Surprised By The East

That intellectual corner of the Western mind which occasionally reminds itself that philosophical thought and gunpowder both first exploded in China never really succeeds in educating Western nstinct and expectation.

We are surprised, therefore, at everything China manages to do in the way of

been able to accomplish in recent years. the Russians were imitating us, or spying out our secrets. We had to admit. sooner or later, that the Russians had the capacity to be first, on their own, as

Our capacity to be continually surprisentifically or technologically impressive from either Russia or China is founded on something more than our tendency to consider both nations historically backward and culturally inferior, in comparison to ourselves.

We have always, to some extent, sold ourselves on the theory that the creed of Communism, being false and evil, will somehow inevitably cast a barren curse

ing to apply such theories to Russian and Chinese capabilities, and we have Russian space exploits and now a Chinese satellite in orbit to prove it.

ledge the error of our own instinctive expectations with regard to Russian and Chinese technological capacity, we might try projecting a little of our second thought wisdom into our expectation of what these two Communist countries may try to do with the technological achievements that are theirs.

is grooved. They are the world's wicked ones, the power-mad barbarians, the ceaseless aggressors, the perpetual plotters. If they ever see a chance to do so, they will let us have it, right where it will destroy us. So we must expect and prepare for the worst.

That may not be a bad rule for any: body, in any situation. Still, just as in politics, and prospective use of military power we may be more like each other than we, for our part, would like to

of the cold war accuses the other of having been the first to start it, there has been much more similarity than contrast in the conduct of the great powers of East and West in the past quarter century. Both sides have, in the name of their own security, plotted and pressured and maneuvered for the power politics vantage point over the other, and they have sought this not only in their adventurous use of their own military force on the territory of other nations, but in their recurrent disarmsment negotiations with one another. There is, of course, a wild chance that Communist China will seek especially rash advantages from its own progress in military and space technology. But the more likely thing to expect is that China will seek from its technology essentially the same things we seek from

To be realistic, we should fear what we ourselves may do with the wesponry of the nuclear-space age as much as we

The Secret Nobody Ever Buys There is only one important secret in life, and it can be disclosed again and again without ever losing its secrecy. The secret is this: The only way anybody ever learns anything is through experience. Nobody can ever be told what somebody else has already learned.

No matter how often you say this, noody ever buys it.

It does no good to-try to help people by warning them against the perils and the unpleasantness and the troubles they are heading toward. They have to have it happen to them before they believe it. Then, too late, after the event, they bewhat they have learned. Only no one ever believes them, either.

Such thoughts may occur to un Americans as we read that Russia is on the verge of a great "motoring explosion" in which, at last, automobiles are going to be mass produced for the eventual use and pleasure of all the Russian To the good people of Russia we say something like this: Good people of Rus sia, think twice about the kind of life you are leading and the kind of life you are threatening to bring upon yourselves. Remember that when almost nobody has an automobile nobody really needs one, but that when everybody can have one everybody will have to have first one, and then two. Remember how slow and pleasant life has been in the past, and take our word for it that it gets very fast and hurried once you let the automobile set the pace and the mood. Good people of Russia, take one last look at life without debt, without englavement to the weekend fast trip to nowhere and back. Take one last walk for yourselves to see how good it makes your legs and ungs feel and to see how much you notice as you stroll along. Take an evening and see how much fun vodka can be when nobody has to drive home."

That's what we would say, to the good people of Russia, imploring them to believe us. But being human beings, cast in the universal human mold, they will not believe us. They will have to find ed at the appearance of anything sci- out for themselves, 40,000,000 automobiles from now. Then, in the way of all human flesh, they will look at us reproachfully and ask us why we didn't

> Military Hallucination - Again The assurances that the American-backed South Vietnamese drive into Cambodia is a limited, one-strike operation, an integral part of American operaprotect American and "free world" forces there, have a familiar and wholly

This is the same kind of reassuring rhetoric Americans have heard from their leaders at every stage of this country's long, misguided plunge into the Southeast Asian morass. Time and bitter experience have exhausted credulity of the American people and Congress, Pres idential assurances can no longer be accepted in an area where actions, as Mr. ixon's aides have observed in another ontext, speak louder than words.

The President's action in sanctioning the South Vietnamese invasion of Cam bodian territory, with American advisers and air and other support, goes far beyond the Cambodian policy followed by Mr. Nixon's predecessors, even at times when the predicament of allied forces in Vietnam was far more perilous than anyone would claim it is today. This latest and largest in a series of allied intrusions onto Cambodian soil which have occurred regularly since the change of government in Pnompenh has far-reaching and ser'ous implications even if the immediate objectives are limited, as the Administration avows. If reports from Pnompenh that the attack was launched without consulta tion with the Cambodian Government are true, the strike is a clear breach of Cambodian neutrality, the Geneva Ac cords and the principles of international law which the Administration has repeatedly cited in connection with the ong-known and equally ilega Commuietnamese presence on Cambodian

The allied drive into the Parrot's Beak will almost certainly provoke some reection from Hanoi, and perhaps from Peking, with consequences throughout Southeast Asia that cannot be predicted out which could be fateful. At the very least, new threats to Pnompenh and fresh appeals for further American assistance can be expected.

Whatever he may plead to the con trary, President Nixon has rejected his own Nixon Doctrine in Southeast Asia escalating a war from which he had promiesd to disengage. This is not the 'new'' Nixon who campaigned on a platform pledged to peace. It is more like the old Nixon who as Vice Presiden in 1954 said the United States would have to send troops into Indochina if there were no other way to prevent its fall to the Communists, then on the verge of defeating the French.

Fortunately, now as then, Mr. Nixon's tough approach has produced strong opposition in both houses of Congress, ever among some former staunch supporters of his Vietnamization policy. If the President does not promptly pull back from this dangerous adventure, Congress will have to assert its constitutional powers of restraint in the name of a people who have been asked once too often to swallow the military hallucination of victory through escalar
