said, that may be the key to providing a decent existence for people.

"But, lest anyone be misled or caught unaware," he went on, "... a victory will take decades and 10s of billions of dollars. Just to control pollution, it will take $275 billion by the year 2000—equivalent to the Defense expenditure for the next four years."

"More than money, restoring our environment and establishing quality on a par with quantity as a goal of American life will require a reshaping of our values, sweeping changes in the performance and goals of our institutions, national standards of quality for the goods we produce, a humanizing and redirection of our technology and greatly increased attention to the problem of our expanding population."

In his speech, which was full of doomsday quotes from scientists to comic strip characters and folk singers, Nelson also proposed elimination of all hard pesticides; development of antipollution detergent standards and installation of antipollution devices on jet aircraft.

Other proposals include expansion of family planning and population research programs; creation of an environmental advocate agency; a moratorium on further development of the undersea outer continental

FAA Investigating Area Plane Crash

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Federal and state agencies are investigating the mid-air collision Saturday over Brainard Field that took the lives of four men in two single-engine airplanes.

"It seemed a case of both planes heading for the same point and getting there at the same time," said one witness. "I can't really say one tried to veer off or one veered into the other," said William Mieczkowski, a Pratt & Whitney Aircraft engineer and a pilot himself.

Mieczkowski was on the ground at Brainard Field when the collision occurred at 11:04 a.m. One plane appeared to be heading northwest and the other southwest when they collided, he said.

One plane plummeted almost straight down into the Connecticut River. The other made a shallower dive into dense woods on the east side of the river, in East Hartford.

From the river rescuers pulled the bodies of Ernest Dorazio, a 39-year-old flight instructor from Plainville, and his student, Walter Marcell, 27, of Waterbury.

Meanwhile, other rescuers had a hard time reaching the plane in the woods, using snowmobiles and finally tramping in on foot to the spot where the plane had come to rest upside down.

In the craft were the bodies of Gerald K. Miller, 56, and Francis J. Pintak, 42, both of Ridgefield.

Investigating the crash are the Federal Aviation Administration, the National Transportation Safety Board, and state aeronautics officials.

Brainard Field has no control tower, but federal funds for construction of a tower were approved recently and contracts are to be let this spring.

In all, nine persons lost their lives in accidents in Connecticut during the weekend, including the men killed in the plane crash and two West Haven men who died of carbon monoxide poisoning.

Also in the state, two persons were fatally injured in car crashes and a woman died in a fire.

In addition, two Connecticut residents were killed in a one-car crash in Virginia.

Robert LaPorta, 23, and Howard Shepherd, 17, both of West Haven were found dead in a car Sunday in a gas station garage in New Haven. They had been working on the car and apparently turned on the motor to warm it up, police said.

In West Hartford, an early morning fire Sunday took the life of Mrs. Lella Brodeur, 68.

Supreme Court Decision Strips Draft Boards of 'Speed-Up' Rule

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today stripped draft boards of the power to speed up the induction of Vietnam war protesters.

Justice William O. Douglas, in a 5-3 decision, said the court had searched federal draft laws in vain for any clues that Congress desired to give draft boards this authority.

He said "it is a broad, roving authority, a type of administrative absolutism not congenial to our lawmaking traditions."

The only punitive power draft law provides, Douglas said, is prosecution of registrants who refuse to submit to induction orders.

Justices Hugo L. Black, William J. Brennan Jr., Byron R. White and Thurgood Marshall supported the decision. Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, Potter Stewart and John M. Harlan concurred in its effect on a Minnesota man but would have allowed local boards some of the authority the majority denied them.

The court ruled in the case of David Earl Gutknecht, 22, of Gaylord, Minn., whose draft call was accelerated when he turned in his draft card at an antiwar protest in Minneapolis in 1967.

In a separate, but related action the court agreed to hear the appeal of a Kentucky man who claims the draft discriminates against poor people by deferring college students. The four others, including White, may disagree.

The issue is still pending before the court in the case of Timothy J. Broen, 21, of Westport, Conn., who was reclassified 1A after he gave his draft card to a Boston clergyman in a 1967 antiwar protest.

Gutknecht was already 1A. The local board acted against him by putting him ahead of others in that category.

Douglas said: "If federal or state laws are violated by registrants they can be prosecuted. If induction is to be substituted for these precautions, a vast re-power under the law. The four others, including White, may disagree.

U.S. To Open Door Slowly to Peking

Tuesday marks the start of a new round of high-level talks between the United States and Mainland China. In the following dispatch, AP Special Correspondent John M. Hightower, a Pulitzer Prize-winning newsmen who has covered the State Department for more than two decades, reports on the beyond-the-surface expectations of the States, including the United States.

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER, AP Special Correspondent WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States, seeking a new era in its relations with Peking, plans to propose to Communist China in Warsaw this week the two countries take small, practical steps to open up trade, travel and communications between them.

Nixon administration officials expect slow progress in the Warsaw talks opening Tuesday and would not be surprised if there was no movement at all for some months. But they have been encouraged by the speed and businesslike manner in which the Chinese have responded to recent U.S. overtures for discussions.

Behind their view is a belief Red China's sharpening border quarrel with the Soviet Union is causing Peking to reassess its traditionally hostile attitude toward the United States.

The first of what amounts to a new series of ambassadorial meetings—such talks were held between 1955 and 1966—will be in the Chinese embassy at Warsaw. They were arranged as a result of preliminary contacts there Dec. 3, 11 and Jan. 7.

Ambassador Walter J. Stoessel, a professional diplomat with long experience in handling relations with Communist countries, will represent the United States. Lei Yang, ranking Chinese diplomat in the Polish capital, is expected to speak for Peking. It was Lei who got the quick response from Peking to arrange the Tuesday meeting after Stoessel's first proposal Dec. 3.

The meeting will be the 189th in the series of talks that lapsed two years ago. While the Tuesday session officially represents a continuation of the series, in practical effect it is regarded as a fresh start with more promise than existed earlier.

The unchanging barrier to any progress in the early meetings was Red China's insistence that the United States abandon Nationalist China on Formosa.

The U.S. refusal is unchanged and whether the Peking regime will be willing to bypass this issue now is unknown. But there is some belief here this may prove true.

The Sino-Soviet conflict is the principal element of change in the situation involving the next round of U.S.-China talks.

If Peking leaders foresee a serious possibility of war with Russia, as they have been telling their own people for the past month, they presumably want to try to prevent the United States and Russia from ganging up against them by assuring American neutrality in advance.

Secretary of State William P. Rogers has declared publicly several times the last six months that U.S. policy is one of neutrality. He emphasized in a speech here Thursday "We have no intention of exploiting" Sino-Soviet differences.

But such information as Washington has gotten from foreign governments about Peking's attitude—and its reading of Chinese propaganda—indicates the Chinese still see themselves encircled by hostile countries, including the United States.

The United States withdrawal of forces from Vietnam is another new element in the situation. The troop pullback is developing

Calley Probe Semi-Secret

FT. BENNING, Ga. (AP) — Attorneys for Lt. William L. Calley Jr., revealed today that tape recordings were made of conversations between helicopter gunships at My Lai on the day the Army officer is accused of murdering 109 Vietnamese civilians.

Maj. Kenneth Raby, a military defense lawyer, referred to the taped conversations at an unusual partially open hearing. There was no indication of what was said in the conversations.

Today's hearing was to determine whether Calley will face a court-martial on a charge of murdering a Vietnamese man about six weeks before the alleged massacre at My Lai.

Calley appeared at the hearing, but he refused to make any statement.

His civilian defense lawyer, George Lattimer, of Salt Lake City, Utah, moved for dismissal of the charges on grounds there was no competent evidence, no right of confrontation for the accused and no right of cross-examination in the hearing.

Col. Mack H. Hopper, the investigating officer, denied the motion.

Although part of today's hearing was open, the hearing on evidence was closed.

The reference to the tape recordings was the first indication that they existed. Raby said Capt. Charles R. Lowellen made the recordings of conversations between helicopters assaulting the village of My Lai on the morning of March 16, 1968, the date of the alleged massacre.

Lowellen was an assistant intelligence officer for Task Force Baker, to which Calley was attached at the time.

Raby objected to the proceedings because, he said, Calley was being denied equal protection of the law. He said the proceedings, which are equated to a grand jury hearing, falls short of such proceedings.

Raby said there are no subpoenas powers. He said also that the investigation is still under way and is being financed by the Army. He said that the defense is receiving no funds in its investigation.

The objections were overruled by Hopper.

Nuns Changing Their Habits As Their Activities Expand

By BENNET DOLTON, AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Roman Catholicism's nuns in the United States, once the silent and submissive symbols of Church stability, are now leaving the calling at a startling rate.

Although their reasons for leaving vary, the dominant new fact is that nuns are in the midst of a female rebellion—no longer willing to be told by male religious authorities how to live their lives to the last detail.

Believing that the struggle is getting them nowhere, many give up in sheer exasperation and drop out. Some believe the church itself is not relevant, or that it is not moving fast enough, or that they are not given a sufficient role in it. Others, of course, leave for a variety of personal reasons.

The ranks fell last year from 178,000 to 167,000. The loss of 9,000 was more than double the decline in 1968, when 4,000 left.

The new cry of thousands of sisters is self-determination—as members of their particular orders, as individuals and as women—in altering their own once-strict rules.

"You just cannot have a man sitting in a chancery office telling you that you must all be in bed at 10 p.m.," remarked a sister involved in public education consultancy in New York City. About to leave her order after 30 years, she asked to be anonymous.

"We cannot stand this intrusion," she continued. "We have a terrible time in our schools with pastors who try to run the school but are not educated and don't know beans about education. This is the kind of thing we're rebelling against."

A vatican decree in 1963 called for modernizing the religious orders. Most sisters eagerly welcomed it. They started their own housecleaning with plenary meetings, consultations, studies, revised constitutions and voting.

Many nuns today work in slum areas, study nontheological subjects for doctorates at secular universities, belong to specialized interfaith panels, hold desks at big publishing houses, and come and go at all hours to all sorts of places beyond just the parochial classrooms or Catholic hospital wards down the street.

But their pace of life and general rules of behavior are still ultimately determined by male outsiders—from the local bishop to Rome—and many nuns find their own outlooks and activities expanding faster than the rules set by men allow. They become impatient and resign.

"As religious women in the church, we protest any domination of our institutes by priests, no matter what their hierarchical status," the National Coalition of American Sisters declared last summer when it formed with 1,100 members. It has since grown to 2,000.

Sister Margaret Ellen Traxler of Chicago, coalition chairman and a nun for 25 years, says her organization helps sisters defend themselves against external interference in establishing new patterns of convent life.

"We hold as inviolable the right of self-determination for religious women," she said.

Not everyone agrees with the argument of the sisters' coalition.

"Actual interference? I think that's exaggerated," said the Rev. John Mescall, associated vicar for religious in the New York Archdiocese. "Most bishops give them a great amount of leeway. In many instances, it's the nuns who contact us for help."

The religious vicar's office

Unabridged Tale of Success Among Dictionary Makers

NEW YORK (AP) — Except for the Holy Bible, the best-selling book at almost any time is likely to be a dictionary, regardless of the best-seller label on the titles that spring from the machines of commercial copywriters.

You won't find one in many hotel rooms, where Christian advocates often place the Bible, but you will find a dictionary in almost every home, office, school, library and dormitory. And that means big business.

Well aware of this, although belatedly, publishers are now flooding the market. Not long ago a new dictionary came out in a generation, but in the past decade many of the big publishers have produced new ones.

Random House, for example, published an unabridged dictionary in 1966 and industry sources now say it has sold 250,000 copies at $25 each over the counter, and perhaps another half-million through book club sales.

Last year American Heritage jumped into the market with a brand-new work for which $4 million reportedly was budgeted at least 10 per cent of the cost for promotion and advertising.

Her prettiest dress was shaped like a Madame Butterfly looked the power of the two. Valentino's dress was delicate and white organza, she is still using smooth double-face wools and gabardines and suits that owe their superb shaping to Mila's wizardry with well-seaming.

Italy Debates Abandoning Motion Picture Censorship

By ENRICO JACOMINI Associated Press Writer ROME (AP) — The Italian movie censor seems on the verge of losing his job but not because of lack of work.

The censor is about to join him in the ranks is the country's film industry. Nudity on the screen has split Italy's filmmakers into two camps. It has also thrown many extras out of work in a country once famous for its through-filled epic.

The movie censorship board's efforts, that definition are not satisfying anyone. Parliament's four major parties have all pledged last summer to protest the end of the board.

A 1962 law called for each film to be examined by a seven-member board. Other critics being distributed. Eight such panels were set up. The board decides whether to allow a film to minor work in a few scenes, reject it altogether or let it pass.

Movie directors, script writers and critics refused to take part in the boards, which were formed largely by lawyers, lawyers and distributors and theater proprietors. The magistrates decided to drop out in 1968.

And Pants or No

Mila's models marched out two by two, like robots, wearing pants suit after suit. The show had been running for at least 20 minutes before a mild length was shown, and then she went back to short skirts.

"Fringed vamp styles in all-pink silk jersey were an eye-catching new introduction to introduce something new, but they looked like something from the 1920s."

The designer reached into the past for one revival—the suit worn with a blouse. The traditional combination had been in vogue since the 1920s, when it was taken over by pants, tunics and vests.

Police Discover Rifle Parts In The Connecticut

MIDDLETOWN, Conn. (AP) — Parts for 16 M-16 rifles were hauled from the Connecticut River during the weekend after apparently having been in the water only a short time, state police said.

Skindivers made sure state and local police retrieved the entire underwater arsenal. Also recovered from 15 feet of water of the town boat-launching ramp were remnants of a cardboard carton that apparently had contained the parts.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation entered the case Sunday after parts for nine of the automatic weapons were dredged up the day before. On Sunday, police discovered the M-16 by accident while searching for a stolen .22-caliber rifle they believed thrown in the river.

Self-confidence—what needs it!—the parent who sees the gift between himself and a son or daughter, but who is fearful to bridge it; the youth who finds himself in an imperfect world but feels powerless to do anything about it; the older person who is unimpaired by change but who resists any kind of innovation; the unionist or businessman who knows what should be done on the job, but who lacks the courage to stand up and say so; the public official who pays more attention to his popularity than to solving tough problems; all of us—individually and collectively—because we are in danger of losing confidence that we can make headway against such challenges as... family breakdown, crime in the streets, arms race, racial tensions, educational unrest, urban decay.

Atty. Flaherty To Retire As Town Democratic Head

Atty. Leo B. Flaherty, for 10 years chairman of the Vernon town committee, has announced he will not seek re-election to that office when the town committee is elected.

In a letter to members of the present town committee, Atty. Flaherty said his decision was based solely on time considerations.

Flaherty said many people who have been actively involved on the local political scene have suggested a revised structure which would permit him to continue to work in the town committee.

To Finance Improvements Water Rate Increase Proposed by O'Neill

A proposed 34 per cent average water-rate increase to finance proposed improvements to Manchester's water supply is being recommended by Director of Public Works William O'Neill.

The proposed improvement, interest (estimated at six per cent) over the 20 years of the bond issue, he stated.

The increased yearly income to the sewer department, O'Neill explains, is needed to cover increased operating costs of the town's new sewer facilities, now under construction.

The schedule for proposed rate increases covers all types of service—from a five-fifths inch sewer to a 36-inch sewer.

Under the proposed water-rate hike, to be discussed by the Board of Selectmen at a public hearing in February or March, average monthly bills for a five-fifths inch sewer would increase approximately 35 to 40 per cent.

This Freshman Learned Ways of Congress Fast

WASHINGTON (AP)—Thomas F. Eagleton, Missouri's freshman senator who used to get lost in the Senate buildings, has learned his way around in one year.

He has spent up on more major issues on the Senate floor than newcomers traditionally have.

For the 40-year-old Eagleton, once a fiery St. Louis prosecutor and former lieutenant governor of Missouri, the introductory year to national politics was hectic.

People tell me, "Tom, you constantly open your mouth in frustration. Why don't you back it in something?" Look, I don't always open my mouth.

NEW HAVEN (AP)—The formation of a Black Caucus for Marcus committee has been announced by State Sen. Ed Hughes.

Modernizing Nuns Change Their Habits

serve as liaison between Terrence Cardinal Cooke and some 8,000 sisters belonging to 101 communities of nuns.

"In the past," said Father Moscall, "sisters could honestly say they did not have the voice they should have been given. But now things have opened up very very quickly in the Church, with people able to do things they couldn't in the past."

One dramatic struggle over the matter concerns the California Immaculate Heart of Mary Sisters and the archbishop of Los Angeles, conservative Cardinal James McIntyre. The 500-member community of nuns reviewed its rules in October 1967. It switched from standard habits to skirts and blouses, allowed flexible prayer disciplines instead of common chapel time, and made other changes.

The cardinal tried to veto the nuns' decisions, threatening to remove them as teachers in their schools of archdiocesan status. Most of them quit the schools in June 1968 rather than give in. The controversy still rages, despite many appeals to the Vatican from both sides.

Many of the older nuns complied with Cardinal McIntyre. Of the 400 nuns who did not, some 300 say they are ready to form a new unofficial order of their own—perhaps this spring—while more than 100 have quit and about 40 others say they are about to do so.

"We have to take people as they are, and that includes bishops," an official from the Vatican, the Rev. Edward Keenan, told a national meeting of mothers superior in St. Louis, in an effort to mollify the archbishop over the Los Angeles case. He observed that sisters will find freedom to go ahead in one place and be held back in another.

Referring to the centuries-old idealistic image of nuns as brides of Christ, one sister exclaimed after the meeting: "It's not our husband we're having trouble with, it's the nuns."

The Rev. Johannes Neumann, church law professor at Germany's Tubingen University and an advocate of more freedom for nuns to run their own affairs, contends that the important place of women in modern society is not reflected in the Church.

"They still are refused real responsibilities. As a result and to a growing extent, educated Catholic women are beginning to be alienated from the Church because they do not find themselves taken seriously."

Using computers to tabulate the results, the U.S. Conference of Major Superiors of Women finished in 1968 a two-year survey of 135,000 American nuns—75 per cent of the total—to learn how the sisters thought they could best respond to the Vatican's renewal decrees.

Most of the nuns responding to the poll regarded the Vatican document's appeal for "adaptation to the changed conditions of our time" as also a call for their own increased personal development away from a retirement existence.

One of the 40 sisters who prepared and conducted the survey was Sister Elena Mallis, an attractive and scholarly nun who is studying modern in outlook—yet satisfied to stay a member of her congregation, the Sisters of the Holy Cross.

"I live in a convent," said the 30-year-old woman. "But it's not a convent of the mind. I don't have a convent mental state, a fixed way, a continuing expert opinion."

She is finishing a doctorate in theology, meanwhile staying at a convent in mid-Manhattan with 15 other nuns, most of whom teach at a parochial school next door. She spends some of her free time skating in Central Park and recently took up Yoga. Sister Elena says she has already learned the difficult "perfect lotus" position.

"I feel I live creatively today as a human being," she said. But three or four of her best friends have left her order. Some have married and have families.

"There is a certain sense in which their leaving hurts," she said. "But I think there are some people who have to leave the institution."

One of them, Sister Maryellen Muckenlirn, was a leader in the relatively smooth updating process which the Holy Cross sisters have undertaken in their rules. A theologian and author of three books, Maryellen said when she left that she no longer could justify "trying to alter the relationship between secular and monastic patterns of existence."

"Personally," she said, "secular life seems to be the real life, the place of human growth, the place where the spirit of Christ makes demands on me that are both difficult and genuine."

Cold Wave Strikes Again In the South

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A mass of cold air surged into parts of the South Sunday night and early today as the hard winter continued over much of the nation.

Cold wave warnings were posted from Kentucky down into Tennessee, Mississippi and Texas as with freezing rain, sleet and some snow pelting the southern plains and into the Appalachians.

Travelers warnings were in effect from Texas to Georgia and North Carolina with snow accumulations up to four inches expected in the higher mountains of Tennessee.

Authorities in Texas were warning that ice buildup during the morning hours might cause damage to livestock, trees, shrubbery and power lines.

The cold blast covered most of the nation's midsection, bringing with it record lows for some areas from Texas to Michigan.

Dubuque, Iowa, recorded a high of 4 below; establishing a record for Jan. 18. A similar record was set at Rockford, Ill., with a zero reading. A low temperature of 14 below Sunday at Lansing, Mich., broke the previous low of 13 below set in 1880.

Subzero temperatures were expected to continue today across a broad front from northern plains to New England, with the thermometer ranging from 10 below to near 40 below.

Snow flurries were reported in parts of the Great Lakes, while snow fell in the mid-Missouri Valley and in the northern Rockies. One to three inches of new snow fell in a six-hour span from northern Idaho to central Montana.

The West Coast was feeling the pangs of winter, as well, with cold warnings in effect from eastern Washington to western Montana and gale-wind rains along the northwest Pacific coast in the early morning hours.

The only clear dry weather in the nation on Monday morning was in the Southwest as well as from the north central states into the Northeast.

Freezing temperatures ranged from 69 at Key West, Fla., to 24 below zero at Grand Forks, N.D.

Black Lung Victims Claim Newly Won Disability Pay
WASHINGTON (AP) — Fighting black and short of breath, unexpected thousands of sickened coal miners are claiming millions of dollars in newly won disability benefits for black lung disease.

Most of the applications are from aged miners, reports the Social Security Administration, or from widows of miners who died 20 to 30 years ago.

"X" marks many of the applications flowing in from the hole-in-the-ground coal mines and is totally disabled due to black lung. Regional Social Security offices, particularly in Pennsylvania and Virginia, say they have had to be retroactive to the time of the application.

The minimum qualification for a miner is that he worked at least 10 years in an underground coal mine and is totally disabled due to black lung. Applications have come from coal-rich Pennsylvania where 28,744 persons have filed claims as to 14 in California and 13 in Arizona where little coal is dug but where some miners have retired.

The Social Security Administration, which administers the law, said 18,459 applications were filed the first week. The agency, in noting the number, had estimated a total of about 30,000 would be received in the coming weeks. But in the following week alone it received another 26,700, bringing the total Jan. 16 to 45,209.

In the dreary hard-coal country of eastern Pennsylvania, 100 persons visited Wilkes-Barre's Social Security office within two hours of the first working day after the bill became law. In West Virginia, 300 statements were taken in the first five hours. And at Pileville, Ky., 219 applications were filed by 10 a.m. with another 400 persons waiting outside in the snow.

The law provides monthly benefits ranging from $136 to a single man to $272 for one with two dependents who is stricken with the dread coal mining disease known to doctors as pneumoconiosis, but referred to in the mines as black lung. The disease, brought on by the inhalation of coal dust, blackens the lungs and slowly destroys the tissues. It is estimated to afflict 100,000 active and retired miners, most of whom are not covered under the law, expressed reservation over disability provisions, saying the cost of the payments could run as high as $38 million a year and would be a heavy burden on its budget.

POW Kin Disappointed: Heard Broadcast Before

WASHINGTON (AP) — Radio Moscow's global broadcast of news of war brought disappointment to a family of a missing American soldier. Linda Johnson of Overland Park, Kan., wife of Capt. Harold E. Johnson, said she was mildly disappointed that it was the same tape she heard Dec. 20.

After the 30-minute shortwave broadcast Monday night, relatives of the men said they had heard the recorded messages before.

The State Department protested that the broadcast was an attempt to Russian propaganda against the United States.

Russia billed the broadcasts as holiday messages from U.S. prisoners in Vietnam to their relatives. The Soviets said the messages "shed light on certain aspects of the war against Vietnam."

"The State Department has long been conducting a stubborn campaign against North Vietnam, accusing it of mistreating captured GIs. We want all our men to win, and we want them to win in health and full of hope."

The military trial judge, Lt. Col. Reid W. Kennedy, announced that he understood the defense would call as witnesses Laird, Secretary of the Army Stanley Resor and the Army Chief of Staff, Gen. William Westmoreland who was commander in Vietnam at the time of the alleged massacre March 16, 1968.

"If the motion is granted for these gentlemen to appear, facts would be disclosed that are not now known and thus generate even more publicity," said Kennedy.

Thus, he asked prosecution and defense attorneys, should the entire proceedings be closed to the public and news media.

"I recognize Lt. Calley's right to a fair and open trial and the public and press will not be excluded from the proceedings, requests such," he added.

Defense attorneys immediately went into a juggle on the over broadcast from Saturday, killing four men, were making similar landing approaches to the field, according to a federal investigator.

Then the civilian defense attorney, George Lattimer, told the court: "Under the Constitution, this calls for a public trial. I'm not going to waive any constitutional rights of this man here."

Kennedy thereupon said the proceedings would be
