Law And Morals Moralists of the ancient world were in no doubt that lewd spectacles debauch public morals, Periodically the Roman emperors agreed with the moralists, suppressed the shows, and banished the actors. The records do not relate whether this provoked a chorus of cant about the inalienable preogative of the artist and the liberty of the human spirit. The records do show that the prohibitions were of little avail and short lived. It has generally been supposed since those days that digressions into that kind o licentiousness are injurious to society and attempts to check them simply by legal prohibition have generally come

The epithets appropriate to "Oh Calto say that it strikes most people as going beyond the bounds of decency. . .It is not to the point that worse, or better, has for long been on tap in Soho. "Oh! Calcutta!" is a production for the legitimate stage by one of our most celebrated aesthetes, partonized by a fashionable audience, and dutifully considered by general idea of what is publicly accept-

That is why those who are of the opinion that it passes the bounds of decency are justified in denouncing it. It is not (they need not attend), but because it shifts the limits of publicly permissible sexual display, and shifts them in a direction that they have reason to believe is hurtful to the values they uphold and to the well-being of their society. "Oh! Calcutta!" is a notorious, but not a particularly important, example of the glide into public licentiousness. The book trade and the advertising profession are more pervasive in their influspect are threatened by this unlisteral revision of frontiers to stand up and protest. They deplore the production less for what it is than for what it portends. We

To denounce is one thing, to advocate prohibition is another. Legal suppression of intellectual and artistic-work and of entertainments is consonant with a liberal society only if there is a very broad measure of agreement within the politiabout the length of permissible departure from standards of sexual morality. It is a more radical disagreement about what those standards should be. At opposite poles there are those who found vate and public, in chastity, fidelity, restraint and reticence; and those who found their standards in experiment and the practice of sexuality as an open form ression, who are not abashed, and who desire to free their enjoyment from the restraints and feelings of guilt that new attitude should not be allowed to obality, truthfulness, and frankness. The lovely legislative junket to Salt Lake City, sending a Connecticut delegation of 43 persons not long after the imminence of new historic state deficit had required Governor Dempsey to urge all state officials to curb out of state junketeering, is one more illustration of the kind of syndrome which has taken over the Connecticut legislative establishment.

And, as such, it performs a service the legislators themselves certainly never intended It focuses public attention on what may deserve to be rated, for its long range consequences the most important single issue facing the Connecticut electorate in this most dramatic elec-

The specific question will be that of whether or not, in the referendum this November, the people of Connecticut will approve the Constitutional Amend ment which provides that the Legislature shall have annual rather than blennial sessions. The direct consequences of annual sessions are debatable, with this corner's guess being that they will cost the state a lot more money without any corresponding increase in legislative wisdom or efficiency. But the proposal for annual sessions has a symbolic impor tance even greater than its own potential direct results.

This proposal is about the only chance the people of the state are ever going to have to cry some kind of halt to the extrava ganza of self-aggrandizemen upon which the Connecticus Legislature has launched

The legislators themselve have long ago lost any realisic sense of what they are dong. They are, almost to a man nd a woman, filled with an exalted sense of high-minded crusade as they set their sights on annual sessions, higher salaries further curbs on the power of what is already one of weakest governorships in the country, and that eventual great new state capitol building in which they would all have individual offices and individual office staffs.

The session of the National Legislative Conference out in Salt Lake City would, quite naturally, be an occasion for the crusaders of one state to meet those of other states and exchange ideas and encouragement, and the wonder is not that the managers of the Connecticut Legislature took 48 members and staff out to the affair, but that they did not take

Why wait until Spring?

Fall is the naturally right time to improve your lawn!

The few weeks of late summer and early fall are by far the best opportunity to upgrade your lawn. Days are growing shorter. Dews are heavier. The soil is warm, and nights are growing cooler. It's the one time of year when Mother Nature has all the odds stacked in your favor - the naturally right time to make real lawn progress.

Turf Builder is the fertilizer that helps grass multiply itself. Turns thin browned out lawns into thicker, greener turf. Use it any time, any weather. Will not burn grass or harm grass seed. Clean. Lightweight. Easy to handle. How about this weekend?
