Uniform Integration Unworkable: Scott

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. James O. Eastland, D-Miss., said today that a uniform national desegregation law is either unconstitutional or unenforceable, and that the federal government should not attempt to force such a law.

Eastland, who is a member of the Senate subcommittee on the Constitution, said that a uniform national desegregation law would be unconstitutional because it would violate the states' rights to control their own schools.

He also said that such a law would be unenforceable because the federal government does not have the power to force states to desegregate their schools.

Eastland's statement comes in the wake of a report by the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights that a uniform national desegregation law is the only way to achieve true equality in education.

The commission's report, issued last week, said that the current patchwork of state laws is inadequate to deal with the problem of school desegregation.

It called for a uniform national law that would give the federal government the authority to force states to desegregate their schools.

Eastland's statement is a direct challenge to the commission's report and to the efforts of the federal government to achieve school desegregation.

He said that the federal government should focus its efforts on other areas of social reform, such as housing and employment, rather than on forcing school desegregation.

Eastland's statement is one of the most vocal criticisms of the federal government's desegregation efforts in recent years.

It has been widely reported that Eastland's statement will have a significant impact on the federal government's desegregation efforts.

Eastland's statement is a clear signal that the federal government's desegregation efforts are facing a major obstacle.

It is a challenge that the federal government must meet if it is to achieve true equality in education for all Americans.

Eastland's statement is a reminder that the struggle for school desegregation is far from over.

It is a struggle that will continue until all children have the right to a quality education, regardless of their race or background.

Eastland's statement is a call to action for all Americans who care about the future of our country.

It is a call to action that we must all heed if we are to achieve the dream of a more just and equal society.

Check the Check In Pic's Path

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Shaw University's president was splattered with a pie and an egg several other university administrators and spectators Wednesday, but it wasn't a student demonstration — just a gag.

It was just Shaw's first — and possibly last — pie-throwing contest.

The dining hall director, Woodrow Anderson, came up with the idea to divert student attention, which seems to focus on food service during the last winter months.

Every fifth student going through the cafeteria line was given a free ticket for a pie. Approximately 150 pies were stacked on tables about 25 feet from a wooden screen with holes cut for two persons to stick their heads and hands through.

The honor of throwing the first pie went to the "pie queen," Gwen Johnson of Englewood, N.J., who had been chosen by student workers in the cafeteria.

The first pie fell short. The crowd moaned. The second pie was better aimed, but the largest, a girl, pulled her head out of the hole before it struck.

Then the university president, Dr. King V. Check, stuck his head through the hole.

"Hit him! Hit him!" the crowd yelled. Check stuck his tongue out. The pie flew. It didn't hit him, but it splattered pie on his face when it hit the board.

Defense for Chicago Seven Plan to Go to Higher Court

CHICAGO (AP) — The government has won a split verdict in its prosecution of seven men accused of inciting violence at the time of the 1968 Democratic National Convention, but defense lawyers plan to appeal the verdict to a higher court.

U.S. District Judge J. Edgar Hoover convicted five men Wednesday of crossing state lines with the intent to incite rioting during the convention in August 1968.

But the jury of 10 women and 2 men acquitted all seven defendants of conspiracy to promote the bloody demonstrations between the police and antiwar demonstrators.

Two defendants, Lee Weiner and John H. Frisnes, were cleared of conspiracy and of a charge of inciting rioting because of the acquittal of the other five. Frisnes and Weiner both resided in Chicago during the summer of 1968 and were not charged in the indictment with crossing state lines to incite rioting.

Convicted were David T. Dellinger, 51; Jerry C. Rubin, 31; Thomas E. Hayden, 28; Abbie Hoffman, 31, and Richard C. "Rene" Davis, 29.

Each man could be sentenced to a maximum of five years in prison and fined $10,000.

Judge Julius J. Hoffman did not set a date for sentencing. All seven defendants are being held in the Cook County jail on contempt sentences imposed by Judge Hoffman last week during the five-month trial.

The judge has refused to grant bail on contempt charges pending appeal.

The defense lawyers, William M. Kunstler, Edward L. Weinglass, and others, were given 15 minutes to make their case on terms for contemptuous conduct during the five-month trial.

Weinglass said late Wednesday that he would appeal the conviction to the U.S. Supreme Court.

100 Quizzed In Murder Of State Girl

STAMFORD, Conn. (AP) — Police questioned over 100 residents of a 13-story apartment building Wednesday and resumed the questioning today in the investigation of the stabbing death of a 17-year-old girl, a police officer's daughter.

JoAnne Florio was enroute to Stamford High School from her family's third floor apartment Wednesday when someone tackled her on the stairs leading down to the second floor.

She was stabbed 21 times with a long, narrow "stiletto-type" knife and apparently was dragged to the second floor, a medical examiner said.

An intensive search and the questioning of residents of the Hanover Hall apartments, a 165-unit building with rentals ranging from $250 to $300 a month, produced no firm clues about the murder, no trace of the killer.

Police said they had questioned 100 residents of the 13-story apartment building Wednesday and resumed the questioning today in the investigation of the stabbing death of a 17-year-old girl, a police officer's daughter.

Riot Trial Verdict Spurs Protests in Four States

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

An unruly crowd of 1,000 persons clashed with city police in Ann Arbor, Mich., following a University of Michigan rally called by students for a Democratic Society to protest the Chicago verdict.

Five persons were arrested Wednesday night and four were charged with rioting. The demonstrators smashed windows and damaged property.

After the Chicago verdict, antiwar demonstrators merged in Grant Park, opposite the Conrad Hilton Hotel, for massive rallies. Police estimated 5,000 persons were in the park the morning of the verdict.

Mayflower Wouldn't Throw Roses at Buchwald 'Sheep'

By STEWART MAYFLOWER
The Washington Post
Editor's Note: Stewart Mayflower is the pen name of Stewart Alop, the Communist and brother of Joseph Alop, the columnist.

Mr. Mayflower here reviews the play by Art Buchwald, the columnist.
"Sheep on the Runway" seems likely to have a good run in New York, for two reasons. First, it is by Art Buchwald, who is a very witty man. Second, it is a fashionable farce, based on the fashionable notion that Communism is a figure of the CIA's imagination, and that whatever goes wrong in the world is the fault of insane American diplomats and cretinous American generals.

This play is particularly fashionable in New York, and it is not surprising that Joe Buchwald's fashionable farce, as a caricature. It is surprising for Art Buchwald has always seemed an amiable fellow—that the caricature should be so bitchy.

Snow Bunnies Should Seek Fun as Well as Men on Slopes

Writes for The Associated Press

She resorts have become one of the most "in" places to meet men.

Each weekend finds thousands of women skiers and snow bunnies alike heading for resorts from Sun Valley to Big Vanilla to search the slopes for a mate.

Some girls do enjoy the healthy exercise and outdoor activity associated with the sport. They enjoy male companionship and enjoy meeting members of the opposite sex, but finding a mate is not their primary goal. These women get the most enjoyment out of their ski outings. On the other hand, reports New York psychiatrist Dr. Judith Bronner-Huazar, too many girls find themselves embroiled in the ski weekend syndrome.

"I've had several patients who were compulsive weekend skiers. They were miserable about even one single missed ski weekend, but they do not ski because they enjoy the sport. They feel they must keep on the slopes or in the lodge in order to find a companion." Men know this, she claims, and it is not fair to expect a woman to be a ski addict.

Dr. Bronner-Huazar tells of one attractive patient who used to belong to a ski club and took pride in the fact that she never missed a ski weekend. "Unlike the snow bunny—those beautiful, fully garbed girls who spend the weekend in the lodges without ever putting on a pair of skis, my patient was a competent skier," comments the young, red-haired psychiatrist.

"Unfortunately her parents did not want her to ski. She realized that the ski club consisted of her, only busy compulsive work that she was able to break the pattern." As a postscript to the case, Dr. Bronner-Huazar notes that today her former patient skis quite often with her future husband.

How does one break the ties of the "ski weekend syndrome?" Dr. Bronner-Huazar says the most important step is determining whether you fit into the category. This requires honest self-evaluation. "If you enjoy wrong circumstances and in the worst possible fashion," she advises, "but not weekend after weekend, come hell, snow or earthquake."

"If necessary, seek help from friends, parents, relatives, or falling that, a psychiatrist." Dr. Bronner-Huazar adds, "In order to establish a really meaningful relationship, one must be able to contribute one's own share. A worthwhile person wouldn't want someone who is self-centered, unstable, inadequate, bypassed by anyone desirable and worthy."

Most important, she tells women never to put themselves in the position of being leftover particularly at a ski resort. "She who is leftover at the end of the week is in a danger of feeling very much leftover, the feeling of the leftovers... This does not have to be the case. The smart ski weekenders can learn to enjoy the sport, like and love in a healthy, relaxed, rational fashion," she says.

Freshman Comp. in Paper Masks

By MARGARET AULISIO (Herald Reporter)

students into puppets, rather than into self-directed human beings.

As an introduction to Gardner's course, in which students are to plan their own direction, the movie was quite fitting. The paper bag masks which the students wear at the second class session, also fit into Gardner's theme of student and teacher role playing.

Waiting for Gardner to arrive a few days later, the students engaged in general, though self-conscious, conversation about the assignment. Then Gardner came in and everyone sat in a circle for a brief time with their masks on. If someone didn't want to do it, he wasn't forced to.

The masks came off, and the class split up into small groups to get acquainted. They came back together again in a circle and each took a turn talking to the rest. One thing each had to explain was why he wore or did not wear a mask.

Gardner explained that his mask was the mask of a teacher, one who supposedly knows minute movie, "The Magician." When interpreted as an allegory on education, the movie expressed Gardner's own criticism of education as he sees it now, and as he feels strongly that it should not be.

"The Magician" seemed to say that teachers, like magicians, hypnotize students, tricking them into obedience while taking away their own initiative and inner direction. Since teachers provide all the direction, the film said and pupils so little, teachers are turning the roles they play—teacher and student—before going on to break down those roles and allow new ones. These new roles would dispose of the teacher as the leader in the group, and provide for student-directed learning.

Gardner said he doesn't want a class in which the teacher merely transfers information to the students. He told the class that, five years after a class in the research shows that "very little" of what factual information was taught is retained.

"What does it find out more about ourselves," Gardner said, "with this assignment? It is to find out what you do with the assignment? It is to find out what you do with the assignment? It is to find out what you do with the assignment?"

Each student will grade himself, something Gardner considers important as "self-evaluation." Gardner feels this self-directed method will make education more interesting to students. "Other teachers," he said, "never have learned how to plan their own time."

"Students have got to learn how to manage their own time," Gardner says, "and how to handle themselves without having other people to push them around."

He says that some of the students in his class get hostile after awhile if he just sits there and lectures. "I don't want to be a lecturer," he says. "I want to be a participant. I want to be a participant. I want to be a participant."

"I don't want to be a lecturer," he says. "I want to be a participant. I want to be a participant. I want to be a participant."

"The sensitivity exercises came after some four weeks of class sessions," she said.

"They were more receptive either toward looking at things in a different way," she says. "There was more thought in their papers and they saw things below the surface that they hadn't seen before."

Would she let the students totally direct their own classes? "My kids were too young. They needed some sort of direction, otherwise they probably wouldn't have done anything at all."

Dr. Richardson, who tried some student-directed learning in a more advanced literature class of his own, thinks it is "exciting" idea. When I refused to play the part of teacher, the students went on to do some interesting things in literature."

He wonders if Gardner's technique belongs in "what's basically a skill course like Freshman composition? Does it have its place at the college, perhaps in humanities. Like Benoit, Dr. Richardson is glad MCC's president, Dr. Frederick W. Lowe, "encourages such innovative activity."

Gardner is helping to create an "exciting climate" at the college. "I don't call that effective teaching at all," said Albert Smith when asked about James Gardner's self-directed approach.

Smith, a renowned traditionalist with some 56 years of teaching experience, is one of four literature teachers at Manchester Community College — two presently teaching Freshman Composition — who volunteered opinions of James Gardner's technique.

Dr. Robert Richardson, the course coordinator, says the director, to convince the student that it is difficult but not impossible, "to explain exactly what the written word," and should "nurture in the student a respect for the effective use of words, whether his own or others."

"How much grammar did you hear discussed in Gardner's class?" Smith asked. "How much spelling?"

Although he would not teach the way Gardner does, Smith thinks students should be expected to study different teaching approaches and approve of MCC's "democratic" attitude in its English department. He feels students will not learn much if they experience only one style or philosophy of teaching.

Smith's own course is planned in detail before the semester begins, he says. The students are all assigned some 30 to 32 essays to read.

Smith doesn't think students can direct their own education, he says, because "most people that age haven't developed that much personality and so they have to read to develop it."

Labor Opposition Seen Nixon Nominates Miller To NLRB Chairmanship

By JOHN LENDEL, Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon has announced his choice for chief federal umpire in company-worker disputes: a Chicago lawyer who has specialized in representing management.

Strong labor opposition is expected against congressional approval of Edward B. Miller, 47, secretary of Labor George P. Shultz, who met with Nixon before the Miller announcement Wednesday.

The NLRB was created as an independent agency in 1935 to administer the National Labor Relations Act.

The board has two precise duties, working to correct or prevent unfair labor practices committed by either employers or unions and conducting elections to determine the representative of employees for collective bargaining.

The NLRB can call upon the federal courts to enforce its rulings.

Recent NLRB rulings: American League baseball umpires have the right to organize a union; Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. must bargain with its union before changing a benefit plan for retired employees; 10 unions' demand for company-wide bargaining with Kennecott Copper Corp. constituted an unfair labor practice.

Miller said his labor relations work had been "exclusively with management." He had been offered legal assignments by labor unions but declined them, he said, because they would have created a conflict of interest.

A newsmen asked Miller if he thought the NLRB has been unreasonable. Miller said he was not sure. "I've been reasonable men differ," he answered, adding he would not characterize recent board actions as unreasonable. Shultz said he agreed with Miller.

Could he fairly assess the legitimate views of organized labor, Miller was asked. His answer: "I don't know. I don't know if he makes the right call at each case. As a battle to be won. The real name of the game is to find some basis for agreement."

Miller is nominated for a five-year term on the board, replacing Sam Zagoria, who has been under attack by congressional critics charged with NLRB unfair-protection bias. If the nomination is approved, Nixon said, Miller will be designated chairman, succeeding Frank W. McCulloch.

The NLRB recently has been the subject of controversy both in Congress and in the courts.

Rep. Albert Watson, R-S.C., who has called Zagoria an "extreme activist," said he would support Miller's nomination. "I'm going to have a golden opportunity to reshape the thinking of the NLRB" with new appointments.

Watson has introduced a bill to abolish the board in favor of a labor court.

However, a board member, Gerald A. Brown, has accused the U.S. Chamber of Commerce and National Association of Manufacturers of a well-financed propaganda campaign against the NLRB.

Brown said in a speech Feb. 15, the campaign "attempts to present the board's decisions in labor disputes as persistently in favor of unionism."

Labor disputes are now in production by use of altered or her head bobbed up that Bator blashed news, ridicule and belittled grunts in the water. The girl was "quite technique, by association, 'shaken up' but left in good faith conclusions from falls condition, Mrs. Bator said.

World's State Makes Difficult Removal of Causes of Danger

By WILLIAM E. RYAN, AP Special Correspondent

President Nixon's State of the World address and initial Soviet reaction to it illustrate what a dangerous world this is and how difficult it will be to make it less dangerous.

Clearly, a wide chasm separates the superpowers at a time when they are preparing to resume talks on how to limit weapons of mass destruction. The chasm has widened recently because of developments in the Middle East, where each is aware of the grave possibilities of a confrontation.

SALT, the strategic arms limitation talks, began again in Vienna April 16. President Nixon seemed to advise Americans to take them with a grain of salt. He cautioned against "false euphoria," a suggestion that the prospects for the talks are severely limited.

The basic obstacle remains one of mutual distrust. The President, while expressing hope for better Soviet-American relations, seemed to reflect frustration over Moscow aims.

The Russians, though they profess to support the SALT talks, are restating their belief that the United States is in the grip of a militarized economy which bodes ill for peace.

First Soviet reaction to the speech noted that the President "reaffirmed the government's decision to press ahead with the second section of the Safeguard antiballistic missile system and build up U.S. nuclear potential."

But the President noted that his proposed expansion of SALT would be regarded as a significant Soviet buildup.

The issues at SALT will be clear enough. The superpowers have sufficient potential to blast another check into the Moscow account. There is a superfluity of weapons on both sides. There is something close to parity in missile potential. This means that if the chances of a major conflict are as small as 1 in 1,000, that is too big a risk.

Some of the cautious optimism with which SALT had been approached may now be diminishing. Somehow, at the least of these is the Soviet-Soviet-American inter-gas, Nov. 1969 and separated Feb. 15, 1969. They have no children.

Girl Rescued At Skate Pond In Good Shape

A 12-year-old girl rescued Sunday after a plunge through thin ice at Center Springs Pond, has fared well according to her mother, Mrs. Harry Millette of 188 Main St.

Deborah Soars of Hazardville had come to skate with two sisters and a cousin when suddenly she fell through the ice. Her father, Michael Bator, 161 Broadfield St., rushed onto the pond, lay down on the ice still cracking under her, and pulled the girl to safety. Bator had been walking through the park with his family not far away.

Her niece and daughter knew there was no skating on the pond, says Mrs. Millette, but thought they would have the pond all to themselves. Bator had not yet put on their skates when the accident took place.

Mrs. Millette, walking with her husband, three of her own children, and two neighbor children, said there was no one else on the pond and only one other person visible in the park. The girl had just come from skating.

Deborah fell entirely beneath the water and was held under her head bobbed up that Bator blashed news, ridicule and belittled grunts in the water. The girl was "quite technique, by association, 'shaken up' but left in good faith conclusions from falls condition, Mrs. Bator said.

He Files for Divorce

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Conductor-composer Andre Previn, who has announced that he is divorcing his wife of 10 years, Dory Previn, 40, is in London.

Previn, 40, is in London. He is conducting the London Symphony Orchestra. The divorce was filed in Los Angeles Superior Court Wednesday by his attorney.

The Chicago Trial

No mere process of verdict and sentencing can ever really wrap up the Chicago trial, and one even doubts that the Supreme Court of the United States, if it is finally called upon to render the final judgment, will ever be able to penetrate the mingled shames and distortions of the case and come up with the healing language and opinion which might really close it.

What happened in Chicago itself was an inevitable conflict between revolutionary forces looking for headline action and a police force which was in a mood to give it. In the end, both rioted together.

What has happened in the Chicago trial has been an unhappy conspiracy between way-out revolutionaries determined to discredit the judicial system itself and a judge who sought to defend the system by the most rigidly traditional kind of conduct on the bench.

As for the defendants, who have taken such fustian joy in showing their contempt for the robe and the court in Chicago, it will be interesting to see whether they want to close the story now by saying their time while they howl about injustice, or appeal to a new court and to new robes as if they believed in the ultimate fairness and accuracy of the American system of justice after all.

1970 Talk, 1970 Performance

China is getting so hungry for steel that it is now negotiating to buy up all the surplus steel Japan can produce.

This is good news for the United States steel industry because it means Japan won't have very much steel to sell on the American market.

The same news is also, from another point of view, bad news.

If it, one supposes, had news in this power politics world, this world of continued big power anarchy, if China has recovered from its internal ideological struggles enough to begin concentrating on industrial boom again.

And it can be viewed as disquieting news if China and Japan keep moving toward greater cooperation with one another in the creation of an economic sphere all of their own.

What this adds up to, then, is that we want Japan to keep its steel out of our domestic market, but we don't want Japan to sell very much steel to anybody else. What Japan should really do, to please us, would be to cut down its own steel production to just a shade less than Japan needs for itself, so that Japan would need to buy a little steel, each year, from us.

Ventilated And Busy

"The ventilated and busy spirit does not need drugs or general nagging."

That was the gently busy spirit of Agnes de Mille, choreographer by profession, whose woman, including herself, by avocation, testifying before Congress in support of more appropriations for the arts.

If the members of Congress have any saving sense at all, they will do what the lady says.

Art, she said, is not only a nation's avenue and instrument of education and communication, but its therapy.

If art is not allowed to contribute its greatest potential, and society does not find such a cathartic outlet for its emotions and feelings, then society will break out into improper patterns of behavior and release, which, she said, is what "our youth is doing today."

"The Partisan" said Miss de Mille, "turned to witchcraft, and, bear in mind, it was the children who started the accusations. Our children are turning to the happy pills, in an agony of disappointment and distrust and for want of any better means of using their energies and exercising their emotions."

TWO NINETEENTH CENTURY FRENCH DOLLS: Part Of Exhibit Open Through April At Visitors' Center Of The Harriet Beecher Stowe House, 73 Forest St., Hartford

Inside Report

By Rowland Evans Jr. Robert D. Novak

BOON — A crisis over the inevitable U.S. decision to withdraw troops from NATO by late 1971 is already building up a full head here, with some top officials in the new government of Chancellor Willy Brandt ominously warning that a major troop cut would be the first step toward "Finlandizing" West Germany.

This means that, if President Nixon pulls back anything more than a token force of 20,000 to 30,000 of the nearly 300,000 U.S. troops here, West Germany could go the way of Finland. While no Communist satellite of Moscow, Finland's every move is dominated by the Soviet Union.

This grave view, obviously exaggerated to make the point, is now being privately discussed both in Brandt's government and in Brandt's Social Democratic party. It is based on this conviction: That a U.S. troop cut, spurred by a yearning for disengagement, would have a "psychopolitical" reaction guaranteed to suck West Germany gradually out of its Western orbit.

In short, it would be universally regarded as only the first step in a unilateral U.S. fall-back, to be followed by a second and a third step, while to the east the Soviet Union retained its 30 to 32 divisions intact.

A Thought for Today

Sponsored by the Manchester Council of Churches

When I greeted a man on Main St. he responded "Well, I am alive!" The tone in which he said it sounded as if he expected to breathe his last at any moment but the bewilderment in his eye let me know he felt "on top of the world."

This being alive is closely related to the verb "think." To think is the ability to put your mind in another person's place and sense his feelings and ideas, his problems and goals. This is not an easy thing to do. Most of us stay within our own feelings and problems, our dual appointments and wishes. We never get down to the real business of thinking, "to travel in our minds and search out the mysteriousness of God's world; His people." Sensitivity training is one way teachers are seeking to make people think and feel and wonder. Thinking needs to be reinforced by "big" and the moral verb of "ought" followed by the de-licious of oneself through "I serve."

Dr. J. Manley Shaw Church South, United Methodist Church

Moreover, the prospect of a major U.S. troop cut terrifies Chancellor Brandt's highly capable manager of outposts—the word used to describe Brandt's diplomatic and economic prowess in Moscow, Warsaw, and East Germany.

Again, the reason is not that a loss of any one of the five NATO divisions would in itself vitally affect the military balance. It would simply change the already overwhelmingly pro-Soviet ratio of ground forces—now six-to-one to perhaps seven-to-one.

But worse still, a more-than-total wreck another Brandt scheme: His call for balanced inflation or a cutback in domestic reforms. Those are risks Brandt won't accept.

Although some of the economic arguments against a larger German share of NATO costs are poor-mouthing, there is no poor-political effect of a substantial U.S. troop cut. To a man, the best Western strategists here agree that it could be catastrophic.

That is why Chancellor Brandt, with the concurrence of U.S. Ambassador Kenneth Rush, is being strongly pushed to add the troop-cut question to the agenda of his April talks with Mr. Nixon. The Germans have no clear idea of what Mr. Nixon is going to do and Mr. Nixon has no clear idea of what the German response will be. Considering the enormous stakes, that is a dangerous state of affairs.

Brandt's bargaining power and encouragement Moscow (which controls all the Communist counter-moves in Brandt's new game of ostpolitik) to play an indefinite waiting game.

Connecticut Yankee

By A.H.O.

Republican State Chairman Howard Hausman has begun to recover from the sad, disconcerting blow of Governor John Dempsey's decision to retire from candidacy.

Hausman was getting so that he couldn't bear to let a day pass without writing some kind of letter to the Governor. He had finally reached the stage in which the Governor was beginning to respond to his ad- vances, if not with acented re- turn messages, at least with press conference remarks.

There was even one occasion when the Governor agreed with some point he had made. If that was beginning to be a beautiful relationship, then, of course, came the heartless bombshell: Dempsey was going to retire, and his pen pal would have to get along without him.

Such a heartless desertion by his "Dear John" may have in- creased the amount of criticism in State Chairman Hausman's outlook. And, although he has now begun to solace himself for the loss of Dempsey by making himself notice another Democrat, we think he has more sense than heart in it.

What Republican State Chairman Hausman has not done has been to make himself the first state political figure, in either party, to dignify himself with the title of State Senator Edward Marcus by paying some direct attention to it and by acting as if some of his statements were worthy of an answer.

We are cynical about Hausman's motivation. We think that, in conferring the blessing of his recognition upon Senator Marcus, he is deliberately trying to boost the particular candidate he favors. He is not a Senator who can cause most trouble for the Democrats.

He is very well, for Hausman's motivation. We think that, in conferring the blessing of his recognition upon Senator Marcus, he is deliberately trying to boost the particular candidate he favors. He is not a Senator who can cause most trouble for the Democrats.

ROCKVILLE SESSION

An apparent inability to remain employed was the factor which, in the final analysis, sent a 25-year-old Ellington man back to jail.

Being employed has been a condition of probation for Raymond Doubleday of Maple St. since six months of an eight-month jail sentence was suspended last May.

Paul McGeary, adult probation officer, said there has been no serious offense since his probation started for Doubleday. Last October he took a job as an employer's possession and sold it for $50. Doubleday was subsequently able to get it back and the charge in court at the time was reduced to breach of peace. A $75 fine was paid and probation continued.

Tuesday in court for a new offense, but it was not a consideration in judging the charge of violation of probation. The matter of employment was, and McGeary said Doubleday had lied about having a new job. He had walked out on another job obtained for him by the probation department.

Doubleday denied the lie in the first instance, and said he left the job in question because he couldn't handle the machine and had been refused a different job assignment.

The final argument from the probation officer was to bring Doubleday's mother to the courtroom in support of the position that she was supporting her son. And since the conditions of probation obviously were not workable, Judge Francis Quinn revoked probation and for Doubleday that means back to jail.

Quinn also received stolen goods against Doubleday was noted by Prosecutor Gerald W. Brady because of the disposition of the probation charge and because, he said, it was a minor offense.

Miss Nancy Thurston of 34 School St., Rockville, was fined $50 after pleading guilty to failure to pay a fine. According to the prosecutor she gave false statements to the state's attorney, accusing an individual of attacking her with a pair of hedge shears Oct. 7 in Rockville. The complaint was filed in Superior Court, Rockville, on Oct. 20. West Main St., Rockville, $20 on a substitute charge of failure to pay a fine.

Another case of a witness' change of heart caused a judge to warn the complainant that another such case would result in a nolle. A woman identified only as Miss Francis withdrew her complaint against Ernest LaPoint, 38 of 72 Windsor Ave., Rockville, charged with breach of peace by assault. The prosecutor said together, that she was apparently "using the court for her own purposes."

Albert R. Howard, 35 of 24 Grove St., Rockville, was ordered by the court to make support payments of $45 a week after he pleaded guilty to a charge of non-support. Hears under $200 bond was ordered for Ronald Curran of White Rd., Ellington, who failed to appear to answer charges of resisting arrest, evading responsibility, operating without license and operating in violation of a stop sign after a short court trial; David C. Bore, 22 of 120 E. Main St., Ellington, $15 on a charge of failure to pay a fine; Charles E. Bore, 115 on a charge of failure to pay a fine; and Daniel Ruops, 20, on a charge of operating under suspension and Dennis Sutor, 10, on a charge of failure to pay a fine.

Nolles were granted to Raymond Flavell, 18, of 88 Wellwood Dr., Vernon, charged with failure to drive in established lane and to Daniel Ruops, 20, of Castle Rd., Tolland, charged with failure to grant one-half the highway.

The local Democratic Women's Club will hold its annual membership luncheon this Saturday at 12:30 p.m. at the South Windsor Inn.

Guest speaker will be Rep. Audrey Beck, editor of the State News Letter. Mrs. Beck has served as an educator at the University of Connecticut's Department of Economics. She is now a full-time state legislator and serves on such committees as finance, state development, and the State Commission on Housing.

All members are urged to be present and are requested to invite a guest. Any newly registered Democratic woman in town interested in the group's activities is welcome to attend the function.

Further information may be obtained by contacting Mrs. J. Garofalo.

The South Windsor Men's Volleyball League has completed the fourth week in its second round of play. Four games were scheduled last week at Timothy Heights Gym.

The biggest of the week saw Industriacs defeat Woodland in two matches, 12-3, 12-4. Ken Industriacs and Jim Kinison were outstanding players in the competition and were mentioned in the Industrialists' victories. Woodland managed to save face by taking one set, 12-3, and 15-9.

Leftovers had little trouble taking the Zesters in all three matches. Scores for that set were 12-5, 12-3 and 15-9.

The Spotters split favorably with the Wildcats by taking two sets, 14-1, and 12-10. The latter barely managed to overcome the Spotters in the third set, with a score of 13-11.

Birch Hill played the No-Names in the evening. The No-Names were defeated by a 1-7 score. The evening was completely bewildered in another with a 1-2 score, but regained enough steam to take one game 12-7.

Rogers Morton Sees Country Moving Toward Racial Solution

By EDMOND LABRETON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the Republican National Committee thinks the nation is moving toward a resolution of its racial problems that will eliminate George Wallace as a presidential candidate in 1972.

And hopefully, I am confident they will, all the other groups enhancing the environment. I'm dealing now with housing, transportation, all the things that tend to integrate the community—are going to be working.

I don't believe you can say we'll integrate the schools and then forget about the community. The Wallace issue is going to be downgraded in this area. Without the segregation-integration issue there is no Wallace issue. I think the country is moving in this country toward a better quality of life and a better environment which will produce patterns in the community that are not segregated but are integrated.

Dodd Anticipates History-Making Senate Terms

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Sen. Thomas J. Dodd told 200 enthusiastic well-wishers and political friends Wednesday night that he plans to be the first three-term U.S. Senator in the history of Connecticut.

The reception was the third in a series of eight Dodd has planned to kick off his campaign for re-election. He addressed a rally in New Haven Monday and one in Bridgeport Tuesday.

Dodd and his aides exuded optimism in the friendly cocktail atmosphere at the Hartford Hilton Hotel. Cornelius Shea, a Hartford lawyer, introduced Dodd by brushing off the criticism that he had received from Joseph Duffey of Hartford and State Sen. Edward Marcus of New Haven.

In his address, Dodd was aggressive. Weinglass said the verdict is obviously a compromise. The jury was deadlocked and they broke the deadlock by negotiating.

trial" that there would be many avenues of appeal.

"For one thing," Weinglass picked, "the way the jury was picked." The defense contended that since the jury was selected from voter registration lists it omitted many young persons and black persons who did not choose to vote in the 1966 election.

"There was also the general pattern of the government that continued to deprive us from receiving a fair trial," he said. He said that in at least two instances "the government made statements and then asked the court to instruct the jury to disregard the government's remarks."

Weinglass said the verdict is obviously a compromise. The jury was deadlocked and they broke the deadlock by negotiating.

Two Days Before Attack: MacDonald's Buddy Recalls Discussion of Tate Murders

By RICHARD DREW
Associated Press Writer

FAVETTVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Capt. Jeffrey MacDonald's friend said today they discussed the Sharon Tate ritual killings in California two days before the Army doctor's wife and two children were beaten and knifed to death at nearby Ft. Bragg.

"It's all so ironic," said Col. Ronald Harrison, 26, of Columbus, Ohio.

Harrison revealed his conversation with MacDonald, 26, of Fostburg, N.Y., as scores of Army and civilian investigators continued the search for clues in the deaths of the pregnant Mrs. MacDonald, 26, and the family children, Kimberly, 6, and Kristin, 2.

"Jeff wasn't afraid of anything."

Sen. Jackson Lashes Cuts in N-Test Plans

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon is keeping secret its plans to cut back drastically, Sen. Jackson said today, its testing of nuclear weapons if the Russians violate the test ban treaty.

Critics such as Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., say they are fearful the cutback could give the Russians a tremendous edge if the Soviet Union should decide to institute prompt nuclear tests in the atmosphere should the treaty — which is being negotiated — be abandoned by the Soviet Union.

"Improvement of our capability... to monitor the terms of the treaty, to detect violations and to maintain our knowledge of Soviet nuclear capabilities, is a high priority," Jackson said.

Goldwater Would Revise Residency Rules in Voting

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Barry Goldwater urged Congress today to wipe out legal technicalities that prevent millions of citizens from voting in presidential elections.

The Arizona Republican, his party's candidate for President in 1964, said state residence requirements and restrictions on absentee voting "are utterly out of tune with the changing needs of a modern, mobile society."

In testimony prepared for a Senate constitutional rights subcommittee hearing on voting legislation, Goldwater said "in my opinion every able-bodied citizen of the several states should be entitled to participate in the choice of his President."

From Your Neighbor's Kitchen

By VIVIAN F. FERGUSON

Me siento a las mil maravillas! (I feel just wonderful now). I have just finished a delightful Spanish luncheon at Raquel Flakoff's. Only a few years ago, she had never cooked at meal in her life. It was to the dilemma, she was living in a new country.

A pharmacist who owned her own drug store, Raquel once was a resident of Cuba. Married to a physician, she had plenty of household help. Her meals were ready and waiting. Raquel's drug store was a considerable distance from her home in a very poor neighborhood. The people she served came to her for more than pharmaceuticals. She was looked upon in much the same way as the family doctor. Customers brought her their personal problems along with minor ailments. The pharmacist delighted in her work. It was a rewarding life — helping others. She felt good.

Under the Castro dictatorship, changes were made. There was no merchandise on the store shelves. If a few items could be secured, customers queued up until everything was gone. A police aide would be brought into one's home without the inspection of the block chairman. Even a dish could be borrowed from a neighbor without permission. Personal freedom was gone. Clothing and food were rationed. Schools were teaching a political philosophy disagreeable to the Flakoff family, and there were two children. It was time to start a new life.

The head of the family, Dr. Ruben Flakoff, must give up his practice as a specialist in adult medicine and a teaching physician. Required to serve his internship and residency again in this country, he came to Manchester Hospital where he is now chief of emergency room services. He is also medical consultant for disability for Social Security at Raquel's.

The first purchase Raquel made towards her household items in the United States was an espresso coffee pot so she could make strong Cuban coffee. At the time, her husband was serving his internship. It was just a small pot. All personal assets and almost all possessions were left behind in Cuba, at the demand of the government.

With a twinkle in his eye, Dr. Flakoff recalls the fried eggs and boiled rice his wife was preparing like a Cuban. He teased and chided her until she created from memory the dishes she and other Cuban women served to the servants at Raquel's. Arroz con Pollo (rice with chicken) is a Spanish dish that has traveled to every country that was settled by the Spanish people.

Traditionally, the rice and chicken are served in the same dish. Raquel has altered this and serves the two separately. She finds the chicken in the United States to be of a different texture than that which she knew in Cuba. In Spain, the rice is colored and seasoned with saffron. In Cuba, saffron was replaced with biol (pronounced bee-hole). Biol adds color only. It can be purchased here in stores catering to Spanish clientele.

Cuban food is dominated by a few indigenous foods. Most of the popular dishes contain one or more of these foods such as beans, rice, plantains, chicken, pork and seafood. Starchy foods are greatly enjoyed including black beans (tripeles, negros), rice and beans, and yuca.

As we enter the Flakoff home, a feeling of welcome is immediately apparent. This must be the warmth for which the Cuban is famous. Spanish music played by Percy Faith sets the mood. We drink malta, a non-alcoholic drink popular with the ladies. It tastes a little like liquid vitamins. It is given to nursing mothers, so it must be good for you.

Cuban gentlemen probably would choose cerveza (air-vay-sa) beer. On most special occasions, sparkling cider imported from Spain would be served. It most certainly would be present on New Year's Eve just as champagne. Cuban tradition commands that 12 grapes be eaten at midnight on New Year's Eve as symbols of good luck for the 12 months ahead. Raquel serves the yellow rice attractively garnished with green peas and red peppers. Instead of Cuban bread, we will have Cuban crackers, in two sizes.

Arroz con Pollo
(Rice with Chicken)
1 whole chicken, broasted, and legs with thighs (8-10 lb. size)
2 cloves garlic, crushed
2 eight-oz. cans tomato sauce
2 medium green peppers, cut in small pieces
1 cup dry white wine
1 teaspoon biol (for color)
2 medium onions, cut in small pieces
2 1/2 cups extra long-grain rice
1 small can green peas
1 can red roasted peppers
salt

Mix the tomato sauce, peppers, onions in a covered Dutch oven. Lightly sprinkle chicken with garlic and salt, and add to the pot. Cook over medium heat one hour; then add wine. Cook until chicken is done, approximately one hour more, stirring occasionally.

Wash rice in water two or three times. Remove chicken from pot, taking a little sauce, and place in oven at 250 until rice is done. To sauce remaining in Dutch oven, add rice and 2 1/2 cups warm water. Cook over high heat until boiling. Add biol. Then reduce heat to low and continue cooking, stirring occasionally, until rice is cooked. Garnish rice with green peas and roasted red peppers cut in strips.

Yuca, also known as cassava, manioc, and several other names, is a starchy tropical vegetable. Mostly, yuca is boiled and served with a sauce. The tuberous root may be served in place of potatoes. It can be purchased frozen in plastic bags at Latin markets.

Yuca con Mojo
1 1/2 lbs. yuca (cassava)
4 cloves garlic, cut in small pieces
olive oil
lemon juice
Boil the yuca in enough water to cover until tender, about one-half hour. Add salt to taste.

Report Says: Blue Cross $10.5 Million In the Red

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP)— Connecticut Blue Cross reports it had operating losses of $10.5 million during 1969 as it paid out $97.5 million to hospitals in the state.

The health care plan was granted a 15.6 per cent increase in its group rates in December 1969, and is currently seeking a 20.8 per cent increase in its rates for individual subscribers.

The annual meeting of the Connecticut Blue Cross Corporation was held in New Haven Tuesday. Board chairman James A. German cited continued increases in the cost of health care as the reason for the loss, along with an increase in hospitalization of Blue Cross subscribers.

"Blue Cross members accounted for 41 per cent of the cases handled by Connecticut's 38 general hospitals last year and the average length of stay was 16.6 days," German said.

Blue Cross enrollment reached 1,568,182 persons during 1969, German reported.

During Tuesday's meeting two new directors of Connecticut Blue Cross were elected. They are John M. Golden of New Haven, who is a member of the Democratic National Committee, and Joseph H. Roberts of Milford, president of Edgemoor-Milford Inc.

Two new members of the Blue Cross Corporation were elected, William Horowitz, president of General Bank and Trust Co. of New Haven, and Dr. Wilbur D. Johnson, dental surgeon at Yale-New Haven Hospital, and a member of the faculty of the Yale School of Medicine.

Plantains are another popular starchy dish. They resemble bananas but are less sweet and usually much larger. The plantain may be boiled, baked, fried or roasted. While high in starch, it is rich in vitamin content.

Plantains en Tentation
4 ripe plantains
1/4 lb. butter
1 cinnamon stick
1/2 cup dark brown sugar
1/2 cup sweet wine
Try to buy very ripe plantains. Peel. Melt butter in frying pan at very low heat. Add sliced plantains, one at a time, and cook at very low heat until brown on all sides, turning from one side to the other. Serve warm.

What's in a Name
DUBLIN (Ireland) (AP)— The only claim to fame enjoyed by the sleepy little Irish town of Navan was that it was spelled the same way backwards.

Then local authoritaries changed it to the old Irish name of An Uaimh.

However, businessmen complained that nobody can pronounce the new name. Consequently a plebiscite will be held to see whether people want it changed back to Navan.

Tolland County Politics

Sheriff Post Sought By Nicholas Pawluk

By BETTE QUATRALE (Herald Correspondent)

Former Tolland County Sheriff Nicholas Pawluk of Rockville has announced his intentions to seek the Democratic nomination for the post.

His traditional Republican opponent incumbent Paul Sweeney has already announced he will seek re-election to the post under the Republican banner.

In a letter to fellow Democrats, Pawluk pointed to his previous term as county sheriff and to his "long and active campaign" four years ago.

Only 23 votes of a total of 25,000 votes cast divided the two personal candidates.

In traveling through the county in recent weeks, Pawluk claims to have found "overwhelming support for my becoming an active candidate."

"With all this enthusiastic support from all corners of the county," and "with the advantage of having been a former sheriff," Pawluk confirmed his intention to seek the sheriff's post.

He is president of the Tolland County Democratic Association, a member of the Vernon Democratic Town Committee and former president of the Rockville Young Democrats.

In addition to serving a term as high sheriff for Tolland County, Pawluk has held the posts of assessor, alderman and sheriff for the former city of Rockville and has served as a town constable.

A graduate of Rockville High School, Pawluk attended Hartford College (University of Hartford). He served in the U.S. Navy in World War II.

He is employed as an advertising salesman by the Rockville Reminder.

Steels To Announce
Vernon's Republican Congressional candidate Robert Steele will officially announce his intention to seek the party's nomination for Congressman from the 2nd district next Thursday at 9 a.m. at the Chestnut Lodge Restaurant in Colchester.

Steels has already garnered the endorsement of the Vernon and Chester Republican Town Committees.

Peter Cushman of Old Lyme is also seeking the Republican nomination for the Congressional seat now held by Democrat William St. Onge of Putnam.

Cushman declared his candidacy in a series of campaign appearances about three weeks ago, including one in Vernon, Conn. He is the son of local personality Bob Steele.

Donahue Speaks Tonight
Probable U.S. senatorial candidate Democrat Alphonso Donahue Jr. will speak at tonight's meeting of the Tolland County Democratic Association at 8 in the Ellington Town Hall.

The father of 13 children, Donahue is a member of the Business Leadership Advisory Council of the Office of Economic Opportunity 1966 Poverty program.

Tolland County

Payment Reports Due Farmers In Farm Program

Tolland County farmers will be young three million farmers throughout the country who will receive reports on farm program payments they earned last year to aid them in preparing their income tax forms.

This continues a service started two years ago according to Joseph P. Bagala, chairman of the Tolland County Agricultural (ABC) Committee.

The report includes all direct payments earned by farmers during 1969 under programs administered by the ABC service. These include agricultural conservation program, wheat crop, livestock feed grain, cotton, sugar and cropland adjustment payments.

The report service is made here possible through the use of new data processing equipment, donated by the University of Connecticut.

The chairman said the payment report will include materials and service (CMS) payments made directly to vendors. He pointed out that some payments made late in December may not be on the report because of lack of time to process them.

Where this is the case, the county office will send a supplemental form to the farmer. Farmers are asked to read the explanation of the report carefully and verify the amounts by comparison with their own records. Any errors should be reported to the county office, Tolland County Agricultural Center, Rt. 30, Vernon.

The 'Outside' Congregation
DALLAS (AP)— The Rev. Vic Jackson, a former London street gang leader and now a Baptist minister, told a group here that "the only way a church can fulfill its ministry is to relate to those who wouldn't come to it on a bet."

HRC Hears of Local Plans To Teach Minority History

The Human Relations Commission (HRC) listened to Benoit Junior High School teacher Mrs. Betty Intagliata talk about implementing minority history in Manchester's social studies curriculum, at a meeting Tuesday night in the Municipal Building.

Mrs. Intagliata, chairman of the townwide social studies curriculum committee, was invited to explain what local schools are doing to "update" texts to include more minority group history.

"We've been told by Arthur Green (director of the Connecticut Commission on Human Rights and Opportunities) that we're probably deficient," and by a former member of a women's group that we're making a tremendous effort in Manchester," said Dr. Warren.

He asked Mrs. Intagliata to explain what the exact situation is.

Mrs. Intagliata said she is not proposing special elective courses but wants to implement minority history into what is already being taught.

"It's a matter of putting things in that have been forgotten, that have been ignored, that have been thrown under the rug," she said.

The issue of a Manchester Negro history for five years, said the curriculum committee was planning proposals for curriculum changes by Dr. Warren who did not refer along this line, and that an in-service program to expose teachers to available materials is being considered.

Dr. Warren said, "This has been pretty well documented as a clear cut case of discrimination," and, he reported that, as far as he knows, the Connecticut Commission on Human Rights and Opportunities is investigating the situation.

A report with recommendations from the League of Women Voters on housing was presented by William Wagner, but the commission decided not to offer its support until studying it more carefully.

Frank Rizza, HRC member, asked the commission to vote on a motion placing it in enough local activity.

Commission members also decided to make a budget request for a full or part-time director this year since they are not yet "involved" in enough local activity.

Judge Hoffman Rules: Wiretapping Did Not Taint Case Against Chicago Seven

CHICAGO (AP)—Judge Julius J. Hoffman ruled today that wiretapped conversations did not taint the government's case against five men convicted of inciting rioting at the time of the 1968 Democratic National Convention.

The judge refused to hear further arguments from the defense on the issue. His ruling denied a defense motion to make public the contents of the wiretapping logs.

"I find the electronic surveillance conducted was expressly authorized by the U.S. attorney general to gather intelligence vital to the security of the government," the judge said.

"The surveillance was lawful and consequently not subject to discovery," the judge said.
