Nixon Style: Brisk, Direct

Nixon's preference for openly reading his speech marked an abrupt departure from the numbing past. Both Johnson and Kennedy liked to use a prompting device that made it look as though they had memorized their speeches.

Johnson frequently would look directly at someone when he was making a point—such as a recruit or committee chairman when discussing legislation.

And where Kennedy liked to turn to past historians, and statements for quotes to illuminate his remarks, Nixon stuck to the conventional rhetoric of the occasion, drawing only once on an outside source.

Toward the end of his speech, he departed from his text to say, "I want to President Johnson as Jefferson in 1802: 'We act for ourselves but for the whole human race.'" Here's what some members of the Senate and House had to say about President Nixon's State of the Union message:

—Sen. Ralph W. Yarborough, D-Tex., called it a good speech, adding that he found it sound like "Democratic speeches of the past. It reminded me of Roosevelt, Truman, Kennedy and Johnson."

—Sen. Warren G. Magnuson, D-Wash., said he got a bit nostalgic "because it seemed to me as if we were using some of our old material. This was a good speech, but the promise and the fulfillment are two different things."

—Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., said Nixon had described "the goals we all seek in the decade ahead." He said he was disappointed Nixon did not say how he, as President, would curb rising prices.

—Rep. Gerald R. Ford, the House Republican leader, said Nixon put national priorities the way most Americans do—peace, solvency, safety and improvement of the quality of life.

—Sen. Charles Goodell, R-N.Y., complained that Nixon's Vietnam statement was a repetition of the "symbols of the past as justification for a war that we can win over there."

—Sen. J. William Fulbright, D-Ark., chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, said he was disappointed Nixon's statement that the war in Vietnam but in Laos. "The situation is better than it was," Fulbright said.

The Court's No Quorum Day
 This business of judicial quorum day, of course, was carried so far we would find ourselves being no judge qualified to sit on our courts.

And it so happened, the other day, that the Supreme Court, so much in the public eye because of controversy over recent nominees to it, found itself paralyzed and unable to continue with a particular case.

It takes a quorum of six justices to hear a case for the Supreme Court.

In a case concerning oil shale rights the other day, two Justices, Byron White and Thurgood Marshall, had disqualified themselves, apparently because they had been associated with the Justice Department which represented the federal government as one of the parties in the case.

Then, when one of the government lawyers arguing the present case mentioned that a decision against the government would be a benefit to a certain oil company, Justice John M. Harlan abruptly rose, went over to Chief Justice Warren Burger, and disqualified himself. He had apparently had at one time, or perhaps still retained by stock ownership, some connection with the oil company in question.

At this point, there were only five Justices left qualified to hear the case, one less than the required quorum.

If Justice Carwell makes it to the Supreme Court, and turns out not to own any of the oil stock in question, the Court will be able to resume hearing the case in question. If Justice Carwell should feel that he had to disqualify himself, for some reason, no one knows when the Court could ever act on the case.

Eventually, we might be forced to soften our concentration on ideal ethics, and concede that it might be better to trust a good man not to be swayed by his own personal interest or association than to wait for some other judge in whom lower calibre and fewer involvements might be feared. The danger is an exclusive concentration on honor's due ethics is that only the perfect zero of a man could be guaranteed free and clear of all involvement in all potential conflict of interest. It constitutes an interesting pragmatic test - whether our current burst of insistence on compliance with the highest ethical standards will result in raising or lowering the quality of the public service we get.

quickly outlined. He will be under constant, unremitting attack for his cold-blooded budget savagery until his City Council knuckles under and restores some part of the cut he made in the education budget.

That is what happens in Manchester whenever a general manager tries to restrain spending in the educational sector.

So one answer to the question of why city managers never seem to come in holding the appropriations line and keeping the tax rate stable is that nobody stands up alongside them when they do try to make present day government's biggest and most important functioning—that in the field of education—slow down in its spending compulsions.

Return To Fortress America?

President Kennedy's inaugural speech was delivered nine years ago this month. The passing of attitudes as much as of time is measured by the tone of some well-remembered passages:

"Let every nation know, whether it was well or ill that we shall pay any price, bear any burden, meet any hardship, support any friend, oppose any foe, in order to assure the survival and success of liberty."

It does not believe that any of us would exchange places with any other people or any other generation:

"Ask not what your country will do for you. Ask what you can do for your country."

President Kennedy's words, it uttered today would be likely to produce very smiles, smers, or the burning of draft cards, and the response would be most vehemently hostile to the continuity to which he appealed most—the liberals, the intellectuals, many labor unions, the Negroes, and above all the young. What stands out in these passages read nine years later is the absence of doubt, the lack of apology in defining America's world role, the open challenge to the uncommitted and whites that great times lay between communism and the West, between what Kennedy saw simply as tyranny and liberty.

This was Kennedy on the threshold of his presidency, more naive than he was later. He did not have the fog of hindsight that we have today, and he was not yet aware of the vicissitudes of the world, and a world that seemed full of blacks and whites that great times lay between communism and the West, between what Kennedy saw simply as tyranny and liberty.

In Vietnam, where the struggle was keep turning grey; in Southern Africa, where capitalists have proved no guarantee for freedom; in Greece, where the ideals for which President Truman and Ernest Bevin fought are being betrayed; in Cuba, where the new private schools are proving as amovient as it has been an every preceding aspect of the school-age problem.

In part, perhaps, that ambivalence stems from the fact that Kennedy's Nixon's predilection toward big government in decision-making, but in the segregated school question, this has been underlined by the lack of any riding policy, however vague, by the President. Apart from his obvious political desire to offend the South, Mr. Nixon has never made clear—publicly or privately—exactly where he stands on school segregation.

This agonistic proved successful through 1969 in boosting the fortunes of the Southern Republican Party. The Supreme Court's new solicits for immediate desegregation have now transferred the onus in the South from the executive branch to the judiciary.

With the school segregation question thereby depoliticized, Southern Republican leaders who Mr. Nixon makes solid gains at the expense of George C. Wallace.

That's why these Southern party leaders were overwrought with the anti-segregation bombings which they are in Washington. The Negroes, who thought that equal rights meant economic equality as well as equality before the law, have been disappointed.

What has particularly wounded the national ego is the delict which these difficulties have evoked abroad. The moral drumming which the United States has undergone—over the state withdrawal in Vietnam—may produce many results. Beneficial, it could make America more aware of the need to live up to its ideals of freedom and equality at home if it is to be respected abroad (another warning that Kennedy gave in 1961).

But the world ought to realize the dangers of the American trend towards isolationism. When Vietnam is finished the United States will show strong distress for return to the world, a dramatic increase in the concentration of domestic problems. (Already it is being prophesied that the 1970-1 Budget will mark a reversal of profits from the global preoccupations of the fifties, and give a more realistic picture of the world's state of affairs.)

How far might this isolationism go? Will it ever lead to a withdrawal of troops from Europe? With a new resolve to again to become involved in an Asian landmass, it could be averted elsewhere, particularly in America's belief that Western Europe could do more toward its own defense. Will it be channelled away from the Third World and into the ghettos of New York, Chicago, and Los Angeles?

There are dangers that the world should acknowledge as it enjoys the spectacle of the richest and most powerful nation bloodily its nose at home and abroad. No British post-Imperialism, no Western European envy, no Afro-Asian ambivalence about systems of government would constitute a world hostility that drove the United States into its present isolation.

THE NATHAN HALE HOME: Pen and Ink by Bruce Kingsbury

Inside Report
 by Rowland Evans Jr. and Robert D. Novak

WASHINGTON—Although anxious Southern Republican leaders were personally assured by the White House Jan. 12 that it planned no assault on mushrooming private segregated schools, the truth was that nothing so close to a firm Presidential policy on this issue had been reached.

Nor has it been reached since. In the absence of Presidential direction, a dozen policy-makers in large Cabinet-level departments and the White House are making a bewildering variety of discordant proposals. The latest episode in the saga of school segregation. The Nixon administration's attitude toward the new private schools is proving as amovient as it has been an every preceding aspect of the school-age problem.

A Thought for Today
 Sponsored by the Manchester Council of Churches

Show confidence in others. Reflect first on the meaning of the word. It is derived from "com" (with) and "fidere" (faith or trust). The dictionary defines it as "the state of feeling of trust in or reliance upon another person... a state of faith or good trust between persons."

Your life takes on a new dimension when you enrich the lives of others by placing a heartfelt confidence in those who merit it. In addition, you can render a valuable service to everybody by giving needed assurance to persons who are disheartened, frustrated or embittered. No one should put foolish trust in those who would abuse or betray it. But many of us have too little trust rather than too much.

St. Paul touched upon the ultimate source of our confidence: "There is nothing I cannot master with the help of the One who gives me strength." (Phil. 4:13)

Donnelly Asks Support
For Teen Center Plan

State Rep. Thomas J. Donnelly, Republican from the South Windsor district, has asked for support of the Youth Council's plan to construct a teen center in South Windsor. Donnelly urged the people and businessmen of the town to get behind the project, now gaining full momentum, by coming forward to donate whatever they can—funds, labor, material or service.

Donnelly explained that the town's Youth Council plans to start construction this spring on the site on Nevins Rd. near the high school, with completion targeted for September. They will complete the building without assessment of the town's taxpayers by use of donated funds, labor and materials.

The project has been endorsed by several of the town's governmental, educational and civic leaders as a worthy, practical and needed project. The facility, when complete, it will house nearly 10,000 sq. ft. of donated funds, labor and materials.

Donnelly said that the building will be a place where teenagers and the town's senior citizens.

Rep. Donnelly said, "I urge the people of South Windsor to join me and many of our fellow citizens in expressing their worthy and admirable project for the youth and senior citizens of our town."

Poland Fears Interference In Discussions with Bonn

The West German government announced today that Brandt in his letter Thursday to East German Premier Willi Brandt proposed talks between their governments on mutual declarations renouncing the use of force "on the basis of non-discrimination."

Brandt said such talks would provide an opportunity for "a wide-ranging exchange of views on all questions between our two states, including relations between them on the basis of equality."

The chancellor added that such talks should be able to bring up all matters, consideration and increased importance for Poland and West Germany.

The information said the Polish foreign minister, Jozef Piazanski, was to be greeted by Chancellor Willy Brandt by an emissary from Warsaw as a resumption of progress to begin the talks in February, although the exact date has not been set.

The Soviets and East German reportedly would like to see Bonn give diplomatic recognition to East Germany before other European Communist governments make any progress in talks with Bonn.

Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko has reportedly taken a hard line on East German recognition in talks with West German Ambassador Holm Althaus.

East German Communist party chief Walter Ulbricht is believed to be unhappy about the enthusiastic Polish response to Bonn's initiatives because it threatens to undercut his regime.

The West German government announced today that Brandt in his letter Thursday to East German Premier Willi Brandt proposed talks between their governments on mutual declarations renouncing the use of force "on the basis of non-discrimination."

Brandt said such talks would provide an opportunity for "a wide-ranging exchange of views on all questions between our two states, including relations between them on the basis of equality."

The chancellor added that such talks should be able to bring up all matters, consideration and increased importance for Poland and West Germany.

The information said the Polish foreign minister, Jozef Piazanski, was to be greeted by Chancellor Willy Brandt by an emissary from Warsaw as a resumption of progress to begin the talks in February, although the exact date has not been set.

The Soviets and East German reportedly would like to see Bonn give diplomatic recognition to East Germany before other European Communist governments make any progress in talks with Bonn.

Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko has reportedly taken a hard line on East German recognition in talks with West German Ambassador Holm Althaus.

East German Communist party chief Walter Ulbricht is believed to be unhappy about the enthusiastic Polish response to Bonn's initiatives because it threatens to undercut his regime.

BYBLOS

Colonnade from the Roman period (64 B.C.-A.D. 330) was originally border of street, has been rebuilt after removal to permit excavations.

Gold and bronze dagger found in the Temple of the Obelisks. The handle shows Egyptian influences, the sheath Mesopotamian. Middle Bronze Age (1800-1600 B.C.).

The ancient seaport of Byblos may be the oldest, continuously inhabited city in the world. It is situated in the Lebanon known as Phoenicia in ancient times, about 25 miles north of Beirut. The history of the city spans 7,000 years—even in Phoenician legend it was believed to be the oldest city on earth.

About 5000 B.C. a small Neolithic fishing community settled there. From that date onward the site has been continuously occupied and various civilizations have succeeded one another as the ages have passed. Its position at a crossroads for trade and cultural exchange in antiquity meant that it became a highly cosmopolitan city whose influences were spread far beyond the Phoenician coast.

For several hundred years the name Byblos was not used for settlements on the site, and the exact location of the city was unknown and lost to history. It was rediscovered in 1860, and since then archeological research has been carried on, uncovering layer by layer traces of Neolithic, Bronze Age, Egyptian, Greco-Roman, Arab, Byzantine and medieval cultures.

But traces of Byblos are extant in everyday life, also, linking us with the times when it was a rich and creative center of activities for the known world. For example, in Greek the word "byblos" was used for papyrus—probably because Byblos was a center for the papyrus trade. Later, books were called "biblia," because of the use of papyrus as a writing material, and our word, Bible, is derived from this. And the earliest known form of the Phoenician 22-letter alphabet, the first of its kind, from which our own alphabet is descended, was found in Byblos in 1923. It formed part of the carving on the stone sarcophagus of King Ahiram and dates from at least 1000 B.C.

These pictures of Byblos today appear in "Byblos Through the Ages," by Nina Jidejian, a new account of the ancient site, first to be published in English.

Silver coin of King Ayinel, Late Iron Age-Persian period (550-330 B.C.). Script is Phoenician.

Sarcophagus of King Ahiram, who ruled in the period 1250-1000 B.C., bears along the lid an inscription in earliest known form of Phoenician 22-letter alphabet (from which our alphabet, via Greece, derives). Late Bronze-early Iron Age (1600-900 B.C.).

Now Moscow Falls Prey To Western Traffic Jam

MOSCOW (AP)—The traffic jam has come to Moscow. It's called "propka," or squeeze. Snow and ice slow traffic to a crawl at this time of year, but major tangles that completely halt vehicles for 15 to 20 minutes are relatively new phenomena in the Soviet capital.

"I've never seen it like this before," says a Moscow cabbie. "One damn propka after another. Used to be you could always get through on the Ring Road but even that's getting bad."

Visitors who arrive primed with tales of Moscow's broad avenues and shortage of automobiles find scenes reminiscent of a mid-Manhattan rush hour.

Moscow's traffic woes can hardly be blamed on too many cars. This city of seven million has about 80,000 privately owned automobiles and 14,000 taxis, a ratio of about one car per 80 persons. This compares to a ratio of one car per 200 persons in the Soviet Union as a whole; the U.S. ratio is one car for every three persons.

Moscow taxi drivers, as garulous as their Western counterparts, blame the jams on trucks, too many pedestrians, and traffic cops. But Russian driving habits, confounding regulations and artfully concealed traffic signs share the guilt.

"Wherever you find a propka, you'll find a cop right in the middle making it worse," complains one cabbie.

"It's the peasants in their trucks," grumbles another. "They drive around gawking at the city instead of delivering their produce."

The Ring Road around the city center is supposed to bypass trucks and motorists driving through the capital. But as the cabbie pointed out: "It's too boring to drive around it. The muzhiks like to see the big city and drive past the Kremlin."

Pedestrians are flagrant jaywalkers, motorists are masters at cutting in front of one another. Whistle blowing and baton waving by numerous traffic cops tend to add to the confusion.

Westerners liken Moscow driving to "one big game of chicken."

Two lumbering Volgas shoulder aside a sprightly Moskvitch and race for a single opening at an intersection. The drivers glare at each other. Pedestrians scatter in their path. One Volga chickens out and veers off.

"You scum," the driver's angry shout follows the victor.

Sometimes these impromptu drag races result in body contact. Volgas will strike glancing blows and career off. Drivers seem unmindful of an extra dent, and seldom stop to check the damage.

Moscow's main avenues are wide, with room enough for four lanes of traffic in either direction. But lane markings are nonexistent. Slower-moving trucks and cars never observe the keep-right rule. Aggressive jockeying for position is the only way to keep moving.

Road signs are small and hard to see. Most are placed along the curb. Thus, a motorist wanting to make a left turn at a wide boulevard has to crane his head to the right to find out if it is permitted.

Traffic policemen who nab a violator can either clip a hole in his driver's license—three holes and it's suspended—or demand a ruble fine. Some cops seem more prone to pocket rubles than punch holes.

Armed female sidewalk shovellers and footfalls of snow plows greet every snowfall, and streets are usually cleared in hours. It's just as well, since snow tires can't be found.

Russians who have somehow managed to save up the price of a car have three choices—a Zaporozhitz minicar costing 2,800 rubles, nearly three times the average annual wage; a 5,000-ruble Moskvitch, resembling the Italian Fiat; or a larger Volga costing about 6,000 rubles. The Volga looks like a mid-60s Studebaker and is twice as heavy.

The waiting time for a Moskvitch or Zaporozhitz is three to six years. The list of applicants for the Volga has grown so long the state car agency stopped accepting new names last year.

Two other makes are reserved for Communist party officials. The Chalka, which looks like the old Oldsmobile, is for Kremlin ministers and lower-level dignitaries. The Zil, a look-alike to the Lincoln Continental, is reserved for Politburo and Central Committee members.

Chalkas and Zils speed down the center of streets regardless of the 35 mile an hour speed limit. Only a rain cop blows his whistle at a Zil.

Moscow car owners are expected to make minor repairs. There are many to make, since cars are poorly assembled and badly tuned. The 11 service garages make major repairs, but spare parts are hard to find.

There are seven pay parking lots in Moscow and 33 gas stations. Many stations have only low-octane fuel or are reserved for official cars, buses or trucks. An hour's wait for a tankful at the others is not uncommon.

Five-year-plan figures for car production indicate the propka in Moscow will get worse. The himself, who enjoys shocking his family by showing it to them and perhaps causing suspicion on some particular neighbor for it. But apparently there has only been one instance in which a booby-trapping was so real it could be traced to a suspect who admitted having done it. That was way back in 1964, and the woman who admitted it was adjudged insane and placed in a mental institution.

The Los Angeles reporter could find no verified instance in which actual harm had occurred to any child as a result of one of these reported cruelties. There have been two arrests for alleged booby-trapping, one in Philadelphia in 1969 and one in Detroit in 1968, and both suspects were released after investigation determined that the men had been the innocent victims of neighborhood children who accused them out of spite.

Although this has been the actual result and outcome of all the yearly alarm over the possibility of razor blades buried in fruit or in unwrapped candy bars, the Los Angeles investigation found that there has been very little publicity for or attention to such actual results. Each year there is the pre-Halloween alarm, and each year there are, like clockwork, the next day reports of fiendish horrors, but there never seems to be much publicity for the eventual outcome of such stories.

The Los Angeles investigation could find, on the streets of Los Angeles, scores of persons who had read the story about the inhuman prankster who had fed a fatal dose of heroin to a five year old boy. None of them had read the subsequent news that the story was false.

As we said before, there is enough ugliness and horror in this world of ours without having people go out of their way to make it up where it doesn't exist.

Hiking And The Ecology

The ecologists are beginning to make themselves into a kind of nuisance, which is far for the course for do-gooders who get up so much self-propulsion they can never conceive of any eventual stopping place.

They have taken themselves way over the top, literally and figuratively, in their latest worry. No sooner have they succeeded in gaining all kinds of public support for the preservation of some of the great natural monuments and scenes of our land than they started worrying over the possibility that too many people may start enjoying the beauty which is being conserved.

To be specific, the New York State Department of Environmental Conservation has now begun to worry publicly over the possibility that too many mountaineers in the Adirondacks are making such heavy use of the mountain trails that they are encouraging an erosion that is "endangering a precious, fragile ecology" in high peak regions.

The conservationist worry about the possible damage done by mountaineers is not without some tangible reason. Too many feet might wear a trail down into a gully; there is plant life on high mountain levels which can't stand scuffing. But the balanced verdict would still seem to be that the ecologists are reaching for more trouble than they need when, in the midst of their campaigning to preserve the natural environment for the benefit of all the people, they leap ahead into an alarm over the number of people who may learn to enjoy that natural environment in person.

Let's continue to operate, for a while, on the proposition that hiking has not yet become a major threat to the ecology.

A Lift From The Leafless Trees

It is always surprising at this time of year, that the trees still delight the eye and warm the spirit though they are bare of leaves. It seems we forget, during the spring-through-fall enjoyment of their sparkling colors, that the shape and texture of trees are enormously pleasing.

As we behold the branches, now etched clearly in myriad configuration, by an ever-changing sky. There they are, the delicate trees, like artists' models, expressing essences of life beneath the outer adornment.

The dogwoods, even without their blossoms and berries, have much to offer after their winy, withered leaves are illuminating the ground. The brown masses pattern of their trunks, their tender twigs make these relatively small trees a delicate treat.

The elephantine framework of an ancient maple is a jolly sight. The girth of the lower branches is almost as ample as the stout, furrowed trunk. Here is a pattern of the past, a joining of two stable elements that only the centuries could achieve. The branches of smaller maples curve upward and outward with a grace that must have inspired the design of a vase or the stance of a ballet dancer.

The post-foliage arboreal array includes the mottled brightness of the grey-white sycamores, the black satin cherry trunk, the smooth sinuosity of the handsome beeches, the gnarly sprawl of the mature oaks, the straight, slender striated strength of the tall tulip tree, the blade-like patches of the flinty hickory.

Inside Report

Agnew Stays

By Rowland Evans Jr. and Robert D. Novak

WASHINGTON — White House assurance that Vice President Spiro Agnew will definitely be on the 1972 ticket was quietly but positively given last Tuesday to a most important Republican power bloc: The Southern state party chairmen.

That message was conveyed to the most controversial Vice Southern states by the White House political aide Harry Dent, and was gleefully received. In fact, if Dent had not conveyed such assurance, the party's Southern wing would have rebelled instantly and noisily, with repercussions reaching to Election Day, 1972. Thus, the Southern wing would have rebelled instantly and noisily, with repercussions reaching to Election Day, 1972. Thus, the Southern wing would have rebelled instantly and noisily, with repercussions reaching to Election Day, 1972.

Plans at the highest level of the Nixon administration to put the lame-duck Rep. Clark MacGregor or of Minnesota in the White House in overall charge of Congressional relations are running into backstage sniping from Republicans both on Capitol Hill and in the White House.

MacGregor, having run and lost a hopeless race for the Senate against Robert H. Humphrey, is earmarked for high office. The two most powerful men in Washington, President Nixon and Atty. Gen. John Mitchell, have great confidence in his abilities. Accordingly, MacGregor is now mulling over an offer to take overall command of the White House's of-ten-criticized Congressional lobbying operation (with the top-drawer rank of Presidential counselor).

As this seeped out, MacGregor's colleagues in the House Republican cloakroom began griping. No former member of Congress has ever been the President's top lobbyist, and some Republicans feel MacGregor would be inhibited in dealing with old friends.

Moreover, there is criticism both on the Hill and in the White House that the MacGregor move implies criticism of William Timmons, presently Mr. Nixon's chief lobbyist. Despite all the President's campaign talk of a do-nothing Congress, Timmons did an excellent job of moving Nixon's legislative proposals last year — particularly considering the President's own unconcern with the legislative process.

They can't do anything about it, but national leaders of the Democratic party are still fuming that Republican Nelson Rockefeller's successful campaign for a fourth term as governor of New York was publicly endorsed by one of the Democratic National Committee's best known members: Charles Evers, of Mississippi, leading Negro politician of the Deep South.

Evers, answering questions after an Oct. 13 speech at Union College in upstate New York, said: "I'm not a Republican or a Democrat, but if I could vote both teachers — the ancient one from whom we receive our text, and the modern one — seemed to be pretty well agreed on one thing: that parents have certain responsibilities. Most delinquents, so the psychologists tell us, start on the road to ruin before they are six. It is so easy to blame outside causes for juvenile crimes and adolescent lawlessness, when parental neglect and lack of proper supervision in the home are primarily responsible.

If you don't control your child in the high chair it is rather hard for others to control him in high school. "Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old, he will not depart from it." (Proverbs 22:6)

The money collected will be used to purchase badly needed equipment for the pool such as balls, preservers and floats. These funds will go into a general expense fund for our current year. Other expenses will be met such as insurance and stationery which occur each year.

Town Aide Resigns, Takes New Position

Administrative Assistant Keith E. Frederick has resigned his Manchester post, effective Dec. 11. He has accepted the position of executive director of the newly formed Miamonaghela Valley Council of Governments in Pennsylvania.

The Council, composed of 15 member-towns with a population of 47, has its office in North Belle Vernon, Pa., a town 35 miles south of Pittsburgh.

Frederick, 34, has been Manchester administrative assistant since Dec. 1 of last year when the position was created. Formerly, he had filled the post under a temporary arrangement. Before that, he had served a six-month internship under a cooperative program with the University of Pennsylvania's Wharton School.

Frederick holds a master's degree in administration from the Wharton School and a B.A. degree in government administration from Pennsylvania State College. He is a native of Boylston, Pa., but lived in Bedford, Pa. most of his life.

Frederick is married to the former Karen of Johnstown, Pa. The couple has two children, a daughter, Kathleen.

Frederick, as administrative assistant, was responsible for the annual reports and budget requests for the town. He was working with the other town employees.

Weiss today called Frederick "very well qualified for his new position." He has a wide range of experience and personality.

He said, "I am sorry to see him go, but I can understand his leaving. It is a wonderful opportunity for him. I wish him well."

HELEC records show 300 households out of power for 25 minutes and 600 households out for about four and one-half hours.

When the lights went out in Bolton and eastern Manchester, 710 last night, the cause was a transformer near the intersection of South Rd. and the North Rd.

Power was restored to Manchester and a portion of Bolton in 25 minutes, but many other residents reported no power.

VALENCIA, Calif. — She was like a beautiful young woman at one time, powdered and bejeweled and smiling in the warm sunlight of a summer afternoon. But as the years went by, her beauty faded and her voice cracked, then fell silent, and she sat there, a frumpy, aged, unwanted and unappreciated figure. The sun's rays turned harsh, mocking illumination for her twisted charms.

Now, she—a merry-go-round if you will, a 58-year-old Savin Rock carousel—is undergoing a $10,000 face-lift. The wrinkles and furrows and rags are being smoothed out, the luster and sparkle returned to her face, the grace and dignity to her carriage.

The carousel, built by the Philadelphia Toboggan Co. and operated at Savin Rock Amusement Park in West Haven, is being refurbished by Action Animation Co. in Fullerton, Calif., for use in the Magic Mountain Amusement Park.

When the carousel was final-ly torn down and the amusement park was closed to make way for an urban renewal project, Magic Mountain officials had it dismantled, crated and shipped to Fullerton where a team of workmen is busy re-carving the horses, repainting the panels, replacing the lights and restoring the paper to roll organ.

And when the job is complete and the carousel is in place and open to traffic, Eugene Lemmon, General Manager of Magic Mountain, said: "The carousel has 64 hand-carved, white pine horses—the mane and tail of each original, painted with gold leaf, worked in the Penny Arcade there. I also put the brass rings into the chute for the other kids to grab at on the merry-go-round."

"I'm gonna ride it again. I may even get to see it while they're working on it."

It will be a nostalgic, if long-delayed reunion... a man and his merry-go-round.

"But it is," he bubbled, "and when he read about the carousel restoration in a local newspaper, he was sure it couldn't be the same one."

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Charlton Heston, president of the Screen Actors Guild, says world movie picture production is at its lowest ebb since I can remember.

At the annual meeting of guild members Sunday, Heston said high interest rates and foreign competition "have made it almost impossible for studio and feature production as we once knew it to survive."

Heston said, however, that the budding video cassette industry, which will enable users to play canned movies on their own TV sets, may prove to be "just the dish for hungry actors" by filling employment.

Thruway Closed By Heavy Snow

SUFBALO, N.Y. (AP) — Heavy snow today closed a 70-mile stretch of the New York State Thruway early today.

Thruway officials said traffic was halted between Buffalo and the Pennsylvania state line when falling snow reduced visibility to zero.

It was the first time this season snow forced a Thruway closing.

The weather bureau predicted heavy snow today for the northern and westernmost parts of the state with accumulations in excess of nine inches tapering off to the east.

Accumulations of one to three inches were expected in western central New York. Flurries were forecast for the eastern part of the state.

Snow began falling in Buffalo before 6 a.m.

Rustlers Steal Caged Buck Deer

BRIDGEPORT (AP) — A week before, vandals apparently fed beer to two buck deers at the Boardwalk Park Zoo. This weekend, one of the bucks was stabbed or shot and its body dragged away.

Robert McLaughlin, zoo director, called the killing, which police were investigating, "the most vicious of many acts of vandalism which have occurred at the zoo in recent months."

Russell F. Neary, president of the Board of Park Commissioners, said Saturday he would take steps to close the park to the public overnight.

The victim was a 3-year-old deer named "Sam," which shared an enclosure with a 5-year-old named "Herman."

McLaughlin theorized that after the deer was fatally wounded late Friday or early Saturday while near one side of the enclosure, he staggered to the other side, leaving a trail of blood. The animal apparently

Inflation Alert Draft To Hold Strong Language

WASHINGTON (AP) — A forthcoming inflation alert in the White House is expected to contain some of the strongest language yet aimed at burdening contract negotiations amid the nation's work force.

Official sources say, however, that the alert this week, the second to be issued by the President's Council of Economic Advisors, will fall well short of an "incomes policy."

In other words, the administration is not yet prepared to invoke pressuring tactics such as voluntary wage-price guidelines in the campaign to slow the upward spiral of income versus costs.

Nonetheless, said one source, said the new report "will be a little warmer" than the first anti-inflation report issued August.

Administration economists have been appealing modest increases in negotiation of wage increases, and this pattern is expected to gain more emphasis in the coming alert.

The new report was delayed for some days by the order of the Council to deal with two significant wage developments.

One is the three-year package offered by General Motors to end the United Auto Workers strike, with an estimated ultimate annual cost of $1 billion to the company.

The other is the recommendation of a presidential emergency board for pay increases averaging 11 per cent a year for three years to ward off a strike by about 800,000 railroad workers.

These proposed increases have been criticized widely as setting a probable pattern for other union wage talks, reinforcing precedents already set by the 18 per cent yearly gains won by the Teamsters last spring and the approximately 15 per cent annual boosts provided in a new settlement for construction workers.

At a time when price increases seem to be leveling somewhat, industry spokesmen complain that the new round of wage settlements assures built-in cost hikes that will force prices upward for years to come unless there are unexpectedly strong surges in productivity-output-per-man-hour.

Tolland Town Receives State Funds Toward Purchase of Park

It was a long five year wait, but the town of Tolland finally received a check for $11,800 representing the state's share of the purchase price of Crandall's Park under the Open Space Act.

Accepting the hand delivered check Friday afternoon, First Selectman Charles Thifault noted its receipt marks the successful completion of one of his top priority items since he assumed office.

The check was delivered by Richard Wallace, assistant coordinator of the state Open Space Program of the Department of Agriculture and Natural Resources.

Wallace had high praise for Thifault's actions in finally obtaining the grant for the town. "Thinking Thifault for the 'operation we have received in your office in bringing this project to a successful conclusion," Wallace added. "You should be complimented in preserving this valuable tract of open space property for the community. It has been a pleasure to work with you and your staff."

The receipt of the check from the state Friday marks the completion of the Crandall's Park Open Space project.

A check from the federal government in the amount of $24,357.80 was received by Thifault in July.

Although originally it was expected the town's share of the $58,800 purchase price for the 33 plus acres of land would be about 25 per cent, the actual

The document today is the most important papal move since then to rejuvenate the ruling circles of the church.

By Jan. 1, 23 of the 127 present cardinals will have reached 80. Sixteen of these are among the 43 cardinals in the Roman Curia.

Of the 25 cardinals who will lose the right to elect the Pope, 11 are Italians, three are French, two Spaniards, two Portuguese, a German, a Scot, an Irishman, an Argentine, a Brazilian, a Mexican and an American.

The American is James Francis Cardinal McIntyre, 84, whose resignation as archbishop of Los Angeles was accepted last Jan. 21.

The most notable cardinal affected by the decree is Cardinal Giuseppe Siri, 87, secretary of the congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith, who is 80, and Amleto Cicognani, 83, former Vatican secretary of state, who is 87.

No Cause Served, Says Lady Pastor

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — "It's just the life-style I have chosen," said the Rev. Elizabeth A. Flatz after she became the first woman Lutheran minister in America.

Contrasting with the familiar hymns led by the Gettysburg Seminary choir was the psalter, a book of readings from the Bible.

Ms. Flatz, a 30-year-old, curly-haired brunette who has served for five years as assistant Lutheran chaplain at the university, approached the altar clad in a simple, white robe.

The Rev. Paul M. Orso, president of the Maryland Synod of the Lutheran Church in America, administered the key sacraments of ordination: the laying on of hands and the presentation of the ministerial stole and Bible.

"Are you ready to take upon you this holy ministry, and church," Ms. Flatz replied in a firm voice.

The congregation, which numbered 1,200, celebrated the occasion with a special service.

PROJECT TURKEY

The Pilgrim Fathers found the wild turkey in Massachusetts "in great flocks"—it was so important to them as a food bird that without it there might not have been that first Thanksgiving.

The wild turkey is found only in North and Central America, and its range used to be from Mexico north to New Hampshire. But with the coming of settlers, agriculture and new land uses the turkeys began to disappear from many areas. Their habitats were destroyed and their populations decimated by over-hunting.

In Massachusetts, for example, the wild turkey was extinct by the mid-nineteenth century. But in 1959, the Massachusetts Cooperative Wildlife Unit and the Division of Fisheries and Game initiated a project to restore the turkey to the Commonwealth. The method used was transplantation: wild birds were brought in from other states and set free, with later trapping and releasing for further dispersal. The experiment has been a great success. The statewide population in the spring of 1970 was estimated at 170, and the wild turkey is considered firmly established once more.

Psychiatrists Say: When Husband Loses Job, Wife Must Keep Her Head

By DEBORAH OVEDOFF
Philadelphia Bulletin Staff Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — There you are—four children, a mortgage on the house, car payments and seemingly endless bills.

And then, suddenly, your husband loses his job. In this day of growing unemployment and a continuing lightning of the dollar, the loss of a job is something more than family breadwinners are merely reading about.

Losing a job is one of the toughest blows a man has to take, in the opinion of psychiatrists, psychologists and job counselors.

Dr. Alan H. Cristol, associate professor of psychiatry at Temple University Hospital here calls the loss of a job "a terrible, castrating experience."

"It is very hard on a man's well-being, since in this society a great part of a man's identity derives from his job," he said. "With his job gone, a man's self-esteem goes and suddenly the whole family is in a changed situation."

"For a short time anyone can cope with this, but persistent unemployment can lead to devastation in a family."

So what do you do? The experts are equally agreed that the new role of a wife is one that calls for self-discipline, courage and patience.

Dr. Cristol said that the most significant thing a wife can do is to show her husband that he is still loved and respected for himself and not for the job he was doing.

Dr. Zygmunt Piotrowski, director of psychological research at Edward N. Roy in Philadelphia, suggests that the family try and soothe the husband of a sense of guilt, and not make him feel that he is blamed for having lost his job.

"It is important for a wife to say nothing at all that could be interpreted as adverse criticism," said Dr. Piotrowski. "There is no need to ask every day if he has found a job. He'll tell her soon enough."

Both Dr. Cristol and Mrs. Robert Speck, assistant consulting supervisor, Pennsylvania State Employment Service, commented on the wish or need of the wife to go to work herself. "To work herself and leave her husband at home could have a disastrous effect on a man and a woman," said Dr. Cristol.

"Most people don't feel that their roles are interchangeable, and Mrs. Speck believes that in a situation where their roles are reversed, the opinion of men and women depends on their entire outlook."

"For a man whose wife is well educated," she said, "one who is a teacher or nurse, say, the change in areas of responsibility would depend on sound understanding in their marriage. In these circumstances it would be quite a normal change for the wife to go out and work."

"It would also depend on how the family has lived in the United States. For first-generation Americans, it is hard to adjust to a woman working—her place is in the home."

"But successive generations Emily Crane Chadbourne fund.

are quite wedded to the idea that women work in the world, and so would find it easier to adjust to a wife-breadwinner."

"There are also those young people who have both worked for several years after their marriage. Here again, it is not difficult to have a wife working in the sort of state of emergency which a job loss brings."

However, said Mrs. Speck, the very first thing a wife should do is take a long hard look at the family's budget and see where she can pare it.

"Read the newspaper ads with your husband, and say to him in an encouraging manner that you can live on less money," she said. "It might involve financial sacrifices, but a wife should be willing to make them."

Marriages have been known to end as a direct result of the strains of joblessness, says Dr. Mortimer R. Feinberg in an article in "Family Health."

"If the marriage was solid before the crisis," he says, "it will withstand the time of troubles. But often there is no way to be sure until the period of testing arrives and then it is safest to take nothing for granted."

"Life cannot go on normally when a man loses his job. As soon as the first shock wears off, he must get hold of himself and not let go."

"He may need subtle flattery, quiet amusement, or perhaps simply sleep. The measure of his wife's sensitivity will consist precisely of the skill with which she chooses and provides what he does need."

"While all this seems a good deal for the wife to do, she can remind herself ten times a day that troubles are only temporary."

"Then she must remember what she must go through all of guilt, and not make him feel that he is blamed for having lost his job."

Dr. Feinberg said that as part of her daily role a wife might go to the extent of editing her conversation, weeding out mention of problems that can wait for a solution—or which cannot possibly be solved in the present circumstances.

Once the hard time is over and State Employment Service, a couple will remember most vividly how they behaved with each other. If the situation has been handled with love and understanding, then their confidence in themselves, as well as their roles are interchangeable, and each other, will have deepened.

Monstrance Acquired
CHICAGO (AP) — The Art Institute of Chicago has acquired a monstrance used in special church rituals and processions created by Joseph Moser, an 18th century Viennese goldsmith.

The iconography of the various sculptural details relates to the adoration of the Host. Around the base are placed cut sheaves of wheat and bunches of grapes which symbolize bread and wine.

It was purchased through the Emily Crane Chadbourne fund.

Brothers Reunited After Long Absence

By MARGARET HAYDEN
Herald Reporter

Norman and Harry Hansen are getting re-acquainted and are swapping yarns about events of the last 47 years. They hadn't seen each other from the time Norman left Norway when he was 17 until Harry arrived from Norway on Veterans Day.

While waiting at Bradley International Airport for the plane for me, being Scandinavian, food is close to me. I started working in a delicatessen store for two German boys. There were a lot of Swedish people in that part of Brooklyn, and speaking the language was an advantage. I picked up a little German, too. The pay was pretty good but the hours were long—12 hours a day and up, Sundays and holidays.

In World War II, when he was almost 38 years old, he enlisted in the army. "This country had been good to me," he said. "I gave me a few bad times but the good overshadowed the bad. I was in good physical shape and glad to go my part. I didn't exactly want the infantry but that's what I got." He served in North Africa for a year and a half and in Italy for a year. A staff sergeant when he was discharged, he went back to factory work in New York and Orange. After a few years he decided to get a job that paid more and went to United Aircraft Corp., first at Hamilton Standard Division, and then to Pratt and Whitney Division from which he'll retire next month when he'll be 66. "I've had a lot of jobs," he said "but I've never drawn unemployment."

Norman has been on sick leave since last Christmas Eve. He was in the hospital for a week and broke his hip. He still needs crutches outside the house and is unable to do any of the jobs in his department. "I'm in good health otherwise," he said. "After the accident, he had planned to continue on his job but his wife's Division. This versatile energetic man will probably get a part-time job after he recovers from the accident."

Needed Birth Certificate. Birth certificate is needed to collect social security. When he wrote to the city of his birth, Oslo, to get copies of his birth records, he gave the names of his brothers and sisters and asked for their addresses. Through the years, he had lost track of them. Last June a letter, written in English, and giving the addresses, arrived from his brother in Norway. He wrote to Harry right away, and then to both his sisters and to another brother. "Having had no opportunity to read or write Norwegian, he had almost forgotten now. "I just wrote what I could set down with the help of an English Norwegian dictionary," he said. "It's been quite an experience." He puts a great deal of care and thought in his letters and often spends several hours on them.

Norman Hansen, left, asks his brother Harry, questions about their native Norway. When Harry arrived from Norway for a visit, the brothers saw each other for the first time in 47 years. Harry brought the Norwegian flag and the other gifts on the table. (Herald Photo by Pinto) to learn the insurance business, took the insurance office. School before he started school. Norman had never been late for school. "Although snow goes to shoulder height, there is no such thing as staying home or being late because of the weather," he said. "We were always in school, or church, brought up strict. My parents were almost religious fanatics. We were always in church. You didn't ask to stay away from church. You just got up and went to school, or church. There's nothing in the language to say you don't feel well. You were brought up strict but this was not the reason I wanted to get away."

Harry Still Siles. Harry retired recently at 70 years of age, the Norwegian retirement age. He had been a truck driver for 21 years and had been in an accident. Still an avid skier, he demonstrated the way it done to his brother and sister-in-law in their living room. He tells them about the relatives in Norway, how they live, and about his adventures sabotaging the Nazis when they occupied Norway.

Because he was a professional driver Harry was made a chauffeur for the Germans. He listened and supplied the information in costumes of different colors except for the dialogue. Nancy and Shugo speak Norwegian, of course. Like some other European papers, advertisements are on the front page. When the relatives in Norway, asked Norman what they could send him and his wife, he told them not to spend a lot of money but there was something he would like for his home, a Norwegian flag. They sent a flag, a bright scarf with pictures of people in costumes of different colors, weighted salt and pepper shakers, and many color photographs. Social Security has been a blessing to Norman Hansen besides its expected financial benefits because it indirectly made family reunion possible. So now, ties, new and renewed, cross the ocean, the generation gap, and 47 years of living.

Each other for the first time in 47 years. Harry brought the Norwegian flag and the other gifts on the table. (Herald Photo by Pinto)

Exporter Links French To Shipments of Arms

By HANNS NEUBOURG
AP Newswriter

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (AP)—Millionaire Dieter Schuehr, accused of illegally exporting arms to Africa, the Middle East and Malaysia, expressed belief in court today that high French officials were involved in the South African deal. Schuehr, who needs a $15-million industrial complex, told the Supreme Penal Court that he believes the exports of cannons and ammunition to South Africa were possible "because several high authorities in France wanted to help South Africa" and thus issued certificates that made it possible for his company to circumvent a Swiss government embargo.

Schuehr denied, however, that he was aware of sales via France before deliveries, valued by the prosecution at $13 million, were completed. Schuehr and six senior employees of his firm, Workingmaschinen-Fabrik O'rlikon, are accused of forging and violating arms export decrees forbidding sales to countries at war or threatened by tension, by unlawfully about a million worth of arms. Nigeria, Egypt, Israel, Lebanon, Saudi Arabia and Syria were other recipients. South Africa received almost two-thirds of the arms shipments.

Schuehr told the five-man court he learned about the illegal work in July 1966. "Of course I was surprised," he said. "And I was concerned about the possible complications $50 per week alimony. Florence A. Boucher of Vermont was granted a divorce from Ernest D. Boucher of Manchester on grounds of intolerable cruelty. She was awarded custody of one minor child with support payments of $10 per week and $1 per week alimony. Ferdinand C. Donatelli of Tolland from Astrid L. Desautels of Vernon on grounds of intolerable cruelty. She was awarded custody of one minor child with support payments of $20 per week. Deborah Stiek from Edwin Stiek, both of Vernon, on grounds of intolerable cruelty. She was awarded custody of one minor child with support payments of $20 per week. Furnishing Can Be Rough Via the Installment Plan

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newswriter

It is foolhardy to furnish a home on the installment plan, says a young wife. The couple is in debt—they have a 30-year mortgage, a student loan, a 5-year car note. They fear it would be 10 years before they can buy a large sofa for cash. One reason we now have a truth-in-lending federal law is that many people bought time purchases in a willy-nilly fashion. They didn't understand the interest rates or full implications of the agreement. The important thing to avoid while incurring debt is that one might become vulnerable for a property lien because of inactivity. People who have suddenly lost their income have gotten into such difficulties.

But installment plans have been a blessing for many, provided they are fully aware of financial drawbacks, and know where they can borrow funds in an emergency from friends or relatives. Here are some viewpoints: "We wouldn't have had a dishwasher or washing machine if we hadn't been able to use time payment plans," says one woman. "I honestly think we would have frittered the money away on unnecessary things, if we hadn't had to meet payments each month."

Another installment buyer found one danger of such purchases is that you overtook yourself. "I let a salesman talk me into all sorts of things I didn't need. We became so burdened by the payments that we couldn't sleep and we weren't eating properly. We finally borrowed money from my father to pay off the whole debt, and they're giving us time to pay them." She had been amazed to find that the 1 1/2 percent monthly carrying charge came to 18 percent annual interest. Credit agreements now carry this explanation in compliance with the federal law. Women have more courage than men do when it comes to running up such bills, says one husband, whose wife has him in such a bind that "we couldn't pay off our debts in 102 years considering future bonuses and raises." He admits that might be a slight exaggeration but she does have charge accounts with nine stores, installment plans with three companies, loans at two banks and is borrowing on charge cards. Fortunately, they have a big income. He would take over the finances, but she has been able to juggle everything so far, and has managed to keep all debtors happy, and he hesitates to upset the pattern. "But if something happens to that old paycheck, we'd be sunk," he says.

The Power Broker Bailey Clings to Job

By DON MEIKLE
Associated Press Writer

HARTFORD (AP) — The reports of John M. Bailey's imminent demise are premature. Bailey still has a role to play in the Democratic Party of Connecticut — a very important role with the new state legislature about to go into its first session.

John Bailey
Democratic

"The Power Broker" is what Bailey was called in a biography written by a young admirer several years ago. (The biographer, Joseph I. Lieberman of New Haven, will be a state senator next year.) Well, Bailey's power may have diminished but an experienced broker is still hard to have around.

Exactly what Bailey's role is during the 1971 session? He'll handle the political end of the operation. Democratic legislative leader said cryptically. He wouldn't spell it out, but he was evidently referring to those things that the majority Democrats in the House and Senate can do for the party and its faithful.

Bailey's chairmanship has been regarded as precarious by some who see him as being unsteady in the legislature. But he has not been regarded as such by those who have followed him since he was elected in 1967. He has been regarded as a power broker, not only in the legislature but in the state government. Thomas J. Meskill.

erable independence of Gov. John Dempsey last session, but that doesn't mean they can't work with Bailey. How else is there who can do what Bailey does as well as Bailey does it?

Barbieri had had any chance to depose Bailey, he damaged it by the heavy-handed way he tried to get a New Haven legislature into a House leadership position last week. The push on behalf of Rep. Bruce Morris began as a legitimate effort by New Haven legislators to get one of their number into the leadership cadre. But Barbieri gave the drive a sharp anti-establishment twist by threatening to have his troops vote with the Republicans unless he had his way.

UAW Backs Proposal For Industrial City
NEW BRITAIN (AP) — The proposal to create an industrial complex and airport somewhere in eastern Connecticut has won the support of a branch of the United Auto Workers Union.

The UAW's regional Community Action Program Council has sent letters to members of the 1971 General Assembly urging action on the proposal. "If the legislature has the courage and wisdom to move on this project, private capital will be available to fund most of it," said council president Richard Renkun.

Wearing of Leis Goes Back Centuries

(Note: Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Ferguson are in Hawaii attending the convention of Associated Press Managing Editors. Following is a story written by Mrs. Ferguson about the customs surrounding the wearing of leis.)

Rev. Westwood Assumes Duties with Unitarian Society

The Rev. Arnold F. Westwood, center, first minister of the Unitarian Universalist Society of Manchester, is welcomed by Thomas Latham, left, president of the Society; and by the Rev. Gary Churn, associate minister of South United Methodist Church, yesterday afternoon shortly after the Rev. Mr. Westwood was installed as minister of the society in ceremonies at the church, 446 Main St. (Herald photo by Bucevicius)

Chunists' Club Elects Officers
The club, said to be the largest of its kind in the country, has its drop zone at the Ellington Airport on Rt. 33. Its week link with the Atlantic mainland since yellow was an imperious favorite color.

Leis come in a wide variety of flowers and colors. They vary too in price depending on the bloom. You can buy a very floral strand for as little as $1.25 or up to six dollars for double garlands or wide leis. Agricultural law forbids the export of these two out of Hawaii.

Some of the ladies wore leis. The Polynesians were the first settlers of the Hawaiian Islands. They wore leis of seeds, stones, fruit, feathers — even hair and bones. These were ornamental as they are today. Centuries ago, the giving of formal or leaf lei is thought to have symbolized friendship, affection and best wishes. This is custom survives.

Nixon Sidekick Unaware Of High Echelon Shakeup

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite the mixed results of the 1970 election, the man who called many of the political signals for the White House says there's been no speculation of any changes in his team.

Murray Chotiner, the durable presidential aide who shares leadership of the political liaison staff, said in an interview Monday that he would indicate any word to him that would indicate any change in his setup.

Another well-informed Nixon aide agreed, saying he hasn't picked up so much as a hint that the Chotiner operation might be changed.

This is perhaps the more remarkable in view of burgeoning rumors, many circulated with semi-official encouragement, that a major reshuffling of the Cabinet and the White House staff is in the immediate offing.

If a change does develop, some suspect Chotiner might move to the GOP National Committee staff to help plan for Nixon's expected 1972 election re-election bid with committee chairman Rep. Rogers C.B. Morton moving to another post—perhaps secretary of Interior.

... cites Connecticut gains

Like Nixon, Chotiner publicly views the outcome of the Nov. 3 balloting in a cheerful light, citing GOP Senate gains in Connecticut, Maryland, Ohio and Tennessee.

Losses in Illinois and California are minimized as having been anticipated by the Republican high command.

Democrats, of course, point to their continuing control of the Senate, a gain of nine House seats and a major pickup in congressional offices as a victory demeriting Nixon can be beaten two years hence.

Chotiner is particularly disturbed by talk that the 25-year-old Nixon might be a remarkable foil for political realities. Just the day before the election, said Chotiner, Nixon predicted Republicans would gain two, perhaps three, Senate seats and lose 10 seats in the House.

Until Chotiner became a special counsel to Nixon last January in the unchallenged boss of White House political operations was 40-year-old Harry B. Dent, former aide to South Carolina Sen. Strom Thurmond.

Dent is said to have been offering advice. Chotiner suggested his earlier check with the Cabinet member most directly involved, then touch base with the White House again to make certain his remarks harmonize with Nixon's thinking.

... counseled over the years

Whittingly or not, Chotiner has supplied a small example of his political chores.

Sharing the walls of Chotiner's office with framed commission's and diploma are two representing 87 squads.

Veep Quits Ramsey Hits Nixon-Agnew Campaigning

NEW YORK (AP) — R. John Cunningham, executive vice president of the New York Stock Exchange, will leave his post March 1.

In an announcement Sunday, Cunningham said he had submitted his resignation saying that most of his ideas had either been implemented or were progressing well.

"This seems to me to fulfill my purpose in joining the exchange in the first place, and thus an appropriate time to leave it," Cunningham said in his letter of resignation.

Fault of Humanity

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Stanford University's president says scientists are blamed with "pseudo-righteous rage" for his of modern man which are actually the fault of humanity as a whole.

Speaking to an audience of about 200 at dedication of the $4.2 million Ruth Wadsworth Earth Sciences, Richard W. Lyman said.

"Pollution, overpopulation and overall are not science's fault. They are humanity's fault. Indeed, we shall need the help that science can give us in coping with these latter day plagues that we have brought upon ourselves."

Muskie Outlook

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican Sen. Hugh Scott says his home state of Pennsylvania would go for Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, a Maine Democrat, over Richard Nixon if the presidential election were now.

"In view of the recent landslide election of a Democratic governor in Pennsylvania," he said, "I would not expect a Republican president could carry it if the voting was today." That he added he was hopeful of a shift by 1972.

Poles Carefully Rebuild Old Town on Baltic Sea

By OTTO DOELLING
Specialized Press Writer

Gdansk, Poland (AP) — "No one builds like this if he is unsure of remaining," the Gdansk city architect told a visitor to this Baltic port that the Germans called Danzig.

In two decades, the Poles have meticulously reconstructed the historic Main Town. This took centuries to build but weeks of bombings, shelling and conflagration destroyed it in March 1945.

The Poles reclaimed Danzig from the Germans. Like city architect Zbigniew Czernichowski they voice no uncertainty about the Polish future of the city.

Sailed guests from the Baltic sea have already given a patina to restored facades of the narrow Gothic and Renaissance buildings with their gables and cornices.

The rebuilding is evident only where exposed brick or stone walls betray differences in coloration.

The spire of the old Town Hall again towers above the city and the facade of the Golden House on the Long Market again glitters in the sunlight. In fact, the Poles say, the city now looks more as it did during its flourishing days as a member of the Hanseatic League in the Middle Ages than was the case before its destruction.

Where possible, the Poles went back to original plans and etchings from the 16th and 18th centuries. Many of the facades had been altered in succeeding centuries.

"That building survived the war, but it does not fit in with the other buildings and will have to go," Czernichowski said, pointing to a drab, five-story apartment house built around 1900.

Since 1949, the Polish government has invested about $25 million to rebuild the Main Town.

Poles blame the Germans for the 1945 destruction, while West Germans say the Russians plundered and then set the town ablaze.

"In 1945, this looked like Hiroshima," a Polish journalist says.

Since 1949, 367 houses have been rebuilt in the Main Town and 15 more are under construction. All work is to be finished by 1975.

"It is not a thoroughgoing reconstruction," Czernichowski said, "because living conditions are different today than in the Middle Ages." The typical old Gdansk house was very deep from front to back. If we had to rebuild them that deeply, the interiors would be dark.

"So what we really reconstructed were the facades."

Ak Poles say they are rebuilding houses that once belonged to German patricians and they reply: "You are mistaken. Gdansk is an old Polish city."

They explain it was built on international commerce and on wealth brought up the Vistula from the heartland of Poland.

Student Quieters Seen in Wide Use

WASHINGTON (AP) — As mutants as beneficial in treating many as 80 per cent of the children in some elementary schools may be receiving drugs which help them to quiet their minds, a government investigator told Congress today.

"This is a sober estimate I believe," said Dr. Leo S. Hollister, a medical investigator for the Veterans Administration, as he testified before a Senate subcommittee beginning four days of hearings on government drug-buying practices.

Overactive children used to be thought of as a nuisance, but now they are being treated with a new class of drugs called stimulants, which are used to help them concentrate on their schoolwork.

Dr. Hollister said that the use of these drugs is increasing rapidly, and that they are being used by a large number of children in elementary schools.

He also said that the use of these drugs is increasing rapidly, and that they are being used by a large number of children in elementary schools.

Ousted Bay Stater Plans Nader-Type State Watch

BOSTON (AP) — Mike Dukakis is down but not out. In fact, he'll be back with a bigger punch than the former Massachusetts Democrat who was ousted from office last week.

Dukakis, the outgoing Democratic representative from Brookline who was defeated in his candidacy for lieutenant governor in the general election, says he will form a group of volunteers similar to those working in Washington with consumer advocate Ralph Nader to "force the governor and his administration to respond to the inadequacy and incompetence" in state government.

"This will be the kind of thing Nader has done on a national scale," Dukakis said in an interview.

A state representative for eight years, Dukakis said he will begin private law practice Dec. 1 with the Boston firm of Hill and Barlow. He has been associated with the firm for several years and has been on a one-year leave of absence.

"Soon after he resumes practice, he said, he will begin to form the volunteer group.

"There has to be somebody who will serve as a constant prod on the governor and people who are not doing their jobs," Dukakis said his group will work primarily on "documenting inefficiencies" in state agencies.

"I'm not prepared to wait six years for action because people say they are reorganizing," Dukakis said "we'll have to wait and see how effectively reorganization streamlines state government, but he expressed the fear that it might simply create another layer" of state agencies over existing state agencies.

The State Reorganization Act, to be implemented next April, will create 10 cabinet type offices which will oversee the operation of all state agencies.

"Executive offices" are intended to streamline state government and keep the government in closer touch with the citizens.

Charged with recruiting prospective candidates to head the executive offices is Lt. Governor Donald R. Dwight, who said in an interview that he already has a few top candidates in mind. He declined to name them, however.

Dwight also noted that he will

Obscenity Claim Brings Bid For Legal Judgment

BRIDGEPORT (AP) — Administrators at the University of Bridgeport are awaiting request for legal advice on obscene words and an alleged abortion advertisement that have appeared in the student newspaper.

During a recent visit of 800 parents to the campus, the parents criticized the newspaper advertisement as offering a service that was "pregnant with legal alternatives to your problem with minimal cost and delay."

The ad gave Pennsylvania telephone number.

Wolff said he and Albert E. Dean, vice president of business affairs, have asked the opinion of Herbert Cohen, university counsel. Wolff said Saturday afternoon was expected within a few days on whether such an abortion referral ad is legal in Connecticut.

Busy Forty-Plus Club
Haven for Ex-Executives

By JOHN KENNIFY
NEW YORK (AP)—The rising unemployment rate among executives is being reflected by membership in the Forty Plus Club of New York, where men who are 40 or older are meeting to help each other find work.

"They've been meeting in here recently," said one member, a commuter from Westchester County who has a big backlog of resumes to send out. "I've been meeting in here recently," said one member, a commuter from Westchester County who has a big backlog of resumes to send out.

Vitamin C Called Answer to Colds

STANFORD, Calif. (AP)—Linnus Pauling, the scientist who won two Nobel prizes, says an effective cure for the common cold is as simple as taking a spoon of the powder form of ascorbic acid—vitamin C—each day until the cold disappears.

When a person first catches a cold, he said, taking about one gram of ascorbic acid each hour will chase the discomfort away. Pauling said continued suffering with colds, "is explained by the fact that in the past, the medical student has been taught little about vitamins and nutrition."

For Poultrymen
Chicken Infection Means $200 Million Yearly Loss

By LARRY KURTZ
Associated Press Writer
EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP)—Ruffling its feathers, a chicken size the ever-present dust of a henhouse. Soon, the whole flock inhabits a virus that may kill half within a year.

This is Marek's disease, a leukemia-like infection that is costing U.S. poultrymen some $200 million a year, by government estimate.

To combat a growing loss from the disease, named for the Austrian doctor who first described it in 1906, several manufacturers are busily producing a recently developed vaccine.

Studies show it to be 90 per cent effective, says Dr. Ben H. Burmester, director of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's regional poultry research laboratory at Michigan State University.

The vaccine, expected to be available commercially soon after Jan. 1, "is given by injection to new hatched chicks."

It comes from a non-disease virus isolated by a government research veterinarian. Two years ago, Dr. H. Graham Purchase, another research veterinarian, and Dr. William Okamoto, government microbiologist at the university laboratory, found that chickens given the virus did not develop Marek's disease.

"There is no pattern to the lethal potential of Marek's disease once it infects a flock, but Burmester says up to 50 per cent may die within a year after the effect is most acute. More often, he says, the disease kills 20 to 30 per cent of the flock."

Its presence is difficult to detect until too late. A farmer may have no idea what is happening until he suddenly finds

Red China Seems to Crave Hatred of Pacific Neighbors

By JOHN RODERICK
Associated Press Writer
TOKYO (AP)—A Filipino congressman proposed the other day that Communist China be admitted into the United Nations if it would agree to settle the Indonesia war.

The idea had no chance of acceptance but it reflected a widespread belief among many Asians that Peking, and not Hanoi, is responsible for keeping the Vietnam conflict boiling.

Though it has engaged in no major Asian war since its mass invasion into Korea in 1950, the People's Republic of China seems to prefer to be hated rather than loved by its Pacific neighbors.

Hardly a day passes without a bitter public attack on the government leaders of Japan, South Korea, the Philippines, Malaysia, Laos or South Vietnam. The only non-Communist nations of which it approves in the area are Pakistan and Ceylon.

Thus it is little wonder that the United States and Nationalist China got a hearing when they accused the Red Chinese of failing to qualify as a peace-loving nation under the U.N. charter.

Yet even in these neighbor countries there have been some stirrings of change in the long attitude toward Peking. Singapore's prime minister, Lee Kuan Yew, says that in spite of its insulting language he believes Red China has a right to representation in the United Nations. Malaysia, now that Prime Minister Tunku Abdul Rahman no longer calls the turn, leans toward Red Chinese acceptance. Even in Japan, which for years has joined the fight to block Peking, a call for a more realistic policy in keeping with the international trend has been heard within the ranks of Prime Minister Eisaku Sato's party.

For many Asian nations, as for others, the question now is not so much shutting Red China out as keeping Chiang Kai-shek's Republic of China in 1959 in Formosa in.

The question of Chinese mainland sovereignty has been dodged by the non-Communist government in Formosa. It is apparent that the Communist government is in effective control of China's 740 million people. Chiang rules only the 14 million of the nation's 20th province—Formosa.

Not even Chiang disputes this but he insists that Peking fight by force rather than conquest. And he claims to be the legitimate government of all Chinese.

After voting in 1960 that the Nationalist China was the lawful occupant of the United Nations seat, the non-Communist powers had to face a graver and more important question two years later. This was: With whom would the defeated Japanese sign a peace treaty, Peking or Taipei? Unable to resolve this, the San Francisco delegates invited neither government to the peace conference, left it up to Japan to sign a separate treaty with the government of its choice.

Unwilling to antagonize its conqueror and new ally, the United States, the conservative Japanese government did as expected and signed with Chiang, 1950.

Anonymous Donor Honors Dead Sergeant

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—"I feel like crying, but I'm not going to," said a young man clutching a $25 U.S. Savings Bond.

The bond and a flag decal for her mother Maryann Watson, 27, were sent to Terri by an anonymous donor in memory of her father, Sgt. Paul Terri, killed last September during his fourth volunteer tour of combat duty. The letter was signed "A good friend and a former paratrooper."

"I've got to take this home to my mother. I'm not going to play with it," Terri said when she received the letter. "I'm not going to play with it," Terri said when she received the letter.

The letter was sent to the Philadelphia Inquirer when the donor was unable to locate the family's address.

The letter read in part: "Your Daddy and I may have served in the same outfit together at Fort Campbell in 1959. There were a lot of good men there but I don't think we knew each other personally. However, back then a black paratrooper did me a favor. He was from this area but I could never locate him. But that doesn't matter much. I will pay you now and I am sure that in a year or so I will be paying him back."

In a letter to Terri's mother, the donor wrote: "America will become stronger than ever as we fight for freedom and justice for all. The letter carried a Wilmington, N.J., postmark.

Watson, decorated for valor, was due to return to his family in June months. He was killed Sept. 18 in a Viet Cong ambush.

WASHINGTON—At the beginning of March more than two-thirds of all new rental units were listed at $10 a month or more, according to the Housing Department. The median price choice of conventionally built, new homes offered for sale reached a record $77,000. Noir Dame To Return to Cotton Bowl, Hope Top-Rated Texas Will Be Opponent

NEW YORK (AP)—Notre Dame, Ohio State, Tennessee and seven other teams accepting bids over the weekend, the three big puzzles remaining are—If, when and who. Despite losing 30 to second-ranked Notre Dame on Saturday, seventh-ranked Louisiana State will go to the Orange Bowl against Nebraska... If the Tigers win their two remaining games against Tulane and Mississippi... The Associated Press learned that the Peach Bowl has invited Georgia to be the host team... If the Bulldogs' record improves to 10-1, they will be North Carolina, with possibly Colorado or Arizona State as the visiting team.

...The regular season as unbroken Texas Tech 24-0, turning back Big Ten Champ and earning a trip to the Rose Bowl to play Stanford. Coach Woody Hayes called the 1970 Buckeyes "the greatest team we've ever had here."... Two other tie teams—Nos. 12 Mississippi and 13 Auburn, were picked for the Gator Bowl... San Diego State, rated 14th, had its 31-game unbeaten streak snapped by Loyola Beach State Friday night 27-11. One of the two teams will represent the Pacific Coast Athletic Association in the Pasadena Bowl against Louisville.

Upsets Mark Grid Finales

Upsets and records punctuated the end of the Connecticut collegiate football season for Yale, the University of Connecticut and Southern Connecticut colleges and Bridgeport. Southern was the only one of the three to win a share of the Eastern Football Championship... Yale was upset 14-12 by Harvard, leaving the two teams in a tie for second place in the Ivy League in much the same way that a spectacular Yale-Harvard game last season ended with a tie for second place in the Ivy League in much the same way that a spectacular Yale-Harvard game last season ended with a tie for second place in the Ivy League in much the same way...

'Bush League'

HANOVER, N.H. (AP)—Dartmouth coach Bob Blackman has called his team the "bush league, grandstand 'bush league, grandstand 'bush league."... "It's nothing more than a cheap trick to try and drum up interest for the Lambert Trophy," Blackman said. "We're going to win it. We're going to win it. We're going to win it."

Kapp Welcomed Rudely to Shea

NEW YORK (AP)—As several members of the New York Jets hovered over a prone Joe Kapp, linebacker Larry Grantham couldn't resist the temptation. "I said 'welcome to Shea, Joe,'" Grantham said with a smile in the Jets' dressing room. "He didn't say anything back to me, but I know he was because (John) Elliott had him around the head."

Late Field Goal Provides Edge Blanda Hero Again

NEW YORK (AP)—Racing the clock has become a weekly ordeal for the Oakland Raiders, but their 43-year-old anchor man is having the time of his life. George Blanda, oldest player in the National Football League, kicked a 16-yard field goal with seven seconds to play Sunday, giving the Raiders a 20-17 victory over San Diego that extended their unbeaten string to seven games.

N.E. College Grid Season Nearly Over

The shutout was the sixth of the season and fourth straight for the Indians, who are ranked 16th nationally and have been a unanimous choice in the Lambert Trophy race.
