Arabs Free American Physician

BRIDGEPORT, Conn. (AP)—The Coast Guard today released an American physician Dr. William Paul Shrum was released by Arab guerrillas today after being held for a week, the Jordanian Foreign Ministry announced.

Shrum was handed over to the ministry which delivered him to the U.S. Embassy. He is being flown out of Jordan on the first available plane to Beirut, Lebanon.

Shrum, 45, was one of 62 foreigners held as hostages last week in Amman by Palestinian guerrillas during the fighting between the guerrillas and Jordanian army troops.

The Marxist Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine released the rest of the hostages last Friday from the two Amman hotels where they were being held. But the commandos took Shrum to a guerrilla camp for questioning after a woman guerrilla said he had interrogated her when she was a captive in Israel.

Earlier Shrum was visited by Red Cross representatives in a private house in Amman. One reported that he was well "and should be released in a few hours. It was a case of mistaken identity," Shrum is a medical adviser with the U.S. Embassy in Athens.

Kamal Nasser, a guerrilla leader in Jordan, said the firm was also conferring with officials of the East End Yacht Club, whose boats were moored near Johnson's Creek — the section of the harbor where the oil spilled.

Dale Nolf, president of Buckley Brothers, said the firm would assume responsibility for losses to the boats.

Nasser, a member of the executive council of the Palestine Liberation Organization, said in an interview: "It was the decision of the recent Cairo meeting of the Palestine National Council to evacuate operations against Israel by combined guerrilla forces, and now we can get on with that task."

The guerrillas consider the National Council a legitimate Palestinian parliament in exile.

Nasser also said the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency has men all over Jordan and that they are in direct contact with "antirevolutionary forces within the regime."

"If the United States continues to conspire against us, we shall unleash our forces against U.S. interests in the Middle East when it hunches its hand," he said.

An Israeli army spokesman said Monday that there was a "definite decrease" last week in shooting along the Jordanian cease-fire line. Incidents compared with 69 the previous week. But he predicted that action will pick up again once conditions in Jordan return to normal.

Oil Coats Bridgeport Harbor

BRIDGEPORT, Conn. (AP)—The Coast Guard today issued an order to keep the fuel oil from spreading out into Long Island Sound. Earlier estimates by the Coast Guard figured the spill at 100,000 gallons.

More than 24,000 gallons of the oil — four tanker truckloads — had been pumped to the harbor by late Monday night. The spill started early Monday morning, when a pipeline ruptured while carrying home heating oil from a tanker to the storage tanks of the Buckley Brothers, a Shell Oil subsidiary.

The spill was reported by the owners of several boats tied up in a nearby boatyard, but by the time it was stemmed the slick was between two and four inches thick in spots.

The cleanup crews were being directed by Buckley company officials, who said they had ordered from Boston special skimming machines capable of pumping 600 gallons a minute.

Pumps and boom rigs to contain the slick were already in use Monday night.

Meanwhile, company officials were also conferring with officials of the East End Yacht Club, whose boats were moored near Johnson's Creek — the section of the harbor where the oil spilled.

Dale Nolf, president of Buckley Brothers, said the firm would assume responsibility for losses to the boats.

South Viets Smash into Capital But Find Enemy's Not Home

KOMPONG SPEU, Cambodia (AP)—South Vietnamese troops smashed into the provincial capital today, but found the Viet Cong and North Viet forces were not home. The Viet Cong and North Viet forces were not home. The Viet Cong and North Viet forces were not home.

On reaching the central market area today, they began capturing everything portable they could get their hands on.

The commander, Brig. Gen. Tran Ha Di, castigated the troops and forced them to load most of their loot on trucks, but no attempt was made to recover watches, rings and money the soldiers had taken from civilians.

The trucks loaded of recovered goods were taken to the regional military headquarters and piled in the center of the parade ground. Three Cambodian soldiers picked it over.

The first fighting in Kompong Speu occurred around the provincial headquarters building and the regional military headquarters and barracks. The provincial headquarters was reduced to a shell by artillery. The first captures occurred April 3.

Two Columbia Broadcasting System (CBS) newsmen, George Syster and Gerald Miller, were killed May 20 when they were in a Viet Cong ambush southwest of Phnom Penh.

Over-all, however, the town was damaged only lightly by a week of fighting. Heavy artillery barrages and air strikes had been confined to the outskirts and the older residential section. Damage to the central market and the downtown business area, was comparatively light.

The South Vietnamese soldiers broke into all the stores in the downtown area, and shooting off the locks. Every thing of value was taken, from flashlights to sewing machines and new motorcycles.

Military Exemption Guidelines Drawn

WASHINGTON (AP)—Draft Director Curtis W. Tarr spelled out today four guidelines for local draft boards to follow in applying Monday's Supreme Court decision broadening the grounds for conscientious objection.

Tarr also announced, in a news conference, that the new lottery to assign draft sequence numbers to men who turn 19 by the end of this year will be held July 1.

"The Monday's court decision, Tarr said, draft boards must judge whether to grant conscientious objector status to men whose beliefs do not fit the traditional concept of 'religion.'"

"The man's belief must be sincerely held, Tarr said, and must be a part of the man's moral code. He needs to have taken into account the thoughts of other conscientious objectors who had said he could not injure or kill another human being was central in a religious belief."

"The belief needs to be the result of some rigorous kind of training," Tarr said.

"Tarr said this was not necessarily how the guidelines would appear in their final form. He said he had not yet received a full analysis of the court's decision from Selective Service law enforcement officials. He said his own interpretation of the court's decision."

"Tarr said he thought the decision would increase the work of local draft boards and belong to any church, but I'm not an atheist. He also says: 'Maybe you'd call me an agnostic. Maybe I leave open the question of religion; but I don't see it.'"

"It was enough for four justices that Welch was sincere and steadfast in his beliefs; that he was deeply held and not a matter of expediency—that they were not adopted simply to avoid Army duty."

"Tarr said, however, that the decision was not likely to open the floodgates for unlimited claims of conscientious objection, in effect making it more difficult to prove to the judge of whether he should serve."

"It will be difficult," he said, "for people to profess sincerity when there is no sincerity. It will be difficult to prove to the judge of whether he should serve."

"Tarr said he was 'somewhat surprised' by Monday's decision. "The thing that worries me," he said, "is the difficult decisions that have to be made by local boards."

On the surface, the decision seemed to make little change in existing guidelines, but Selective Service spokesman said he had no statistics on personal grounds claimed by conscientious objectors and thus no way to measure the effects of Sunday's policy shifts.

Draft law provides for exemption from military service of men who "by reason of religious training and belief" oppose war.

WASHINGTON (AP)—Local changing them before they get draft boards concerned with enforcing their monthly quotas often find physically handicapped men who are mentally disturbed youth up about 80 per cent of the total who are unfit for military service. Army prison population of about 100,000. Draftees constitute 64 per cent of the Army.

The panel, appointed to study the Army prison system, and 80 to 90 per cent of Army prisoners are charged or convicted of being absent without leave, the panel said. Of these, many were unable and unable to withstand the tensions of military life.

New Ideals Reflected By Draft Ruling

WASHINGTON (AP)—In vainly expanding the grounds for draft exemption, the Supreme Court has acknowledged that a man may have deep moral and ethical objections to war while not being religious in the formal and traditional sense.

The 5-3 ruling Monday seems to reflect, in this regard, the curious growth of ethical fervor among much of today's youth alongside a corresponding distaste for the formal religion of the past.

Elliott Ashton Welch II, the Beverly Hills, Calif., commodity broker who had said he could not injure or kill another human being was central in a religious belief."

"The belief needs to be the result of some rigorous kind of training," Tarr said.

Cong Free Three U.S. Newsmen

SAIGON (AP)—Three American correspondents held captive by Viet Cong troops in Cambodia for more than five weeks were released and returned to Saigon today apparently unharmed.

"We're safe and healthy, and we're in good shape," said Richard H. Dudman of the St. Louis Post Dispatch, released by the Christian Science Monitor and Michael D. Morrow of Dispatch, Inc.

Dudman said that the trip received rough treatment at first when their interrogations suspected that they were American government personnel. But he said they were treated with kindness and consideration once their credentials as correspondents had been established.

The three, captured May 7, were released in Cambodia Monday night and returned to Saigon early today after hitchhiking in from the border.

Their release left some 20 correspondents from eight nationalities still in captivity in Cambodia. The first captures occurred April 3.

Two Columbia Broadcasting System (CBS) newsmen, George Syster and Gerald Miller, were killed May 20 when they were in a Viet Cong ambush southwest of Phnom Penh.

Rebuff To The Handsome Prince

There are no easy fairy tales in this grim modern world of ours, and the heroes are more likely to wind up inside some witch's oven than living happily ever after with the fruits of their courageous, timely efforts.

Fried, for one sample of the hero being tried instead of honored, Chancellor Willy Brandt of West Germany. He is the handsome, willing knight who, after his election, carried out his long-time promise to give Germans, the sleeping beauty of German reunification, a waking kiss.

Historically, theoretically, Brandt should be a hero for his willingness to try to end the senseless partition of the big-power victors of World War II, ended 25 years ago, forced upon Germany.

But what happened, the other day, in the German state elections which were being made into a sort of barometer of Chancellor Brandt's prestige after he had made his first moves in the promised, right direction, was that the sleeping beauty of German unity scorned him.

In so far as there was any change in the voting of his fellow West Germans, it was a change toward coolness, as if they didn't want to be awakened to any real prospect of national reunification or to any real prospect of coexistence with their neighbors to the East.

This has little or nothing to do, perhaps, with the real business of German reunification. That is a tide which will, in its time, sweep everything before it. But there is, at the moment, no reward for the surfer who has tried to balance himself out on the forward tip of the wave.

There is one human experience which is perhaps even more painful than that of being totally wrong about something. It is that of being right about something, a little bit early. That is often a necessary contribution to what is going to happen, eventually. But it is no guarantee of recognition or gratitude for the man who is right, early.

The question now is how the mild yet visible setback at the polls will affect Chancellor Brandt. The guess is that the man who has managed to become both the most imaginative and the most realistic statesman of post-war Europe will not draw back from history merely because some of his constituents are not ready to welcome any variation in the unnatural conditions which now, having already lasted a quarter of a century, seem almost natural, and at least familiar.

War By Sound Tape

The ancient Chinese are supposed to have had a code of war under which the opposing armies marched out to face one another, then counter-certified audits of their own numbers, and yielded the day and the battle to whichever side had appeared in greater force.

Ever since that time, mankind has been struggling, unsuccessfully, to get that civilized spirit.

When we have reached the opposite extreme we try to determine the outcome of every single engagement in Vietnam on the basis of the body count, or the number of human beings killed.

Occasionally, however, there is a momentary prospect that war can be civilized again.

When the North Vietnamese see a Cambodian detachment about to poke its way into some new section of jungle, they set up their tape and their amplifier and fill the jungle with a terrifying sound of automatic-weapons and mortar fire.

One additional advantage of such a kind of war would be that there would be very little homelessness on the part of Americans involved in it. To them the sound would be quite similar to that of their no-muffer society back home.

Sell Our Yacht?

It is about time, it seems to us, for somebody to salute the intelligence and sanity of that supposedly ponderous and unfeeling behemoth, the stock market.

Our thoughts, every time it is mentioned, are likely to head first into one of the traditional prejudices against it.

But it is time to pay some attention to the fact that it has not, for some time, been behaving like one of the cartoons of itself, or honoring its own supposed traditions.

The stock market, for instance, now reacts unfavorably to war and prospects of war, and favorably to peace. It does this although it is still as obvious as ever that the American economy flourishes in war time as at no other time.

Or take the stock market and inflation. One of the great classic hedges against inflation has always been an investment in common stocks, on the theory that, when the price of everything else is going up, the price of stocks will at least be a little bit ahead of the whole procession.

But what does this educated stock market of today tell us? It tells us that inflation is dangerous and unsound, and bad news for everybody. And instead of following wages and prices up and up, the stock market goes so alarmed about the dangers of inflation that it turns around and plunges downward, thus ruining all those smart people who thought the market was the safest place to get ever higher prices for their money.

There is only possible explanation for such reversal of normal stock market behavior. The market has become intelligent. It has stopped behaving like a chart-regulated robot. It knows good from evil. It knows that, since war is destructive in the long run, it can't be the basis of any sound property. It knows that, since inflation is never and never can be anything but a balloon, the safest thing is to refuse to get aboard, or, if caught aboard, to jump before the balloon soars wild.

What else does the stock market know? It is trying to tell us something else? Like, maybe, we should sell our yacht?

Can You Afford A House

One of our correspondents, stating Moscow reported that the only criticism of Soviet policy he heard voiced by his ministerial guide was the quiet expression of hope that the Russian Government would someday get around to building single-family homes. Moscow, of course, is full of big apartment houses — blocks of flats.

It would be worthwhile if United States policymakers would heed similar criticisms today. Thanks to the "recession," the market has become intelligent. It knows that, since war is destructive in the long run, it can't be the basis of any sound property.

So what happens in the construction industry? With fewer family-size homes built—the houses which give individuals a sense of property-owning and security — builders instead put up bigger, more costly structures: high-rise apartments, office buildings, shopping centers.

Corrective measures can and should be taken. The Nixon administration has sponsored, and the Senate has approved, a plan authorizing the Federal Home Loan Bank to subsidize loans to the nation's savings and loan associations, largest single source of credit for home construction. Plans are also being discussed to institute mortgage financing from the tight money policies aimed at restraining inflation. One suggestion is to make interest rates on housing flexible — rising and falling along with other interest costs.

Americans have come to a sad situation when, as is now the case, the only housing available in many areas are the mobile homes. (An estimated 400,000 were sold last year.) Let's see Congress get cracking with legislation to help individuals buy and own their homes—come recession, inflation, or prosperity. CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR.

Inside Report

Wallace Spooking Nixon

By Rowland Evans Jr. and Robert D. Novak

WASHINGTON — Apprehension that George Wallace's comeback may "spook" the Nixon administration into new concessions to Dixie stems from incidents such as his, on a closed-door session of Vice President Spiro T. Agnew's Cabinet committee on school desegregation June 4-5 days after Wallace's primary victory for governor.

A Justice Department presentation on Deep South desegregation was angrily interrupted by Postmaster Gen. Winton (Red) Blount, the Alabama millionaire and only Southerner in President Nixon's Cabinet. Pointing to a chart prepared by Justice Department lawyers, Blount demanded that the Nixon administration now has no intention of doing with desegregation in Alabama. It should clearly reflect that Alabama is operating under a statewide order filed by the Johnson administration.

Blount sounded off prematurely. The chart did show that all the state's 119 school districts are "in litigation" as a result of the LBJ statewide suit, a result that none are "out of compliance and not in litigation." But Blount's brief flareup shows how Wallace's resurrection as the 1972 third-party Presidential nominee, who threatens Mr. Nixon's Southern strategy is building political tensions.

Most significantly affected is Atty. Gen. John Mitchell, the President's political manager and chief architect of the Southern strategy. He was angry that attorneys in his civil rights division released the school desegregation chart to the press after it was privately unveiled before the Agnew committee.

Mitchell had no disagreement with the statistics, but he did not want his department publicly identified with Administration desegregation plans because of possible bad publicity in the South. The statistics, according to Mitchell, should be released from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare or from the Agnew committee. So upset was the Attorney General that he pulled back copies of the chart that had been sent to the White House for release.

Republican moderates in key posts within the Administration are aware of this palpitating political reaction. They are also deeply disturbed by it.

One Administration official who is pushing Deep South school desegregation told us that the "knee-jerk reaction" by top Nixon men immediately after Wallace's victory in the June 2 primary runoff suggested to him that "Wallace may spook the White House into doing a lot of stupid things."

The first test will come this week in Jackson, Miss., at still another meeting between Administration desegregation experts and Mississippi school officials. With some 30 school districts still not in compliance, racial desegregation, a Washington delegation, dominated by Justice Department lawyers is

Connecticut Yankee

By A.H.O.

It was not until after we had commented publicly on the extraordinarily heavy duty being given the Verly Pronoun in this Connecticut curfew watch.

Before we watched this program, we had a general impression of all kinds of 1970 candidates of various political persuasions, but we were not prepared to make almost mandatory, their own appraisal of their own uniquely colonial fitness for the particular office they seeking. The "Yankee" that most offensive of promises, seemed to have the whole campaign, all at the way.

Then we found ourselves watching ETV's formalized debate among the six Republican candidates.

The first and we presume the most important reaction we had was watching the six: Weicker, Sibal, McGee, Eberling, Lupton, and Mrs. Napier. It was that to be a member of that party which had six such individuals available for its Senate nomination.

They all answered their first two set questions—one on Vietnam, the second on what they thought the most important domestic problem to be with a fine combination of intellect, soul, and intestinal fortitude, and there were times when we were reminded of the most evangelical of the group, the candidate who has no ill chance of winning, he has nothing to lose but his conscience and who sternly re-asserts out of their chairs to follow wherever he might lead. It was equally impressive, in the end, however, to see all the candidates, including the one with the best chance of election, to high standards of discussion. There wasn't anything low order among the lot of them.

Then there was, of course, the pleasant surprise, which we are more or less bound to acknowledge, since, even as we watched them, our own comment about the dominance of the first person singular in this campaign was on its way into print.

The third question given the candidates made their resort to the "I" almost compulsory, because it required them to state their own ideas of their own qualifications for the nomination, and their own prediction of how they would do against the opposition if nominated.

We graced as we thought of such fine people being subjected to such a requirement, and settled back to endure the agony of such compulsory performance. We were pleasantly surprised by the performance of Palmer McGee, who, as we remember it, managed to travel the whole distance of his answer using only one "I" and only one "my." Furthermore, he was not to be any deliberate display of modesty, which would have been merely good tactics on his part, but something which resulted naturally from the combination of intellect, soul, and intestinal fortitude, and there were times when we were reminded of the most evangelical of the group, the candidate who has no ill chance of winning, he has nothing to lose but his conscience and who sternly re-asserts out of their chairs to follow wherever he might lead. Hebron Pre-School Eye, Ear Tests Scheduled for Next Week

The Public Health Nursing Agency has announced that of nurses, and Mrs. Moshier, pre-school vision and hearing screening tests will be held all next week for all children registered in the city.

A total of 171 children at the Hebron Elementary School and schools for kindergarten in September.

The testing will be held daily from 10 a.m. to noon in the health room at the Hebron Elementary School and will be done by Mrs. Jean Moshier, public health nurse for the Hebron schools.

At last week's German measles (rubella) clinic, the school physician, Dr. Christopher O'Connor, administered the vaccine to 322 elementary school children.

The program includes Bible study as well as art, music, and nature classes and a registration fee of 50 cents per child or $2 maximum per family will be charged to help defray expenses and materials.

Children who have not yet registered should do so through their respective churches or through Mrs. Carole Elliott.

The Hebron Volunteer Fire Department came out on top with a 17 to 16 victory over the Little League coaches in their benefit game Sunday at St. Peter's field.

In the closely pitched contest, Selection Bob Dixon got credit for the win for the firemen while the loss was charged to Recreation, Commission member Joe Kahlis.

The game's most valuable player award went to Company 1's Fire Captain and "nurse" Frank Collo, who not only hit and ran like a professional, but administered first aid to the baboons have even had a population explosion and boosted their numbers to about 200.

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Yankees won the San Francisco Giants' lead in the National League East division today as the Pirates' rookie bats checked the Dodgers' bats, Baltimore's lead over the Orioles was trimmed to 2 1/2 games.
