Third Plane To Be Hijacked In 24 Hours Returns Home

MIAMI (AP)—An American Airlines jetliner crew planned to bring home today the last of a trio of jetliners—two of them American—hijacked to Cuba within 24 hours.

A red-haired woman who used her 12-year-old son as an interpreter was identified as one of the hijackers. A Mexican pilot said his plane was commandeered by four men trying to avenge a slain guerrilla leader, and the third day pirate apparently was a slain man with a gun.

The American Airlines Boeing 727 hijacked by the gunman remained overnight in Havana after letting him off. He had permitted the Chicago-to-New York plane to land for fuel at the Chicago-Kennedy Airport and departed at 67 passengers before the run to Havana with his crew of seven.

Capt. Antonio Chavez Gutar flew home to Mexico City Monday night, ending a trip that started over the resort island of Cayumal on Sunday night. Capt. Chavez said his plane, carrying 60 passengers, was hijacked by three Brazilians and a Mexican. The pilot said the hijacker was a clean cut man about 35.

He was sitting in my seat," she said, when she boarded in Chicago. "After I told him, he moved to the opposite side and said he was very sorry."

An airline spokesman said the diversion was done "in a subdued manner."

The second plane to be hijacked was a Delta Airlines jetliner crew planned to bring home today the last of a trio of jetliners—two of them American—hijacked to Cuba within 24 hours.

Stewardess Judy Winninger said the boy, carrying an armload of toys, followed his mother into the jet's cockpit and translated her command for a trip to Havana to the pilot.

The plane flew to Miami Monday night with 90 passengers and a crew of six after a stay of about 12 hours in Havana.

A Boeing 727 from Mexicana de Aviacion led the way for the gathering in Havana.

Analysis from Lab Awaited On Bacteria Count at Pond

A preliminary report regarding the bacteria count at Cranford's Pond has been received by First Selectman Charles Thibault.

The report prepared by the town's consulting sanitary engineer, James Thompson of Buck and Buck, is still not complete, but the preliminary findings were discussed by Thibault and Board of Recreation members William Holley, William Baker and John Campbell last night.

The report as received last night appears ambiguous, and at Holley's urging will be held up until the laboratory analysis of the bacteria count is made available by Thompson.

A member of the United Congregational Church, he is vice president of the Pilgrim Fellowship and pastor of the church.

James Thompson, 74, has been named deposit operations officer at the Hartford National Bank.

Due to the confusion caused by the situation at Cranford, about 160 children have been registered to date for the swim program and the town is planning another registration session in the next couple of weeks.

The United Congregational Church Choir will perform at the church.

The annual meeting of the Toland Public Library Association will be held Monday at 2:30 at the library.

Toland County Extension Agent John Elliott will speak at the meeting which is open to the public.

Winners of the Board of Recreation baton lessons revolving trophies for the last two weeks are Dawn Dimmock, Margie Warner, Felicia Greaves, Janet Bean, Tina Hills, Kim Hunt and Georgia Tourantore.

Also Donna Capetelli, Kathy Lasure, Karen Loomis, Karen Warner, Karen Brooks, and Theresa Woods.

The Toland High Eagles baseball team presently maintains an 8-5 record, after registering a 3-1 victory over East Olds Cochran, a Yale law student who is national chairman of the Black American Law Student Association.

to begin to wonder whether they do not belong on the same side on other questions. To be a conservative on racial questions, on the campus troubles, makes it inviting to be a conservative in foreign policy.

For a long, long time, labor's position could be taken as almost automatic on the liberal side of all national and foreign policy issues — and Mr. Meany could be regarded, for all his high post, as something of a maverick.

But it is Potofsky who makes news, today, for being where almost all labor leaders would have been not very long ago.

Orators and Cuddlers
 Desk by desk, the 100 speaking posts in the United States are now being wired for sound.

We don't know whether this is the last legislative bastion in the United States to surrender to the temptation to bring electronic aid to the solemn tongue and ear. We hope not. We hope that, in some famed birthplace of oratory, some Vermont or Virginia, there somehow remains a chamber of lawmakers who will continue to operate on their own power as a microphone.

There would continue to be a chance for the development of future natural orators, who could do something more than make a microphone.

There might be, some day, another Everett McKinley Dirksen.

It has to be admitted that the late Senator from Illinois could submit to a microphone when he had to. He even, on occasion, cuddled it close to him and used it for an artful whisper, which was one thing he could not have managed, had he heard throughout a hall, without it.

But although an orator like Senator Dirksen could survive the microphone, it can be proclaimed as a certainty that he would never have developed his splendid powers if, from the start, he had been propped by electronic equipment.

A great voice in oratory develops and grows only with use. It does not create itself unless there is a compulsive need for it. When men no longer need exert themselves in order to be heard, the chances are there will be less pleasure, and perhaps even less benefit, in hearing them.

In every wired legislative body, there should be an occasional equipment failure, just to separate the real orators from the microphone cuddlers.

A Corrupting Tactic
 It is an ill wind that blows no good, and perhaps the depressant tactic that provokes forces are now taking to the streets alongside the anti-war forces will at least help some people to understand the implications of the street demonstration tactic. When some 150,000 demonstrators marched peacefully to support the present war policies Wednesday, the news columns of the New York Times quite correctly identified it as "a show of power."

We are heartened by this growth in perception, for the overtones of power and intimidation in even peaceful street demonstrations had until now escaped much of our upper-middle-class elite. So long as all the demonstrators were anti-war, indeed, that class of persons has heretofore considered demonstrating as inherently and essentially virtuous.

Some may even cling to the touching notion the students' demonstrations are virtuous while others are brutish. They remember that some of the construction workers exploded into violent attacks on anti-war opponents two weeks ago, and they recognize that this casts its shadow when construction workers join in a later peaceful demonstration. But such are the tricks of memory that they forget anti-war students have burned ROTC buildings and banks, and that a splinter of them even staged two nights of rioting during the otherwise peaceful November demonstration. It must be recognized that this too casts its shadow when students demonstrate peacefully.

This constant threat of violence is what gives street demonstrations whatever effect they may have on policy, and peaceful demonstrators can never entirely escape their symbiosis with violence-prone factions. Also, neither side of any important dispute can be communicated in shouts or slogans, and taking to the street brings out the most emotional and least rational elements in whatever cause is being backed. Just as the students have been, that is what they think. Yet they should have avoided such excessive rhetoric, and should be especially careful not to repeat it in the most infamous circumstances.

Responsible citizens, just like national leaders, have a duty to do what is in the best interest of the country. Especially at a time of national crisis, it is the duty of responsible citizens to moderate when both sides are in the streets, and to recognize that mass demonstrations are not virtuous, and that they corrupt the political process, substituting threats and intimidation for reason and persuasion. The darnel came from the enemy. He said, 'No, because when you weed out the darnel you might pull up the wheat with it. Let them both grow till the harvest; and at harvest time I shall say to the reapers: First collect the darnel and tie it in bundles to be burnt, then gather the wheat into my barn.'"

Snowmobiles Revolutionize Life in Alaskan Wilderness

By JULIE LOH
 AP Newsfeatures Writer

POINT BARROW, Alaska (AP) — Bob Poole, the muskox Eskimo, had cause for grief last winter. One of his sled dogs was run over and killed by a snowmobile. It was an incident he never forgot. The feisty little machines with their ear-splitting engines and bunched exhausts have made the working dog team almost obsolete as the igloo.

Romantics might find that fact horrifying, but Alaskan Eskimos have liberated them from winter isolation and made a friend of the snow.

Even the Eskimos find virtue in snowmobiles.

"Too bad this place does not have enough flat places to have snowmobiles," lamented the newspaper at Little Nome, "for we sure can use them here."

"Use" is the correct verb. Most of the 28,000 Americans who bought snowmobiles last year got them primarily for fun. Point Barrow kids like to race merrily across the water, but here on iron dog's main function is utilitarian. It is the Arctic version of the snow machine.

Here, where winter lasts from October to May, snow machines with sleds attached "take the kids to school, haul the groceries home, deliver the mail, take the dog to the vet, and get the whole family to the Polar Bear theater on Saturday night."

Down on the Seward Peninsula, near Nome, reindeer herders use snowmobiles to chase strays. At Prudhoe Bay, on the Arctic Ocean, oil-workers use them to shuttle from rig to rig. At Kotzebue, the airport limousine is a snowmobile with a sturdy dog sled attached.

"There's no question that snow machines have made a better life up here," said Eileen Hopson, a Point Barrow child leader.

A cleaner life, too. Barrow Zpopulation 1,600 is the world's largest Eskimo village. Can you imagine the sanitation problem we had with 10 dogs chained at every house? In summer the smell was awful.

Hopson explained that employment for nearly every Barrow man is part time or seasonal when it's available at all. An Eskimo breadwinner has to hunt and trap regularly to feed his family.

"With dogs a man could travel only about 35 miles a day," he said. "With a snow machine we can range out 100 miles or more on a weekend to find game and still be home Sunday night. My own trapline is 40 miles away. I can get there and back in 10 hours. I can't do that with a dog team."

According to Bill Levitt, a Barrow man, "A snow machine and skilled hunter, some Barrow men without jobs hunt full time with their snowmobiles, and fare well enough that they can barter meat and skins for staple goods and fuel.

By the best estimates, Anchorage's 50,000 citizens own 7,000 to 10,000 snowmobiles. Alaska as a whole has about 100,000 snowmobiles. Two-snowmobile families are commonplace.

Godsends may be to think of many, but not every Alaskan village snowmobiles quite so be- pinvolently. Fred Machetanz, for one, Machetanz, perhaps Alaska's mo- val.

Inflation's Inevitability Now a Prevalent Attitude

By JOHN CUNIFF
 AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Has long-term inflation become inevitable? Few people in government or industry dare answer affirmatively, for fear that the opinion might provoke the fact, but many of them are acting on that assumption.

Passage by the House of Representatives of an automatic cost-of-living increase in Social Security benefits, tied to increases in the cost of living, is recognition of this belief. And there are numerous other examples.

Negotiated wage increases are being made on the assumption that the cost of living will continue to rise. Five per cent annual increases, once consid- ered good, are now scoffed at as amounting to nothing when in- flation is making its bid.

Mutual funds offered this opportunity, and they grew swiftly into a $50-billion industry. More- over, they were a direct com- petitor of insurers for the sav- ings of ordinary Americans.

Now life insurers are deeply involved with mutual funds, either through acquiring existing funds or beginning their own, through scratch.

The reason why is obvious: companies. For years they sold guaranteed, fixed-dollar returns look paltry beside the projected returns of the mutual funds.

In fact, belief in fixed returns was almost a religion with the insured. Now many of those qual- ity of life insurance companies are spreading the notion that only a sterner would risk the future of his family by investing in any- thing that didn't assure a pre- cise return.

$1.47 Million Town Budget Has Narrow Victory, 36-32

The 1970-71 budget of $1,470,368 was almost sent back to the Board of Finance because of confusion over anticipated revenue. After lengthy discussion among many taxpayers, Marshall Taylor recommended that the budget be turned down and sent back to the finance board for "more home work."

The Board of Finance will meet tonight to vote on the budget which has been estimated at $1,470,368. The budget was presented by the finance board at a meeting held at the town hall last night. It was approved by a vote of 36 to 32.

The budget includes a 10 percent increase in the mill rate, which will be 22.72 cents. The town also is asking for a 10 percent increase in the property tax rate, which will be 1.47 percent.

Sleith Re-Elected Lutz Speaker Tells Of Ecology Dangers

By MARGARET AULISIO The issue of ecology was still alive last night at the annual meeting of the Lutz Junior Museum at which Dr. William Niering, director of the Connecticut Arboretum in New London, gave the main address.

Although, thanks to the news and television media, lately, more people in the audience, feeling they've already been told everything, looked indifferently at the speaker with tired eyes, he soon held their attention by giving what William H. Sleith, president of the Lutz Board of trustees, later called a "captivating" speech.

Sleith was re-elected president of the Board of trustees last night, or his second year of service. In the business portion of the meeting following dinner and the main address, also elected were four other officers and 10 trustees.

Dr. Niering, who is also a professor of botany at Connecticut College in New London, talked about "the subtleties that take place every time you manipulate the environment." The title of his speech was, "Quest for Survival: Quality or Quantity?"

One of the many current by six per cent of its population. We will also have to weed ourselves from the mountains and accept a "downsizing of the good life" 247 which he said and the main address. Also elected were four other officers and 10 trustees.

He also mentioned the Foundation for the Connecticut Landmarks, which has been established in San Bernardino, Calif., about half of which are dying thanks largely to smog from Los Angeles some 60-70 miles away.

These pine and some other vegetation on the mountain slopes, also dying, may, he said, be holding the land in place.

In Connecticut, he saw some 100 flowering dogwoods dying in the mountains of the Connecticut River for use in the Connecticut River. No one, he said, has studied the possible effects of this environmental manipulation, such as the construction of dams, which he said are taking the food waters away from Connecticut's necessary ground water reserves.

Another effect of water manipulation was evidenced when the Aswan Dam was built in Egypt, Dr. Niering said. Because the dam kept certain nutrients out of the Mediterranean, the entire sardine industry was modified, he said.

Dr. Niering criticized our enormous reliance on insect killing pesticides, saying that farmers do not need to use as much as they do.

Tollard Rid Litter Day Campaign Called 'Immense Success'

Samurai's Rid Litter Day campaign was termed an "immense success" by Fred Selbert, chairman of the committee. Selbert, who has been through the campaign several times, extended his gratitude to all who participated in the event.

The campaign was telecast on a five-hour project and involved over 60 local residents of all ages. A total of 12 3-gallon capacity plastic bags were filled with litter from the sides used to clean up the town's roads, former jail, which will serve as well another crew working on the hauling and spreading of the litter along the roads.

Picking up litter along the roads was the other portion of the day's activities planned by the committee. The major road planned around the Memorial Day Monument on the Green, and which Gardner and his crew will be blooming in time for Memorial Day, that will be the project deficit include inflation, lower-than-expected tax revenues and the high cost of borrowing money.

NAACP Aide Warns Rotarians: 'Ye Shall Reap What Ye Sow'

By BARBARA RICHMOND (Herald Reporter) "Ye shall reap what ye sow." America has sown the seeds of violence and oppression and it is now reaping the fruits of that violence, then you are the bad fruits, she has produced. This word of caution was uttered by Wilbur Smith to a group of Rotarians at a meeting of the Rotary Club yesterday.

Smith is director of urban programs for the NAACP. He is also an instructor at Eastern Connecticut State College and ran as a candidate for the mayor of Hartford on the Liberal Party ticket last November.

"Great was the fall of it," Smith told his talk, but it was subtitled, "What's Wrong with our young people?"

Smith's opening question from Matthew 7: 26-27 offered much food for thought: "Those of you who hear these words of mine and do them, I will liken him to a wise man who built his house upon a rock."

He defined the threat as being the attitude of minds among young people that leads them to deny or destroy the sacred rights of others and to ignore the true quality of the human personality.

"That is that attitude of mind," he charged, "which is the cause of the violence and destruction that is being visited upon our young people."

Reminding the Rotarians that "we live in a nation supposedly under God," Smith termed it as being rapidly on its way to becoming in its present state. Looking ahead to the coming July 4 holiday, Smith noted that the brief moment even our "silent majority" will be coaxed in to celebrating a violent revolution.

Panel Says Retarded Misted Nike Site Use Topic For Forum of Youth

A townwide youth forum at the Nike Site will be held tomorrow night starting at about 6:30 to discuss reaction at the site and elsewhere in town.

Also included in the timetable for the next five years is the development of eight buildings at the site for a variety of uses. Proposed plans for the buildings include a cultural center for music, theater and the arts; a recreation department headquarters; a community center for meetings, theater and a child care center; an active game center for table tennis, pool and other indoor sports; a teen center; a teen center; a building for theatrical workshops; and a final building to be used as a community center.

Weiss had asked for $797,943 in the Capital Improvement fund for a variety of town programs which the board reduced to $469,643.

Weiss says that if the town does not start on the new center and water and sewer facilities in the next fiscal year, "we will find it difficult to meet the conditions of the agreement with the Federal government."

He should be remembered, of course," he continues, "that a failure on the town's part to live up to the conditions of the agreement could result in the government reclaiming the property with reimbursement to the town."

Weiss concludes that the letter saying he intends to contact local civic groups that have indicated interest in assisting and in what he termed an "open house" to keep the schools open, but they were closed this morning when the extent of the walkout became evident.

By MAXINE CHESHIRE
WASHINGTON — Tricia Haines can have a television career if she wants it.

Columbia Broadcasting System (CBS) producer Don Hays who taped a tour of the White House with Tricia for an upcoming segment of "60 Minutes" says that the president's older daughter turned out to be "natural."

At one point in the interview, with the cameras grinding away, she led reporter Harry Belafonte over to the mantle in her mother's sitting room.

On Wednesday, after those 100,000 "hard hat" demonstrations in New York burst into effigy, Mayor John Lindsay flew down to Washington to interview Tricia.

Poet Feted At Festival In Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) His poems are read at hippie weddings and college students have thrummed through them for the past decade.

But when Khalil Gibran, author of the long mystical poem "The Prophet," started writing, officials and maronite Catholic priests in his native Lebanon denounced him.

Gibran burned his first work, "Mistral Rebellious," in the Beirut marketplace, calling it "dangerous, revolutionary and poisonous to youth."

Now Lebanon is making amends to the memory of one of its most famous sons with a week-long Gibran International Festival that opens today.

Of New York, Gibran once wrote: "He who wishes to live in New York must be a sharp sword in a sheath of honey. The sword is to repel those who are desirous of killing time and the honey is to satisfy their hunger."

Gibran wrote in both English and Arabic, and his works have been translated into more than 50 languages. Scholars find in them the influence of the German philosopher Nietzsche, the French symbolist poet, and the English post-painter William Blake.

The festival is the second international conference in the city this month. The Ministry of Tourism and the United Arab Emirates have been behind the scenes in both affairs, offering reduced air fares and hotel rates.

As a result of the 1967 Middle East war, Lebanon lost the tourist trade that used to pass through its way to Jordan and the Holy Land. The continuing tension has kept tourists away and Beirut's hundreds of hotels practically empty.

To overcome this, tourism officials are making a big pitch for the convention trade and are using the Cedars and the ancient cities of Byblos and Baniyas as special attractions for foreign trips during the conference.

Those attending the Gibran festival will go to Beirut, where the poet is buried, on Sunday, on the way they will pass through Byblos, the city that gave the Bible its name, and the Cedars, where there is a new resort.

Germ Survives Three Years On The Moon

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Scientists have discovered that a harmless germ from earth returned alive after three years on the moon with a television camera.

It soared into space aboard unmanned Surveyor III, which landed on the moon April 20, 1967.

Apollo 12 astronaut Charles Conrad and Alan Bean set down close to Surveyor for their moon walk in November and retrieved the camera.

Apparently the micro-organism, known as streptococcus mitis, survived the Surveyor launch, a three-day voyage to the moon in the vacuum of space and 400 days in the hostile moon environment.

Frederick Mitchell, a microbiologist at the Lunar Receiving Laboratory here, said the germ was found by scientists in the course of a five-month study of the Surveyor camera.

It was described by Dr. W. W. Kemmerer, head of the space center's preventative medicine office, as "a benign bacteria that rides around in all of us."

Mitchell said the tiny organism turned up on a little piece of polyurethane foam used for insulation in the camera. Presumably it was left there off the breath of a workman, as a shard on the camera was moved to make repairs during prelaunch tests.

He placed it in a bacterial growth media and the organism revived, Mitchell related.

He said: "The first signs of life were observed after four days of incubation. On the next day the tube was turbid (cloudy) with growth."

Heavier Smokers — MANCHESTER, England — Dr. Clifford R. Ray, a Manchester general practitioner who carried out a five-day study of 46,000 women, says nicotine is one of the new secondary effects of the pill. Of 17,000 women taking oral contraceptives, 12 per cent smoked more than 20 cigarettes a day, he found.
