Housing Objectives Adopted by C-DAP

Members of the C-DAP last night adopted goals and a 10-point list of housing objectives for Manchester's proposed Community Development Action Plan and added an 11th new objective.

Before completing action on the proposals drafted by the task force on housing, the agency members spent more than four hours agonizing over the wording and implications.

The list on housing had been tackled at an earlier meeting but was tabled for further discussion. Last night, George Katz, chairman of the housing task force, presented to explain the proposals as submitted.

The season at times was extremely confused, as Katz and the six agency members attending offered varying opinions and solutions to the wording of the objectives, which incorporated numerous "loosely" areas such as low income, multi-family and high-rise housing, housing for the indigent, providing organized housing and social service facilities to restore them as contributing members of the community.

One particularly sensitive objective, for example, which related to welfare housing provisions, spoke of doing "our regional fair share in this area."

That phrase was strongly objected to by former Town Director John Gardino, who is opposed to regionalization.

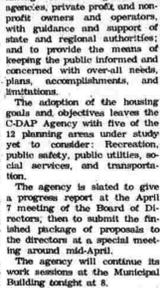

A second objective discussed the community's responsibility for "residential multi-family units in proximity to downtown areas, which establishes standards appropriate to the needs of the elderly, single persons, and young married couples, and which restricts high-rise construction to the downtown area."

In answer to questions about that objective, Katz said the task force had intended "downtown" to be interpreted as "areas of commercial concentration."

He said the objective, and another calling for more stringent zoning regulations, were intended to make multi-family dwellings permissible in all areas, in order to take "our share" of the political arena.

Several agency members, however, felt that by identifying specific apartment site areas, the town would be contributing to a jump in the land values.

AIP in a Fragmented State As 1970 Elections Approach

By TED SIMMONS
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP)—Two years ago, George Wallace of Alabama won a place on the ballot of 30 states as a third party candidate for president. He did it through the efforts of a group of state organizations using various names, but referred to generally as the American Independent party (AIP).

At the peak of his campaign, there was speculation that Wallace's organization conceivably could form the nucleus of a major permanent third party offering state and local candidates and competing with Republicans and Democrats in some states.

As the 1970 elections draw closer, however, the AIP, almost everywhere, is suffering from a lack of funds, a lack of organization and from intra-party squabbles. Its chances, according to a national survey by The Associated Press, of electing anything more than a handful of local and/or state officials are extremely remote.

In many cases where candidates are being offered this year, party spokesmen acknowledge that they have little hope of winning. Even in the five southern states which Wallace carried in 1968, AIP activity is either fragmented or nonexistent.

In Wallace's home state of Alabama, ironically, there is no AIP. In his presidential campaign Wallace used the regular party machinery there—Gov. Albert Brewer was one of his election—and Hubert H. Humphrey was listed as the candidate for president of two spin-off groups, the National Democratic Party of Alabama and the Alabama Independent Democratic party. Wallace and Brewer are now fighting for the Democratic nomination for governor.

In Mississippi the situation is much the same. Regular state Democrats formed the basis of Wallace support, and the majority of them are expected to back state Democratic candidates this year.

In Georgia, chairman Roy V. Harris says the AIP is "laying low and waiting for '72," when Wallace may try for the presidency again—if he wins this year's bid for governor.

One strong Wallace supporter, Dr. McKee Ruggrett, has announced that he will run for governor. But indications at the moment are that if Ruggrett, a state legislator, makes the race it will be in the Democratic primary.

A fight between Walter Caruth, Arkansas state chairman, and Jim Johnson, national committeeman, has split what there is of the AIP in that state, which elected a Democratic senator, a Republican governor and went for Wallace for president in 1968.

In Louisiana, Dr. E. R. Abramson, state chairman, said the party is considering challenging Rep. Edwin Edwards, a Democrat from the 7th District. But Abramson said the decision will depend upon "the availability of a candidate and, of course, financing."

The survey turned up only one state—Tennessee—where Democrats and Republicans express concern about the growth of the AIP.

Officials there say the party now has organizations in 70 of Tennessee's 95 counties, and "solid commitments from several big contributors that they will back us in elections this year."

Although no one has announced, the party is expected to offer candidates for governor, at least two congressional seats, possibly a U.S. Senate seat and many of the state's 132 seats in the legislature.

But even in Tennessee, prospects of success are not bright. Elsewhere they are dimmer. In North Carolina, Ohio, California, Michigan and Texas, the party is split by factional fighting.

Walter Green, a Burlington attorney, and Reid Stubble, a Charlotte restaurant operator, are in the midst of a court battle for control of the party in North Carolina.

The conflict will not help the chances of the party's two announced candidates for congress, Gene Loggott of New Bern and Lynwood Hullock of Greensboro.

The Ohio party also has two announced candidates—both of them for governor and both battling for control of the party. The candidates are Robert W. Annable of Parma Heights, a party machinery there—Gov. Lawton of Columbus. Both are attempting to have the other's name stricken from the ballot.

In California, the fight is between William F. Shaerer of San Diego, a consultant in political management, and Keith Greene of San Francisco, a used car salesman. Greene is recognized as chairman by the secretary of state, and is Wallace's man.

Both have filed as candidates for governor, with the winner Democrats formed the basis of Wallace support, and the majority of them are expected to back state Democratic candidates this year.

In Louisiana, Dr. E. R. Abramson, state chairman, said the party is considering challenging Rep. Edwin Edwards, a Democrat from the 7th District. But Abramson said the decision will depend upon "the availability of a candidate and, of course, financing."

January, declaring that "Wallace wanted to control the state of Texas and resisted any effort to organize state parties on the precinct and county level."

In some states, such as Pennsylvania and Iowa, the AIP may attempt to run write-in candidates.

Party activity elsewhere is varied. Some examples: Harvey H. Wilker of Hagerstown, Md., has announced for the Senate seat now held by Joseph D. Tydings, a Democrat, and party officials say candidates for governor and other state offices will be announced.

But Lawrence B. Scalley, executive secretary and general counsel for the Maryland party, mentioned one problem which apparently has plagued the AIP everywhere. "We got 30 cents in the mail the other day," he said.

AIP officials in Indiana say they will offer candidates for secretary of state, state treasurer and state auditor, as well as local offices. In Missouri, candidates have announced for the U.S. Senate, the U.S. House and one legislative seat, but chairman Elmer Smith says this is just to keep the party on the ballot.

There are other candidates and potential candidates scattered throughout the states, and removed from power by placing sugar in a warm oven for a few minutes.

Utah appear to be two of the best examples—efforts have been made to organize from the grass roots up.

Idaho has AIP chairmen in 34 of the state's 44 counties and plans an assembly in June to endorse candidates.

Utah has organizations in 18 of 29 counties. State Chairman Clyde H. Freeman says the party hopes to have a full slate of candidates this year, declaring, "We realize we're small now, but we've come a long way."

Sequel To Erfurt

What could possibly have inspired the four powers who have been partitioning Germany for the last 25 years to hold their first meeting in partitioned Berlin in 11 years?

The answer is easily found. Britain, France, Russia and the United States had some instinct to talk to each other again about the problems of the city and country they are partitioning because of the meeting that had been held the week before at Erfurt, in East Germany.

There the heads of state of the two halves of Germany, Willy Brandt and Willi Stoph, staged the first such meeting in the 25 years of the partition. They quoted Goethe to each other. They began a discussion of the possible basis for a future easier relationship between the two halves of their country.

And they raised the spectre of what is certain to happen, some day, if the victors of World War II don't pull themselves and their partitioning out of Germany some day soon. What will happen is that the Germans will get together of their own accord and by their own means and make their first act of unity one of throwing Britain, France, Russia and the United States out of German soil.

So, when Britain, France, Russia and the United States held their first meeting in Berlin in 11 years, part of their purpose was to reassure one another that they were still all there, still in control of the German situation.

And underneath their discussion was their worry about what they had better do to keep the situation from slipping out of their own control.

Wisely, but also inevitably, one of the first things they thought of was a token easing of one of their own controls. The three nations of the West offered to make it easier for citizens of East Germany to travel West.

That small action exemplified the large basic truth of the big power situation in Germany. It is that the only way they can avoid losing their rule in Germany is to begin giving it up, with as good a voluntary grace as they can muster.

Fischer's Modesty

They asked Bobby Fischer the other day who was the greatest chess player in the world.

Fischer, who is now 27, thought back over his own career, which first came into prominence when he won the United States championship at the age of 14, and then gave his answer.

"It is nice to be modest," he said. "But it would be stupid if I did not tell the truth. It is Fischer."

We move to correct his logic. It wouldn't have been modest at all. The most modest thing any extraordinary talent can do is to declaim its own existence, thus forcing everybody else into a continual reaction of what the inevitable eye present inside every extraordinary talent is always eager to hear.

What Fischer said was the really modest thing to say.

Lottery Gains

Legislation for Massachusetts sweepstakes or state lottery, managed to get its first test in the Senate March 31. The 20-19 vote indicated rough going for the bill, but reconsideration was denied Tuesday by the same vote. If it gets final approval in the Senate, opposition in the House will probably block it; if not, the governor is likely to veto it as he did the booze bill.

Yet this is the first time either branch of the Legislature has even given any approval to a sweepstakes measure. Perhaps this means the idea of a sweepstakes is slowly catching on; but there is no better reason to support it now than there ever was. In fact, the experience of two neighboring states with similar lotteries speaks loudly against such an undertaking.

Proceeds from the lotteries of New Hampshire (which in 1964 set up the nation's first legal lottery since Louisiana's was authorized in 1894) and New York State have been disappointing from the start. In both cases the proceeds go primarily for educational purposes as they would in Massachusetts, where the net receipts would be used to pay for bonds for construction of state college buildings and other structures.

In New York, where proponents of the lottery bill said in 1967 the revenue would come to about $80 million every year, the figure has been considerably less than that that amount over a three-year period. And of the total, only $78 million has been realized for education.

For the fiscal year ending March 31, the amount is expected to be about $27 million. In the coming fiscal year, the state education budget will run to more than $2 billion.

New York State Comptroller Arthur Levitt said recently he would never encourage another state to adopt a lottery as a source of revenue, since that device has not solved any of New York's fiscal problems — and the income from it is dwindling all the time.

Massachusetts will do better to await the long-delayed final report of its Master Plan Commission before adopting a Massachusetts revenue program of doubtful value. — SPRINGFIELD REGISTER

Order In The Court?

Those who thought that some part of the terrible disaster to the dignity of justice which occurred during the trial of the Chicago Seven had to be credited to the inadequate character of the judge presiding there were tremendously heartened and encouraged by the course chosen by New York Supreme Court Justice John Murtagh in his effort to deal with pretrial hearings involving 13 Black Panthers.

The defendants before Justice Murtagh had begun the familiar formula of disrupting a trial, with continual outbursts, and a steady stream of filthy language devoted to the judge himself.

Justice Murtagh, in response, permitted himself no visible, emotional loss of temper such as had been seen from the bench in Chicago. He seemed to keep a lofty calm. But he did take action. His action was to suspend the court procedures and demand the defendants to fall until such time as they would be willing to pledge him, in writing, that they would behave themselves in the courtroom.

That was why back on Feb. 25, since then, while Justice Murtagh has been waiting for the Black Panthers to sign such a statement, there has been considerable legal controversy over whether Justice Murtagh was himself behaving legally, in that he seemed to be denying the defendants speedy justice. But one thing was sure, aside from all the fine legal points involved: a good many people were hoping he could stand firm.

Developments the other day indicated that he had, for one reason or another, felt forced to yield in some degree. What happened was that counsel for the 13 Black Panthers appeared before Justice Murtagh and said that their clients were "ready to stand trial." This was not the written pledge. Justice Murtagh had originally demanded. But Justice Murtagh, speaking from the bench, chose to interpret it as the equivalent of the pledge he had asked, and informed the defense attorneys that he regarded it as an inescapable promise on the part of the defendants to refrain from disorderly conduct in court. Therefore, he said, the trial would resume on April 7. When one of the defense attorneys undertook to argue that the Black Panthers had not made any pledge, Justice Murtagh left the court, as if he didn't hear.

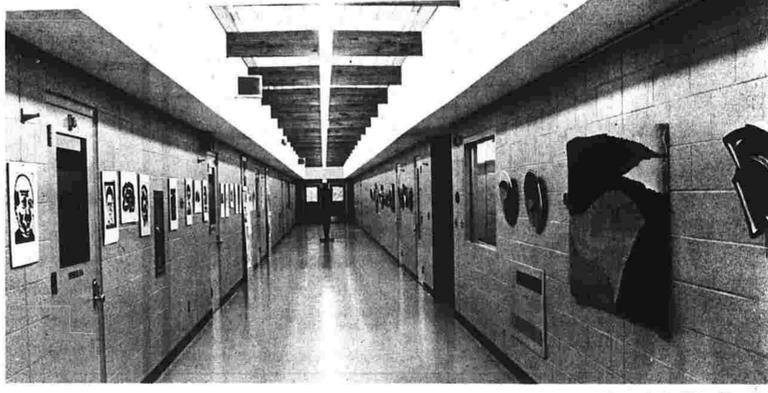

This made it appear as if he were compromising his own original demand, and making something of a concession in order to get the trial going again.

He may have been making his own half concession, just as the Panthers may have made their half concession by having their attorneys appear with their declaration they were ready to stand trial.

And out of this possible exchange of half concessions, there may, on April 7, come a resumption of the trial which is orderly, and which shows that Justice Murtagh has done better with his situation than his counterpart in Chicago.

It is not likely to prove that easy or that clear a triumph. We are engaged in a struggle between traditional law and order decorum in our courts and the feeling of a few extremist groups that justice itself is being perverted and slain whenever they themselves are brought into court. Our justice is to them nothing more than a plot, just as their functioning seems to us nothing more than continual extremist plot.

But at least Justice Murtagh, by attempting to guard the dignity of the court without burning punitive or vindictive, or becoming a brawler himself, has been giving the system something of the kind of defense it deserves.

WASHINGTON — Well-heeled Jewish Democrats in Los Angeles who four years ago helped to defeat Republican Ronald Reagan for governor have now secretly pledged to give him financial backing — a sign of their intense displeasure with his probable Democratic opponent, State Rep. Jesse Urush.

The surprising pledges came at an unpublished luncheon two weeks ago at the Bistrò Restaurant in Beverly Hills. Guest of honor was Gov. Reagan. The host was Tal Schreiber, the entertainment mogul who is Reagan's link to the Los Angeles Jewish community. Most of the guests were Jewish businessmen, Republicans and Democrats.

The results of the luncheon: An eye-popping $250,000 in pledges for Reagan's re-election campaign.

What's more, a good part of it came from Democrats who had been lashed for vast sums of money over the past decade by Eugene Wymann, former Democratic National Committee man from California and chief

A Thought for Today

Sponsored by the Manchester Council of Churches

Jeremiah received the word of the Lord "For I will satisfy the weary soul, and every languishing soul I will replenish." Thruvald's status in the Church of Notre Dame in Copenhagen typifies the comfort of God as revealed in Jesus of Nazareth. It is the status of the "outstretched arms" which commonly is known as "Come Unto Me." It is best seen, I am told, when a person is upon his knees, for only by that posture may one see wondrous beauty upon the face of Jesus.

And he said upon one occasion, "Come to me, all ye labouring and burdened, and I will refresh you. Take my yoke upon you and learn from me, for I am gentle and humble in heart, and you will find your souls refreshed; my yoke is kindly and my burden is light." (Matt. 11:28-30)

(Continued From Page Six) of Los Angeles, the conservative Democratic contesting Urush for the nomination, was eyeing Jewish Democratic money when he recently said he would have backed Mayor Joseph Alito of San Francisco (the "Wymann clique's favorite" money man) had he not. However, a good many of Alito's prospective Southern California money men love Urush more than they love Nixon.

As late as last week, two Republican senators still uncommitted on the touch-and-go confirmation of Judge G. Harrold Carswell had not yet felt the slightest political heat from the White House asking their support.

That odd fact points up the damage to President Nixon's struggle for Carswell that resulted from over-zealous White House lobbying for Judge Carswell's confirmation by Sen. James Buckley, Mr. Nixon's first casualty in the battle to fill the Supreme Court.

Pressure on wavering Republicans from political power-crank back home infuriated such eminent conservatives as Sen. Jordan of Idaho, who denounced the White House tactic and voted against Carswell. Taking a leaf from that notebook, the able new chief White House lobbyist, William French Buckley, ordered his staff to play it cool in lobbying for the embattled Carswell.

Also hurting the confirmation battle is the fact that Sen. Roman Hruska of Nebraska, who keeps tight control of the lobby-

Low Hike in Town Budget Laid to Decrease in Needs

The minimal increase of $68,000 in the proposed general government budget is due to a decrease in the current budget, according to Director of Administration Richard Borden.

Borden, expressing pleasure that the increase dropped to the $68,000 figure this year as compared to the some $200,000 increase in the current budget, said the debt service and principal accounts are down and less new equipment will be purchased in the coming year.

Another factor accounting for the small increase is that the $25,000 a year which has been paid for the water line to the Foster Rd. industrial area will be paid at the end of this fiscal year with the exception of about $2,200.

A new five truck was purchased last year at a cost of $50,000. No such equipment is being budgeted in either of the proposed budgets of the two fire departments. However, such major items of equipment will be considered in the capital improvement budgets.

In the current year the police department had to have eight new cruisers. Purchase of cruisers has now been scheduled on a rotating basis so only four will have to be paid for out of the proposed budget.

Amsterdam Turns Church Into Heaven for Hippies

By GODFREY ANDERSON Associated Press Writer AMSTERDAM, Holland (AP) — They've turned a former Protestant church into a hippie heaven with the city fathers' blessing.

The place reeks with marijuana but hard narcotics are out. The hippies, led by a man called Paradiso, come under the city's "creative playground" for which it allows $138,000 a year.

The deconsecrated church, which once belonged to a sect called the Free Community, is painted in gaudy shades of red, blue, and black. It stands by a canal in hundreds of overgrown trees and hundreds of yards from Leidseplein, the hub of Amsterdam night life.

The city looks with indulgence on bars and clubs catering to homosexuals, lesbians, transvestites and so on. Ivo Samskalden, who as burgomaster is also the chief of police, feels the best way of keeping some control on things is to have the hippies off the streets.

The high walled entry to Paradiso and Fantasio, who are for the most part outcasts, are not as strict as they are. They have a sign that says "No drugs" but they are not strict about it.

Hippies by the hundreds pass through the narrow passageway past the ticket office in the entry to a sleep pen. Heavy bouncers lounge on the mall at night.

Overhead signs in four languages warn: "Dancing in drug is not allowed. Dancing in drug will be thrown out."

There's a milling crowd in the hall. The gear is wild and crazy. A juan session is in progress behind the soundproof door in the main hall, where once they sang Chavichite hymns on Sunday. It is good to hear them. Then the saxophones are followed by a West Indian steel band.

The amplifiers are turned high. The players on the ambo-filled stage are in a frenzy. You feel that something must break soon, if only an drum. It doesn't.

The audience is strangely apathetic. Some stand, some propped each other, some sit on tables. A bar in one corner is selling beer and sandwiches. No pot or hash, but some bring their own.

In the darker corners a few couples embrace. One boy sits alone, long hair drooping over his folded arms. A tall black-battered body in a floor-length cape stands like a wax dummy by a pillar. Impossible to tell if it's male or female under that witchlike hat. Someone passing by sticks a stub of weed into its mouth. It puffs out smoke, so it must be alive.

There's a hippie beat and chain shop half way up the stairs. Reasonable prices but strictly cash.

Duffey Claims Backing Needed For a Primary

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — That the process of nominating delegates to the Democratic state convention is completed, is not allowed. Duffey says he has the 102 needed to force a primary for the U.S. Senate nomination.

Duffey and two other candidates, Sen. Thomas J. Dodd and State Senate Majority Leader Edward L. Marcus of New Haven, had previously claimed they would have 20 per cent.

Duffey, however, said Tuesday night that his delegates are "publicly pledged."

Other two contenders for the Senate nomination are Alphonse J. Donahue of Stamford and Congressman John B. Monaghan of Waterbury.

The deadline for picking state convention delegates was Tuesday night. There are 860 delegates to the convention, which opens June 26, and it takes 20 per cent to qualify for a primary. Any candidate who gets 20 per cent or more is guaranteed the person who gets a majority.

There has never been a state-wide primary in Connecticut's history, but Dodd, Duffey, Donahue and Marcus have all said they would force a primary if necessary to win the nomination.

Monaghan says he will not challenge the convention's choice.

His 'Typo' Preserved In Red Tape

By CHUCK NOLAND Associated Press Writer

DES MOINES (AP) — "There it is," I told the lady at the Polk County Courthouse as she looked through her book to see how much it would cost to transfer my car's registration from New Mexico to Iowa. "A model 800 deluxe, two-door sedan. That's it."

"Wait a minute," she said after a few seconds. "There's something wrong here."

Somewhat, you just knew it was going to be one of those experiences.

"According to the serial number on your New Mexico registration certificate you're driving a two-door station wagon," she said.

"I've been driving that car for over two years, and while there are a lot of things I don't know about it, I'm pretty sure it's a two-door sedan. I told her so. I don't think she believed me."

She called her supervisor over, explained the problem to him. The number listed on the registration certificate indicated the car was indeed a two-door sedan. But the first five numbers of the car's serial number—which are supposed to be the same as the registration number—indicated it was a two-door station wagon.

"Oh, that's the problem," said the supervisor.

"Oh, I see," said a functionary who had stopped to watch the show.

"It's a two-door sedan," I mumbled, beginning to doubt my convictions.

I invited anyone who was interested to step outside and examine my two-door sedan. That was my second mistake.

"Even if it is a sedan, we can't correct the registration," the supervisor said. "The state boys would have to do that."

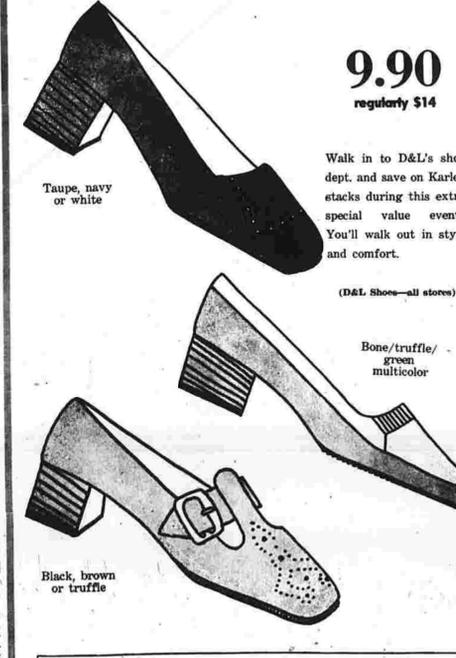

"Trying to calculate the value of my time, I asked how much more it would cost to register a station wagon. I should have known I couldn't get away with it. So, some time later, I found myself at the vehicle registration office of the Iowa Department of Public Safety, being ushered into a cubicle.

him. It would be all right to register my two-door sedan temporarily until I can write New Mexico again Friday. I hope they spell my name right. It might take an act of legislature to correct that.

and the offices were closed, I had to wait and do it all over again Friday.

Tufts Agrees On Center To Treat Addicts

MEDFORD, Mass. (AP) — Tufts University officials have agreed to work with students to set up a treatment center for drug-addicted students and others.

The university promised to join in a cooperative effort but made no specific commitments.

Dean of Students Alvin B. Schmidt and Provost Albert D. Ullman voiced the university's position in a talk with student representatives at a rally of some 500 students Tuesday.

The season came several hours after some 100 students gave up a sit-in at the administration building, a protest against weekend campus raids in which 12 students and four other persons were arrested on drug charges.

Before ending their occupation, the students sealed down their demands and dropped one that asked Tufts to pay the legal costs of those arrested and also any fines assessed.

Schmidt told the students at their afternoon rally that it was up to them to decide whether these would be future police raids. If the students policed themselves, there would be no need for intervention, he said.

The dean reminded the students that the decision to call police came only after the administration learned of a growing use of drugs on campus, occasioned by an increase in thefts of students' property.

The university made no commitment on another student demand that files on each student be opened to them, and that such files should not be disclosed to outsiders without the student's permission.

Hartford Group To Insure Doctors for Malpractice

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — The Hartford Insurance Group, which calls the idea an "industry 'first,'" will provide for doctors in the contract, announced Tuesday.

The contract, announced Tuesday, provides for doctors in the Los Angeles County in California, an area that has the highest incidence of medical malpractice suits in the country.

The basic premium varies by doctor and specialty. Higher rates are charged for doctors in high-risk specialties and those who have had malpractice suits brought against them.

The Los Angeles County Medical Association had proposed a rather bold innovation for the insurance industry, particularly in the light of the increasing incidence of malpractice suits the group insurance, saying the alternative was for the medical association to go into the insurance business.

The insurance company says it will set up a full-time claim office at the association headquarters. The staff will develop legal defenses for doctors and help others avoid such suits.

Tolland Selectmen Oppose Coventry Airport

The Board of Selectmen last night agreed to oppose the construction of the proposed Bolton-Coventry airport which abuts the Tolland town line.

Each year the town adds several hundred new residents to its total population, and there are many who are in need of housing. The town has a long history of providing housing for its residents.

The committee will be appointed at a special meeting of the Middlefield School Board on Thursday night, prior to the presentation of the selectmen's budget to the Board of Finance.

Both Thifault and Dumont will attend programs sponsored by the Connecticut Bank and Trust Co. on municipal finance and one on lighting sponsored by the Connecticut Light and Power Co. northern division.

Tolland Historical Society Granted Portion of Old State Jail

The Board of Selectmen and the Tolland Historical Society last night signed a lease granting the historical society use of a portion of the former state jail for a 16-year period.

The lease prepared by Town Counsel Robert King details the requirements of the agreement, which permits the society to use the facilities for $1 per year, effective today.

Signing the lease on behalf of the Tolland Historical Society was its president, Clyde Jondro.

Included in the requirements, which are in line with the meeting granting approval to the use, is a hold harmless agreement protecting the town from any action which might be taken as a result of society's use of the facilities.

Leased to the society will be the cell block section on the first floor, the former Kopski and Kopski room next to the cell blocks and the kitchen as well as the former women's detention quarters on the second floor.

The society agreed not to alter the premises and will not conduct any business in its section that could be deemed extremely hazardous without consent of the town.

The historical society further agreed to maintain its section in good repair and to assume responsibility for damages to the leased portions which arise from the neglect or carelessness of the society or any of the occupants.

It was further agreed that the society would comply to all regulations, both state and local, covering health, sanitation, fire, highways and sidewalks.

They also agreed to provide their own heat and electricity for their section of the jail, or to reimburse the town in full for its use.

All expenses for alterations, painting and decorating of the premises will be borne by the historical society, and it will need town approval before making any structural alterations to the building.

Finally it must leave the premises in as good a state as it received them.

The Board of Selectmen signed the lease. The Fashion Show will present their annual spring fashion show, "Garment Garden," on April 16 at 7 p.m. in the church Parish Center.

Quilt members will model fashions from D&L in Manchester. An additional attraction will be the modeling of children's fashions also from D&L.

Mrs. Barbara Dumont will serve as general chairman of the event, assisted by Tichet chairman Miss Ursula Wobolise; Mrs. Maureen McWay, decorations; Mrs. Betty Walter, makeup; Mrs. Sue Lemak, models; Mrs. Jackie Warr, door prizes, and Mrs. Nancy Osgood, program.

Also, Mrs. Joan Laune, welcoming; Mrs. Sandra Shabek, way, publicity, and Mrs. Diane Kopski and Mrs. Michaela Belmont, refreshments.

Tickets for the fashion show will be available after the convention on the second floor.

The former state jail can be used as a town administration building with very few alterations, according to a report filed by Fire Marshal Fran Wilhelm.

Wilhelm submitted his report to Fire Selectmen Charles Theault following a two-hour inspection of the facilities last week in the company of the first selectman.

If the building is to be used solely for town offices all that is needed is the installation of several fire extinguishers at key locations.

If large numbers of people are to use the building minor structural alterations will be needed, according to Wilhelm.

This includes the installation of fire walls in the boiler room; the installation of a smoke-tight ceiling in the boiler room; repair of the holes in the plaster and the installation of a 30-minute fire rated door on the boiler room. The door should have a self-closing device installed on it.

A fire extinguisher should be located near the boiler room door.

Wilhelm recommends the availability of fire exits from the rear of the building on the first floor, adding, "this exit door should have 'panic hardware' installed on it."

All doors to the building should open to the outside and fire extinguishers should be located on both the first and second floors.

A fire alarm should be connected to the fire department headquarters.

The use of the barn is no problem for storage equipment, since it has three doors.

Wilhelm further recommended the town take out insurance coverage on equipment housed in the garage owned by the state.

The report was read at last night's meeting of the Board of Selectmen by Tolland town clerk Robert Dumont.

Appointment of a 10-member advisory committee to prepare a comprehensive plan for use of the building by the town will be made Thursday night on the recommendation of the Board of Selectmen.

Appointment of the committee was tabled last night by Selectman Robert Dumont.

The Tolland High School Science Department is in cooperation with the University of Connecticut in instituting a college credit program for superior high school students.

Victor Ovada, chairman of the high school science department, and chemistry teacher Flad Pedersen were assisted in their efforts by Tolland High principal Richard Olson and Richard Byerost and Barbara Palmer of the Guidance Department.

Students with superior academic records will be recommended for the program by the high school chemistry teacher by the University of Connecticut, which will then take the high school chemistry course of the planned advanced course of the chemistry course.

Upon completion of these courses the student will receive credit for both the high school and college credit.

The university credits earned may be applied towards a degree at UConn. If the student attends another college, the credits may be transferred.

Expectations call for the expansion of the program in the future to include a physics course, making a total of 24 college credits available to Tolland High School students.

Ratchford Cites Drafting of Bill Re School Money

HARTFORD (AP)—A bill being drafted now for introduction in the 1971 session of the state legislature, to relieve the burden on communities that will have to borrow from private sources this year to finance school construction, House Speaker William R. Ratchford, D-Danbury, says.

Ratchford said the bill would pay communities the difference between the four per cent interest promised them by the state and the higher interest they'll have to pay on the private loan market.

The state Bond Commission decided to drop the state's promised loans and keep only the outright grant part of the state school construction program which was discovered that the program is more than $10 million short of meeting the demand for funds.

Lord Clark stands next to a 6th century Celtic cross in Iona, Western Scotland, founded by St. Columba in 563. A sacred spot before St. Columba's arrival, it was the center of Celtic Christianity for four centuries. There are reputed to have been 360 such crosses, nearly all of which were thrown into the sea during the Reformation. Lord Clark's 13 one-hour color films, "Civilisation," originally made for British television, will be shown on seven consecutive Sundays and Mondays in Kriehle Auditorium of Trinity College, with the premier on April 12 and 13.

Trinity College, on Sunday and Monday, April 12 and 13, will premiere the Connecticut showing of "Civilisation," a subscription series of 13 color films, planned, written, and narrated by Kenneth Clark (Lord Clark of Saltwood), distinguished art scholar.
