Red Missile Threat Rising, Laird Says

NEW YORK (AP) — Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird said today "we are literally at the edge of prudent risk" in postponing decisions on major new offensive nuclear weapons to give U.S.-Russian arms limitation talks maximum chance for success.

Claiming a steadily rising Russian missile threat, Laird said that "if the Soviet strategic offensive buildup continues, the risk to our nation will become too great to sustain without major offsetting actions."

In a major speech prepared for the 70th annual meeting of the Associated Press, the Pentagon chief expressed hope for success at the strategic arms limitation talks—SALT—which have just opened a hard-har-gaining phase in Vienna.

But Laird rejected arguments that the United States should, at the outset of the negotiations, unilaterally hold up impending deployment of multiple independently targetable warhead missiles (MIRVs) and expansion of the Safeguard missile (ABM) system.

"The place to resolve these issues is at the conference table with the Soviets," he said.

"Let us try to find out at the conference table the meaning of the Soviet Union's increased weapon deployments and let us conduct these important negotiations with full recognition of these continuing Soviet deployments."

Laird said the risks in deferring "hard decisions" on whether to go ahead with advances missiles and bombers are acceptable only if the United States proceeds with the long-planned MIRV deployment and what he called a "minimal addition" to the Safeguard system, as proposed that year by the Nixon administration.

New Top Court Nominee May Stir Senate Tempest

ROCHESTER, Minn. (AP) — Judge Harry A. Blackmun, a third-round choice for the Supreme Court's empty seat, acknowledges his personal views against the death penalty may toss the Senate into a new tempest.

"This will be a matter of grave concern to, I suppose, some senators," the soft-spoken judge said.

Blackmun, in a private weekend interview with The Associated Press, said he would not be surprised if someday, perhaps even this year, the court might overturn the death penalty as unconstitutional.

But the judge, who has upheld death sentences legally even while disagreeing with them personally in lower court decisions, did not indicate which way he might sway when the crucial issue comes before the nation's highest court.

Blackmun is believed to loom as the tie-breaking vote on a Supreme Court thought to be knotted 4-4 on the death question.

At least 502 prisoners are in death cells in the nation's prisons, awaiting the outcome of the legal battle. The fight has blocked all executions in the United States for nearly three years.

Come Summer

Graduating College Seniors To Find Tight Job Market

NEW YORK (AP) — Graduating college seniors, accustomed to being wooed by business and industry, will find it harder getting jobs this summer than in past years.

A tight job market resulting from a general economic slowdown and cutbacks in government defense expenditures will have the class of 1970 scrambling after jobs rather than being chased by companies. But there will be enough positions to go around.

Says Dr. Bruce Laughlin, director of career planning at Kansas State University: "Overall the number of job offers is probably down a third."

Students can take some consolation, however, from the fact that salaries will be record high for those winning the top positions. On the other hand, some students in certain fields may have to consider changing careers.

An Associated Press survey shows these trends shaping up

Astronauts, Specialists Confer To Find Out Why Apollo Failed

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP)—Apollo 13's astronauts today began telling specialists what happened on their near-tragic space flight, a journey they feared they might not survive.

After a joyous homecoming Sunday night, James A. Lovell Jr., Fred W. Haise Jr., and John L. Swigert Jr. met early today with Space Center officials.

The first debriefing session started at 8 a.m. CST and concentrated on events leading up to the April 13 oxygen tank explosion that placed the astronauts' lives in jeopardy.

What the astronauts report may help pinpoint the cause of the accident which aborted man's third moon-landing attempt. A 100-man team of experts here continued to search for clues in radio data and photographs returned by the space-men.

On Tuesday, the astronauts will meet with representatives of a high level review board assigned to probe the mishap.

Lovell, Haise and Swigert returned to their homes near the Space Center Sunday night after a flight from Honolulu. They were greeted by more than 5,000 persons who gathered at nearby Ellington Air Force Base.

Lovell told the crowd:

"Needless to say, Jack and Fred and I are very proud and glad to be back here in Texas tonight because there were many times when we really didn't think we'd make it back here."

"And I can say with all sincerity," the Apollo commander added, "we would not be here if it was not for the people on the ground, in Mission Control Center, helping us all the way."

(See Page Three)

Swigert, a last-minute replacement for measles-exposed Thomas K. Mattingly II, echoed Lovell's words, "Of all the welcome words we've had, this one means the most, because it was these people out here who made it possible for us to be here."

Haise said, "We had the prayers and good wishes from people all over the world and we appreciated that very much."

Mattingly, without measles, was in the welcoming group.

It was the fourth tumultuous welcome since the spacemen returned safely to earth Friday with a bull's-eye splashdown in the Pacific.

The others were aboard the recovery carrier Iwo Jima, on their first landing in Samoa, and in Honolulu where President Nixon Saturday gave them the nation's highest civilian award, the Medal of Freedom.

The President praised their poise and skill in bringing their spaceship in after it was damaged last Monday night 202,000 miles from home.

Nixon took the wives of Lovell and Haise and the parents of bachelor Swigert to Honolulu to greet the astronauts.

Churches around the world Sunday offered prayers of thanksgiving for the safe return of the spacemen.

Edgar Cortright, director of research at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Langley Research Center in Hampton, Va., was named Friday to head the Apollo 13 review board that will investigate the accident.

Cortright said he planned to meet in Washington with NASA Administrator Thomas O. Paine and assistant administrator George Low "to begin selecting the board members and determining what other support personnel will be necessary to conduct this investigation."

He said names of the board members would be announced as soon as possible later this week.

Instead, it was almost disastrous.

Scientists, like everyone else, thought first of the astronauts all during the week, as they fought their way back to earth.

Friday, with the men safely down, their deep disappointment — "the empty feeling," said one — began to sink in.

UConn Drug Abuse Prompts

Top-Level Talks for Solution

STORRS, Conn. (AP) — Drug abuse at the University of Connecticut — "No. 1 problem today" — is prompting high-level talks in search of the best solution.

Dr. Homer D. Babbidge Jr., the president of UConn, spent part of last weekend discussing the idea of an informal center for counseling and treating drug users who are searching for help.

The university also is considering the creation of an institute where public school teachers would learn the seriousness of the drug problem.

"I think it's the most serious problem we have on our campuses in terms of student conduct and well-being," said Babbidge.

The 44-year-old president declined to estimate how many persons at the 13,180-student campus used drugs for non-medical reasons, but he doubted that drug abuse is more prevalent in our college community than in communities in general."

Babbidge suspects that "the harshness of penalties for possession is making it difficult" to get information about drug use on campus.

Several faculty members have arranged a "bull session" with him to discuss the possibility of creating a "halfway house or trapping center." It might be run, on an unofficial, informal basis, on professional basis to offer help to students who are frightened away by a university-run center.

Babbidge said a number of persons have indicated their concern with the drug situation and their willingness, "just as human beings, to help young people" caught in the drug syndrome. As an example, he cited a faculty member who came to him after the teacher's daughter was found to be a drug addict.

University records show that two dozen students withdrew from school for drug-related reasons, but not necessarily heroin or other "hard" drugs.

Downey, who says he has not smoked marijuana or used any of the other drugs popular on campus, estimates that "between 50 and 75 per cent have tried marijuana, at least once."

A female student with Downey, who declined to give her name, thinks "nearly everybody has tried it."

Nixon May Unveil Surprise Tonight

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (AP) — President Nixon will outline his approach to further U.S. troop withdrawals from South Vietnam in a television-radio address tonight—and perhaps unveil a surprise or two.

Nixon will speak at 9 p.m. EST.

Sources at the Western White House cautioned today against advance speculation that Nixon would announce a successor to Henry Cabot Lodge as chief American peace negotiator in Paris. Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler indicated earlier in the month that such an announcement might be imminent.

At the same time, these sources did not rule out the apparent likelihood that Nixon, in what is billed as a 10- to 15-minute "update report" to the nation, would go beyond mere discussion of troop levels and break new ground in presidential discussion of the Southeast Asian situation.

Since Nixon last took to the airwaves to discuss the Vietnam war, last Dec. 15, the conflict has broadened, particularly in Cambodia, which seeks U.S. arms following a coup that overthrew the neutralist government of Prince Norodom Sihanouk.

Through Ziegler, the United States has deplored reported Cambodian massacres of Vietnamese living in that tiny country. And the State Department has said the arms request is under study.

The Nixon administration also has taken an interest in a statement last week by Jacob A. Malik, Soviet ambassador to the United Nations, that indicated possible interest from that quarter for the 5,000 who had come to cheer Lovell, Fred Haise and Jack Swigert home.

Home Again. Back to the airwaves to discuss the Vietnam war, last Dec. 15, the conflict has broadened, particularly in Cambodia, which seeks U.S. arms following a coup that overthrew the neutralist government of Prince Norodom Sihanouk.

The budget for the year beginning July 1 does not disclose estimated war costs on grounds that secrecy is necessary to maintain the security of Nixon's Vietnamization plan.

With war spending sharply decreased, Proxmire said in a letter to the President, "It appears that the Pentagon has usurped at least $10 billion of the so-called peace dividend in outlays for new weapons systems."

Proxmire said unofficial estimates indicate war spending will decrease from a peak of about $30 billion to a level of about $13 billion during the next fiscal year.

Despite those indications of a sharp cut, he said, the overall defense budget is down by only $5 billion.

"There are many who believe that the military is hiding the fact that the costs of the Vietnam war have dropped by over $15 billion in order to conceal from the American people that most of these billions are being spent for new military weapons instead of needed domestic programs or in long overdue tax cuts," Proxmire said.

"The continuing failure to disclose the costs makes it difficult if not impossible for Congress to make intelligent judgments about both military and civilian spending and their relative priorities," Proxmire said.

Meanwhile, American troop strength in Vietnam dropped to 425,000 last week, the lowest level in more than three years, the U.S. Command announced today.

The announcement was made 16 hours before President Nixon's radio speech in which he was expected to announce plans to withdraw more troops.

Nixon's third round of withdrawals, completed April 15, reduced the authorized troop ceiling to 434,000 men. The total strength last week was 5,800 below that, but spokesman said actual strength is always 1 to 2 per cent below the ceiling.

Faced with a sudden mechanical failure of their sophisticated moon-bound spacecraft, he said, "they responded with the individuality of their own way."

(See Page Three)

Nixon Urged To Reveal War Costs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., today urged President Nixon to make public new budget estimates on the cost of the Vietnam war, saying Congress has been asked "to spend billions in the dark."

The budget for the year beginning July 1 does not disclose estimated war costs on grounds that secrecy is necessary to maintain the security of Nixon's Vietnamization plan.

With war spending sharply decreased, Proxmire said in a letter to the President, "It appears that the Pentagon has usurped at least $10 billion of the so-called peace dividend in outlays for new weapons systems."

"The continuing failure to disclose the costs makes it difficult if not impossible for Congress to make intelligent judgments about both military and civilian spending and their relative priorities," Proxmire said.

Arriving at nearby El Toro Marine Corps Air Station, Nixon told a welcoming crowd of about 1,000 that the long, fast-paced trip to meet astronauts James A. Lovell Jr., John L. Swigert Jr. and Fred W. Haise Jr. "was one of the most memorable experiences of our lives."

"THE WAY I HEARD IT"

by John Gruber

Prokofiev's opera, known in English as "The Dumb," will have its first performance at the Opera House April 26 through May 2, as a production of the Hartt Opera Theater. It certainly is an unknown work as far as the public is concerned, but it isn't in any guide I can find, in any two books I have in German.

A short opera was written in 1940 but was not produced in Russia until after 1960, when it got its première in Leningrad. In New Haven, this may be its first performance in the United States although the advance publicity makes no such claim.

Prokofiev actually titled the piece with the Russian equivalent of "Betrayal" in a Comedy of Errors, but it is based on a British work by Edward Bulwer-Lytton Sheridan called "The Dumb," so that is the title under which it will be produced here.

The original, written in 1776, was designated as "a comic open" by the author, and if you read it you can easily understand why it is not a comedy; it is a deadpan libretto, needing only some judicious pruning to make it instantly avable in comic vein.

There are some excellent characters in the original, and Prokofiev has been clever, but I am afraid he has made them even more whimsical in his version. Just in case you see a similarity between Rossini and Pergolesi and Don Giovanni and Leporello in the "Love of Three Oranges." I can't understand why they use the word "purer" meaning "for." I have the original published score (piano only) of the opera, and the title page in Chicago, and the title page plainly states, "L'Amour des trois oranges," not "L'Amour pur des oranges." Interestingly, it spells the composer's name as "Prokofiev," which is the spelling I learned, and it is the spelling used in the cataloging of "Prokofiev" which he was later to prefer.

You must know his music, for he frequently uses it in his concert programs and Hartt has produced his "Love for Three Oranges" in the past. It is even more difficult to understand why he has actually helped him to avoid a "marriage de convenience" with a wealthy lady friend, on the part of the Chapman, who wants the merchant for her, herself.

Her character is Louis, a man in love with Antonio, a poverty-stricken member of Spain's aristocracy, though he is a strident composer to which he has unusual skill.

Antonio's lover is Louis's brother Ferdinand and Louis's friend Clare.

This structure, pace one, is of "Oceli Suite," another Mozart opera, but in reality it only points up the similarity of popular taste in Europe to that in America.

Prokofiev's "Dumb" is really a comedy of errors, but it is star-studded from top to bottom.

The period culminated in the "Smyth Suite" for orchestra after which he seems to have settled down to a tamer mode of composition, though the musical style of the Chapman is in a year's time reformatory. The play, originally done in Dublin, did not attend.

Tonight, April 26, at 8 p.m., at the Hartt Opera House, the opera will be produced.

In any event, he did manage to get eight operas produced during his lifetime. Most of them were well received.

Incidentally, Prokofiev was born in 1891, died in 1957, and was buried in Moscow, Russia, but three were first seen in Brussels, Chicago, and Paris, respectively.

Nowadays you always see that opera listed as "Love of Three Oranges," instead of

"The Dumb" should really be worth attending.

Lauren Bacall, 'Applause' Take Top Tony Awards

By WILLIAM GLOVER
AP Drama Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Lauren Bacall, actress and comedienne, won the Tony Award for best supporting actress in "Child's Play."

Field was in her first directing assignment, while Joseph Hardy was the first to receive the award.

Cecil Beaton thought it "simply spiffy." Alfred Lunt spoke of "such enchantment." And little Melba Moore, who had been cast in the 16 competitive categories. Among them were Betty Comden and Adolph Green, authors of "Applause," and Lee Strasberg and Lee Astor, composer and lyricist of the same show; Cecil Beaton, designer of "Coconut," and Jo Mielziner, with two nominations for scenic design and lighting of "Child's Play."

The top-winning musical was "Applause," with silver medal for best direction going to Michael Bennett, who also directed "Fiddler on the Roof."

Today's hand helped two 18-year-old Robin Klar and Mrs. Tina Mackaway, both from "The Sound of Music," win their first Tony awards. Miss Klar, star of the top female lead, and two to Ron Field for direction and choreography.

Field was the best dressed woman in the theater, wearing a black dress with a white belt and a large bow at the waist.

Her character is Louise, a woman in love with Antonio, a poverty-stricken member of Spain's aristocracy, though he is a strident composer to which he has unusual skill.

Junior Women's Club Wins Three Top Awards in State

The Tolland Junior Women's Club won three first place awards in the statewide competition for their Women's Club at the annual spring conference in Bridgeport.

The awards were given out Saturday at the annual spring conference in Bridgeport.

The club received a first place award in the field of conservation for their beautification and preservation program.

Other first place awards were presented to the local clubs for their work in the areas of mental health and safety.

The mental health award was presented to the club for their work at the Mental Health State Training School and the safety award for the club-supported auto and bicycle safety inspection campaign.

An additional award was presented to the Tolland Juniors for their membership in the 75-member ceiling for three consecutive years. A citation was also given for the club's support of the state U.S. Bicentennial project.

The announcement of the awards will be formally made at tonight's 75-member ceiling for the club stated for 8 p.m. in the Religious Education Building of the United Congregational Church.

Those attending the meeting will act on adoption of revised bylaws and elect new officers for the coming year. The Tolland Star-Out America group, sponsored by the Tolland Juniors, will perform.

Club members will perform their version of the annual state competition play, "Consolation," presented in New Haven, during the meeting.

WASHINGTON — When Tricia Nixon's steadiest beau, Yves Leterrier, a Canadian lawyer, was to be her Thursday night date, the TVAA hoped recently Washington was filled with rumors that an engagement announcement was imminent.

The TVAA hopes to have all its members take the special course in the coming year.

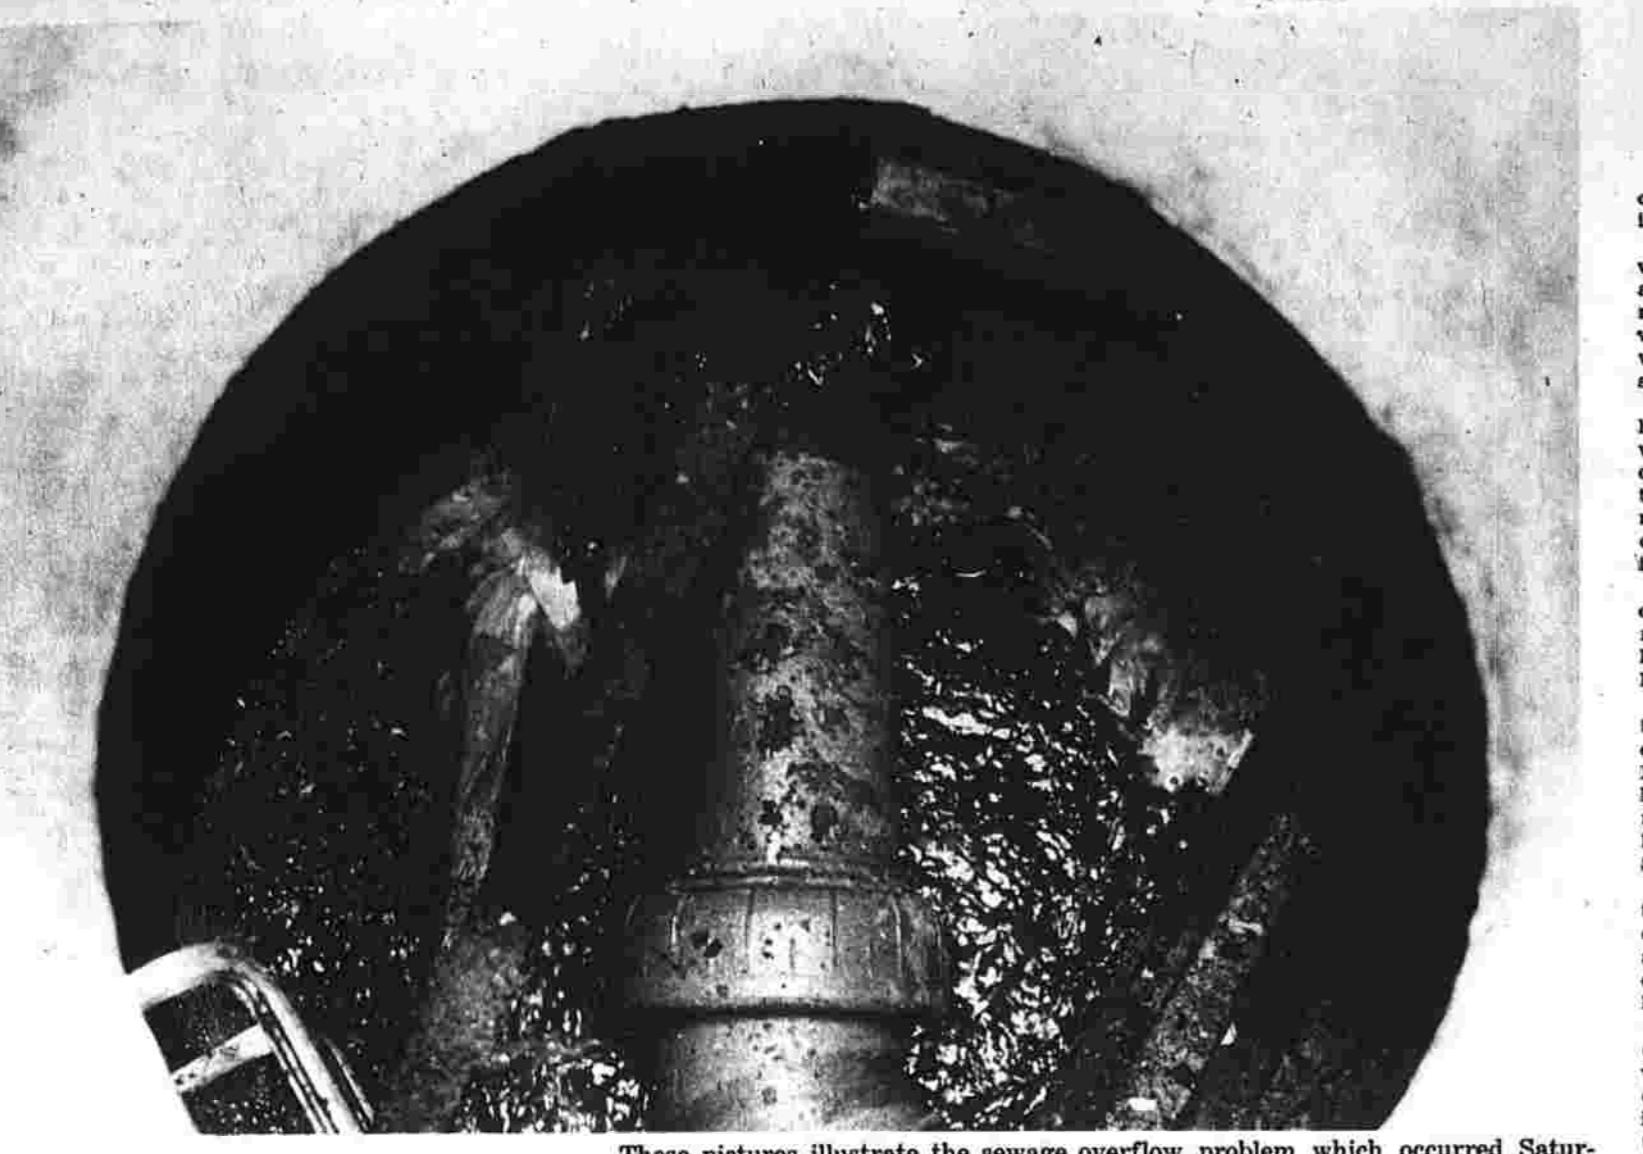

Church Auction

The Tolland's entry in the yearly church auction will be held on May 23 at the church to raise funds to be used to supplement the budget and reduce the amount spent on salaries.

The TVAA hopes for a general chairman of the annual event.

Stopgap Seal Breaks In Overtaxed Sewer

A temporary connection in a sewer line broke Saturday noon, but since the sewer is overtaxed anyway much of the sewage was bypassed and went through Bigelow Brook and through it into the pond.

The emergency was covered by Theodore Cummings, chairman of the Democratic Town Committee. He and two Democratic Town Directors were at the scene. The Directors, Wm. P. Fitzgerald and Anthony Pistor, expressed dismay that they were unable to get in touch with Town Manager Robert F. Fuss, Public Works Director William O'Neill and Sewer Department superintendent.

The directors contacted Wm. P. Fuss, vice president of Granite Engineering Co. who found the cause of the overflow and got in touch with the Della's firm to have a crew inspect the new sewer line, for on-site inspection and supervision of the work.

Fuss responded that he had phoned O'Neill to inform him of the problem and the plan to solve it.

The trouble Saturday centered in a manhole which has just been built in the center of Middle Tpke. The old sewer line runs right through the new manhole with no direct connection into it. Eventually, the old and new will be connected in that manhole and at several other points, Fuss explained.

A temporary seal between the old line and short link of new pipe broke. The break allowed the sewage to back up into the manhole and flow in the newly constructed incomplete sewer. When it flowed up through another manhole and into the pond.

Fuss said the break was apparently caused by the weight of the new line which happens frequently. The sewage gets as far as the pump station at the Parkade. When the pump is unable to move the load, the sewage flows back upstream in the pipe. That backflow, Fuss said, is probably what broke the connection.

Sewers inadequate

In order to make the repair, workers pumped the sewage from the manhole into a well at the pump station. The well was already full, however. Presumably most of the sewage flowed out of the well and into the brook.

With the repair made, the existing sewer, which, according to town engineering officials, is inadequate to the needs.

The new sewer (Center Relief Sewer) being built in that area, plus the Northeast Interceptor Sewer and a proposed addition sewage treatment plant, are expected to cure the problem.

The sewage treatment plant is not slated for completion until 1973 or 1974.

According to Fuss, there is no feasible way to hook up the new sewer temporarily to any existing sewer to provide a partial solution before the new

These pictures illustrate the sewage overflow problem which occurred Saturday at Hilliard Pond bordering W. Middle Tpke. The top photo is of the inside of a new manhole which is supposed to be dry. The pipe going through it is an existing line. A temporary seal in that line broke and dumped the flow of sewage into the manhole. It flowed through the new sewer line to and up through the manhole in the bottom photo. (Herald photos by Offara).

The treatment plant goes into operation.

Meanwhile, the overtaxed line and the overflow from it contaminated the citizens and, in some cases, valuable officials.

Saturday's emergency prompted Cummings to criticize town officials because he feels they are not available when emergencies arise.

Cummings' statement following is a statement by Cummings on that subject:

"Saturday afternoon, an incident happened involving the new cross-town sewer job that makes me wonder about the ability of the town to properly manage this kind of emergency."

I spotted raw sewage erupting from manholes of the new sewer line and flowing like a river down the hill. I asked what was to be done. Hilliard Pond across from the Parkade on W. Middle Tpke. It had also backed up into Bigelow Brook and through it into the pond."

The emergency was covered by Theodore Cummings, chairman of the Democratic Town Committee. He and two Democratic Town Directors were at the scene. The Directors, Wm. P. His Responsibility

Fitzgerald and Pietrantonio praised Fuss for his response, but Fuss insisted that the responsibility for solving the problem lies in his other terms of the contract.

Fuss said Saturday at the scene that he had phoned O'Neill to inform him of the problem and the plan to solve it.

communist with regard to bombing North Vietnam.

"In late 1968 one day there were four B-57 bombers flying against Laos so that must have meant at that time the planes which had been hitting Vietnam were shifted to hitting Laos," he said.

About 180 of the approximately 4,000 Americans killed in Laos were alermen based in Thailand or in the United States, he testified.

The remainder were described as U.S. civilians and service men based in Laos.

No clear estimate was made of the cost of the U.S. involvement in Laos. But the Defense Department did submit the following statement:

"The total cost of all U.S. activities in Laos including air operations, training, medical services and personnel is about $600 million. Of this approximately $120 million is directed directly to our efforts in South Vietnam."

Saying the Nixon administration has emphasized the deescalation of the Vietnam conflict at the same time it has heavily escalation in Laos, he added:

"We are not a lawless agency," Badidge added, and the illegality of drug use but the frightening potential of its use.

All 18 persons familiar with the automobile insurance plan, he said, are caught at a rate comparable to other communities and some might argue that we don't enforce the law as it should be."

"We are not a lawless agency," Badidge added, and the illegality of drug use but the frightening potential of its use.

He also gave a brief summary of the marijuana situation that martial law is the most prevalent one at the Storrs campus. Hashish, hash, and tobacco, he said, are still popular with students, marijuanna also appears, along with Speed (methadine), LSD and an array of potentially addictive substances such as amphetamines and barbiturates.

Tests at UConn also have shown that drug users are continuing to do even contain the ingredient promised by the seller.

"What concerns us the most is that that user doesn't know what he is getting," says Prof. Kari A. Nieroth, assistant dean of the Pharmacy School.

North of the popularity of hashish, hash, and tobacco, he said, is the use of LSD.

As guests of the Eastfield Mall Merchants Association, the students were given a tour of the 78-unit merchandising complex.

After the students divided into small groups to study in depth the functions and operations of the major units, individual merchants, including the food court, were interviewed.

Nieroth doubts if much heroin is used by students because, if they were regular users of the powerful narcotic, "They would have to be on drugs."

One senior coed attributes more drug use to students among the more than 5,000 who are on campus, he added.

"I expect we will place all our graduates, but not in jobs they were interested in originally," he said.

Government approval of the use of mescaline by a Southeastern religious cult, Nieroth said, popularized the drug through the Leary introduced LSD through his experiments. Survey results indicated LSD could be used to reduce children and drug users turned to Speed, only to run into an even stronger campaign warning that LSD was dangerous.
