Airport Hearing to Draw Over 1,000

By HOLLY GANTNER
(Herald Correspondent)

No conversation is complete without a reference to it, and almost no local resident doesn't have a strong opinion about it. A public hearing to discuss it is shaping up as one of Coventry's time-consuming events, with more than 1,000 people expected. Nothing in many years has excited such a stir, not to say controversy.

"It" can be summed up in one seven-letter word: Airport.

On Wednesday night, residents of Coventry, as well as many in the adjoining towns of Bolton, Tolland and Vernon, will turn out for a hearing on the subject of a proposed airport which would be located in the northeast corner of the town, between Cedar Swamp Rd and Bread and Milk St.

The high school gym is the place and 8 p.m. is the hour. The first glimmer that Coventry might be the site of a state-owned airport began to show up last spring with the release of the Hart Report, a study commissioned by the 1967 session of the Connecticut General Assembly. The purpose of the study was to take inventory of existing airport facilities and operating conditions in the state, a forecast of future needs in these areas and finally recommendations for a statewide system of airports to meet the predicted demand.

When the Federal Harris Associates, engineers of Stamford and consultants for the study, came up with a recommendation for a system of so-called "reliever" airports to take the load off of Bradley and Branford Fields, the report also recommended expansion of existing facilities in the state, but it is the deliver theory that Coventry is the site of a new airport which has attracted the most attention.

For an airport on the site, "water and sewer requirements are sufficiently low to be met by on-site facilities and no community services would be needed."

Standards of Size Need Standardizing

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP) — One of the oracles of life is that size does not matter.

As soon as you get used to it, size or occasion that seems fitting, something happens to it. It changes.

It would seem pretty important that a size remain constant. For example, how could we estimate the value of property we owned—or even find out just where it began or ended—if an inch yesterday weren't the same inch the day after tomorrow? Or if a foot refused to stay a foot long—and no more or less?

Who could take pride in running a four-minute mile if someone haphazardly decided to shrink the length of the mile and at the same time extend the length of minutes and seconds?

In time a handkerief Boy Scout would be able to limp a mile in less than two minutes on a stretched foot.

Yet, although sizes are up

Residents Now Need Permits For Alterations on Homes

John Wilnauer, Bolton's first building inspector as well as an assessor, would like to remind residents that permits are now needed for any electrical, plumbing or heating work, and for any work that will change the structure of a building such as cutting into a wall to make a larger door.

The new application forms have arrived from the printer, and Wilnauer is always in his office daily from 9 to 10 a.m. At other times, he may be out in the field.

There have been very few certificates of registration (building permits) since Wilnauer took over zoning agent duties from Donald Tedford, and none in January and February.

Certificates of registration issued by Wilnauer since Oct. 17—all in 1969—are as follows:

U. S. Bureau of Standards can help you check your standards on a home, how are you ever going to be able properly to size-up a home?

Proposed airport plan for northwest Coventry. Dotted lines show proposed extension of runways.

Report Issued by WRPA

Airport's Impact Found Mixed

In a carefully detailed report prepared by the Windham Regional Planning Agency on the probable impact of the proposed Bolton-Coventry Airport, the summary concludes that "it appears that the airport itself will not have a great physical impact on the environment."

"The chief drawback," the report says, "will be the operation of low-flying aircraft and lights from the landing strips and runways. Even with light planes, this can be an environmental factor of considerable importance to the area people who live in what they rightly consider to be quiet residential neighborhoods."

"The economic picture is less clear. Significant benefits could only be realized by intensive industrial development and this would require expenditures of an unknown amount and a change in the residential nature of the area. If funds for industrial development are available there are better opportunities elsewhere in the town."

"In conclusion, while the negative aspects of the airport as presented in this report appear certain, the economic gains are speculative, and it becomes a question of a trade-off of the quality of the environment for possible economic benefits."

The report was written by WRPA Director Robert Young, with research by Lester Barber and Margaret Hemphill, both of whom live in Coventry. It was issued over the weekend and is now the most detailed document to come from any source on the impact aspects of the proposed state-owned general aviation facility. There will be a limited number of copies available at Wednesday night's public hearing on the issue.

The report deals with several impact areas, beginning with the environment, and first of all with alteration of natural vegetation. The report notes that an airport requires removal of most of the natural forest cover. Assuming housing would be 70 in on the 40-acre site, the report estimates that the "typical practice in the region is removal of forest cover for house site and some clearing for lawn and gardens with some management of the rest of the area which essentially is left in the natural state."

Drainage is the next environmental factor dealt with. An airport would result in paved surfaces equal to 8.8 miles of road 30 feet wide. Housing development would require an estimated 1.5 miles of paved road of the same width. Airport buildings would consist of hangars, sales and service, would be a twenty minor factor from the proposed airport and would be considerably less than that of a housing development."

Despite the fact that the proposed Bolton-Coventry facility is not intended for use, nor suitable for use, by big jets, the noise factor must be taken into consideration.

"Bands of Planes"
The WRPA report states: "Peak air traffic at general aviation airports is during weekdays, particularly during peak weather conditions in the summer. This occurs at the time that their homes are empty, and their families are spending most of their time at the airport. During these peak hours, a constant parade of planes landing and taking off can be expected. Usually included in the landing maneuver is a parallel pass of the landing strip to observe activity. According to the manager of the Coventry Airport, which is comparable to the proposed Coventry Airport an average of 16 planes are landing or waiting to land at any given time during week end daylight hours."

"The amount of traffic anticipated and the altitude at which the planes will operate add to the noise factor. The noise level is expected to maintain equipment to handle fire emergencies."

The next major factor dealt with in the WRPA report is the economic impact, beginning with the tax picture in a general way, since "the scope of this study does not permit detailed estimations."

As for the present tax income, "undeveloped land, which incurs small expense to the town, is a tax asset. The specific land in the project area is not completely undeveloped, and does incur a tax expense as well as providing tax revenue. As determined from the town's air photo survey maps, present tax income from the properties that would be added is $8,022. On the other side, the 17 school children in the area cost the town $7,174."

"As presently zoned, the area would develop in single family homes," so that considering some value, number of children per house and other factors, "it does not appear that the area would be attracted to an area because of an airport."

"Each situation is unique. Danbury and Branford airports have substantial peripheral economic development associated with them, while Windham and Danbury airports do not. The Danbury and Branford installations are located in prime industrial areas which with proper zoning and development are expected to develop intensively with the airport."

"Recent history indicates that the traffic generated by residential development of the area would result in a tax income of $8,000 to the town

Another outgrowth of this project, it has also been pointed out that, when operable, the facility would use salt to maintain the runways in winter ways during the winter months.

The impact of the proposal has been felt in the town of Coventry, since the Harris Report was first released. In fact, the local Democratic platform came out as an unambiguously opposed to the proposal, while Republicans preferred to wait until they knew more about the subject. The town council, which is the governing body, has also given general aviation airports, has also come out against the project.

Council Remains Neutral
No other town agency has made a statement one way or the other, but all will be asked to submit thoughts on the subject to the Town Council at the hearing. The Town Council has maintained a neutral stance on the subject, and will continue to do so until after the hearing. Town Council Chairman Joseph Lewis, in a statement at the hearing, said that he feels a neutral public stance is appropriate. The purpose of the hearing is for town people in general to be heard and ask questions of the state and town officials who will be present, and a strong pro or con position, a pilot would have to have at least a 1,000 foot ceiling and three miles visibility in order to use the facility in Coventry.

The site, according to Wetwell's report, is a relatively good topographical situation for an airport, with both air and ground investigations. All available literature thus far has stressed the fact that only light aircraft would use the site, and that the airport would be a relief for small business jets as well.

Without anticipating questions from this organization is expected to be heard at the hearing. CTCV is also now in the process of circulating petitions against the airport.

Businessmen Find Setback
In Solving of Slum Problems

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP)—Following the 1967 riots that scourged American cities, hundreds of corporations plunged into urban affairs programs, some out of guilt, others because of self-interest, more because they felt they had to.

They donated cash, offered the services of staffs and executives, even set aside parts of their facilities. Many began minority hiring programs, and a relative few became involved in economic development programs.

Now, less than three years later, the evidence seems to suggest that many companies have pulled back, that their confidence has been tempered if not shaken, and that a period of reflection and reduced activity has set in.

These are some of the conclusions reached by Dr. Jules Cohn, a former college professor now on the staff of McKinsey & Co., management consultants. His study is reported in the current Harvard Business Review.

"No one says he wants to give up," Cohn writes, "but a large majority of the top executives interviewed felt it is time to re-examine commitments and, perhaps, recast programs."

In one broad area, that of community relations, Cohn said in an interview that business men "don't know what to do."

"Business has learned that this is hard, painful, costly stuff," he said. "It's more likely now than ever that businessmen will react only to the extent that there is pressure."

Based on his study of the experiences of 247 major corporations, Cohn believes that businessmen understand why government failed but, he said, they unwittingly convinced themselves, "We have the know-how."

They had reason to be optimistic, Cohn stated, because they had great records of achievement. But they learned, he added, that while they were expert in running companies, they had few skills in community politics and black-white relations.

"They were used to being able to command respect," he said, "but they were unable to command it from the blacks. They were boycotted and called names."

In decisive matters "they agreed with them, and they found they had no control over these people. They had the same problems that college presidents have with students today," he said. "I don't think any of us really knew what we were getting into, saw action was needed, and we moved fast, maybe too fast. The tank turned out to be Hercules."

Whatever the reasons, he stated in the article, "only a third of the 247 companies are actively hiring the hard core, and fewer than half of these."

Fish Story
Has Political Implications

By DAVID LANCASTER
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP)—The Duke of Rothesay is furious and an underwater crisis is building up between Britain and Denmark because of a tasty fish.

The duke, Scotland's premier hereditary title, complained that he booked only nine Atlantic salmon last year instead of the usual 100 or more at the river near his ancestral castle. The government fears that the fish may disappear unless Denmark's commercial fishermen stop netting salmon on the high seas.

Denmark, angry at the accusations, has rejected a demand by Britain and 10 other countries for a 10-year ban on salmon trawling. Britain and Denmark have agreed to hold special salmon talks within the next few weeks, however. In May the 14-nation North Atlantic Fisheries Commission is to discuss ways to save the salmon.

The salmon catch in Canada's Atlantic rivers dropped by 45 per cent in 1969. Last winter in London 40 tons of salmon reached the market instead of the 100 tons in 1968. The Duke of Rothesay and other Scottish aristocrats argue their salmon rivers are being ruined by high-seas commercial fishing. Salmon catches in Scotland are down 25 per cent or more, according to statistics vary from year to year and do not prove that the salmon face extinction. But politicians have been depicting the Atlantic salmon as a national treasure. Once they appeared all the way from northern Norway to the Mediterranean, they have vanished from France, Denmark, Holland and Portugal.

They breed only in the streams of Canada, Norway, Scotland and Ireland.

From their breeding rivers they swim out to sea for two or three years, before looping back to the rivers to spawn.

About 10 years ago the food fisherman made their first net for salmon catch in 1961, netting 127 tons. Later the migration routes were charted, the Danes moved in. The British say 2,000 tons were caught off Greenland in 1969. The total catch of Atlantic salmon last year was estimated at 10,000 tons.

Denmark argues that to avoid scientific proof exists that Danish nets have depleted the salmon runs in other countries. Danish fishermen say they fish for other deep-sea species and the salmon are netted only by accident. They call the catch negligible.

Denmark seems willing to consider such measures as different-sized nets but not an outright ban. West Germany and Sweden side with Danes in the controversy. The three countries have imposed quotas and pollution restrictions for Baltic salmon in the Baltic Sea. Their position is that similar measures would suffice in the Atlantic.

The annual Jaycee-PTA-sponsored Easter Egg Hunt will be held Saturday at Cotton Springs Park beginning at 10 a. m.

Songwriter Arrested In Drug Possession

FARETTVILLE, Ga. (AP)—Joe South, who scored an international hit in 1969 with the song "Games People Play," was arrested on charges of driving while under the influence of a narcotic.

Deputy sheriffs who picked him up Saturday said South was driving erratically and that they found in his car about two ounces of a substance they believed to be heroin.

South, 30, furnished $5,000 bail for his court appearance. The date for his court hearing was not set immediately and fewer than half of these."

How Potholes Are Formed

This Is the Bumpy Season for Drivers

It's pothole season again. Beginning with the January thaw, potholes are formed in three phases: snow on the shoulder, freezing, and thawing. The most common form of pothole results from the repeated freezing and thawing action of water trapped beneath the road. A lens, or layer, of clear ice forms beneath the pavement, causing reduced load pressure. This water freezes, producing a lens which sucks up water from the road. The lens is forced upward by the expansion of the ice. At the next thaw, the ice is melted, the raised pavement loses its support, and the next winter it will run over the weakened area, breaking through. Potholes are formed by water freezing just below the pavement, which cracks the pavement. The water can get there in two ways: it can seep up from above through cracks in the asphalt, or it can be sucked up from below by capillary action. The solution for Manchester's cause of the large number of potholes is "selective reconstruction," according to O'Neill, it is the frequency of freezing and thawing cycles. It makes a try. Ironically, progress has worked the pothole problem. In fact, he might decide to rebuild the road, but he believes that this is the most economical method. Roads high on O'Neill's list for reconstruction include Hartford Rd., Middle Tpk., Keeney St., N. Main St., Bush Hill Rd., and Adams St. O'Neill said, "The selective reconstruction of these roads must be coupled with an effective storm drainage program to carry off both the surface and subsurface water."

The latest such fire caused damage estimated at $500,000 Thursday night and Friday morning to the former McLaughlin hat factory, which was being used as a storage space by other firms. Most of the fires have been in abandoned or empty buildings.

Insurgency a Failure In Congo Brazzaville

KINSHASA, the Congo (AP) — An insurgent group tried to overthrow the Communist-line regime of President Marien Nguabi in Congo Brazzaville before dawn today, but by noon the coup apparently had failed.

Informants said the plotters, believed to be military men, seized several major public buildings including the radio station and arrested Nguabi about 4 a.m.

For about two hours, Radio Brazzaville drummed out announcements that the government had been overthrown. Just before dawn, shooting could be heard across the Congo River and fires were seen.

The broadcast said the Communist constitution that Nguabi proclaimed last Dec. 31 had been dissolved. It said the names of members of the new government would be announced later in the day.

Just after 7 a.m. Radio Brazzaville went silent. Then it came back on the air saying a group of 20 persons had tried to topple the government but failed. It said the coup leader was killed.

Nguabi charged in the hooded days of August 1969 when Nguabi staged his own coup.

The Brazzaville government had announced March 17 that there were rumors of a coup in the making, but it had labeled them "absurd." There were two attempts to unseat Nguabi last year.

Congo Brazzaville as it is generally known, one of four former territories of French Equatorial Africa, first started its move toward the left under President Alphonse Massamba-Delala, who in 1963 overthrew Arphe Fulbert Youlou, the president since independence in 1960.

Nguabi deposed Massamba-Delala in August 1969 and last December proclaimed the "People's Republic of the Congo," with a hammer and sickle on its flag and the Internationale for the anthem.

UCLA Wins Fourth Straight Title, Tops Jacksonville in NCAA Finals

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — Steve Patterson says UCLA wanted to prove it had a great team this season without Lew Alcindor. And he thinks the Bruins made their point.

"I think we established ourselves as No. 1," he said after UCLA defeated Jacksonville 84-69 Saturday, winning their fifth consecutive title.

Patterson, a 6-foot-9 junior from Santa Maria, Calif., said the Bruins have felt the pressure of playing in the shadow of Alcindor, who dominated 7-foot-2 Jacksonville from 1968-70 and UCLA to three consecutive titles.

"It worked on the fellows," said Patterson, who played on the Bruins who should have won the national championship but did not.

Wooden also believes he will have an outstanding team next year since he loses only senior players. "When you see that every place you go, it works on you," he said.

Coch J. Wooden told the Bruins last week he did not think he would prove himself as a coach. "I'm not sure if I'm a coach," he said. "I don't know if I'm a coach or not."

"If I had not won before, I would have been a coach," he said. "I don't know if I'm a coach or not."

Wooden has had 22 consecutive winning seasons at UCLA since 1949. He led the Bruins to national titles in 1950, 1953, 1955 and 1957, including two in 1956, before taking the Bruins to three consecutive titles.

The Bruins coach told them he believed he had five teams that should have won the national championship but did not.

"You know, you come into a city to play the winner," he said. "You know, you come into a city to play the winner."

Marquette's Meminger Stars In 33rd NIT Hoop Tourney

NEW YORK (AP) — He is not of heroic proportions, but Marquette's Dean Meminger does it with his quiet play in basketball games with quiet proficiency.

Coch Al McGuire of Marquette called Meminger "my star" — and an audience of 15,000 at Madison Square Garden Saturday gave him a standing ovation.

Meminger's star quality play helped Marquette put away St. John's 63-63 in the 33rd National Invitation Tournament.

"Every team has to have a star," said McGuire. "I've seen the best of the game in Marquette's championship," said Meminger.

Dean picked up the Most Valuable Player trophy for his work in the tournament, but was characteristically modest.

"The whole team contributed," said the stooped-shouldered, 6-foot-7 Meminger. "It was a team effort."
