Ocean in 81 days in search of peace and religious freedom. The year was 1620 and their departing point was Plymouth, England.

To commemorate the 350th anniversary of the landing by this hearty band of pilgrims aboard the Mayflower, the United States will issue a 6-cent stamp on Nov. 21.

The design of the vertical stamp depicts a group of pilgrims in the foreground, garbed in black and white. In the background is the Mayflower. Vertical right of the stamp is inscribed "1620 The Landing of the Pilgrims." Across the bottom is "U.S. Postage 6 cents." The place of first day issuance is obviously Plymouth, Mass., named after the home port of the Mayflower 350 years

The landing was described by passenger William Bradford, who later became governor of the colony, as follows: "Being thus arrived in a good harbor and brought safe to land, they fell upon their knees and blessed the God of Heaven, who had brought them over the vast and furious ocean, and delivered them from all the perils and miseries thereof, again to et their feet on the firm and stable earth, their proper element."

Collectors desiring first day cancellations may send ad-dressed envelopes, together with remittance to cover the cost of the stamps to be affixed, o the Postmaster, Rlymouth, Mass., 02360. Personal checks will not be accepted. The outside envelope should be endorsed "First Day Covers Maylower Landing Stamp." Cover uests must be postmarked no r than Nov. 21.

Besides Israel's new set of Festival stamps honoring world gues to be issued prior to he High Holy Days, a stamp is also being issued on the same iate as a tribute to the little known "Operation Ezra and Nehemiah," reports the Israel Philatelic Agency in America. "Ezra and Nehemiah" was the code name for the illegal emigration movement which brought thousands of Jews. out of Iraq into Israel. The new stamp features a symbolic drawing of a dove flying toward the sun. The multicolor adhesives are printed in sheets of 15 stamps and 5 tabs.

The U.S. Post Office Depart-ment and the United Nations Postal Administration again will take part in the National Post-age Stamp Show held by the American Stamp Dealers Association in New York City, Nov. 20-22.

Several dramatic displays from the philatelic archives of the U.S. Post Office and the United Nations are expected. They will also maintain substations at which visitors may purchase commemorative stamps and also mail covers to obtain the distinctive postal markings of the Stamp Show.

The 1970 show will climax National Stamp Collecting Week and will display hundreds of frames of stamp items as well as booths for more than 100 dealers from the United States and foreign countries.

_____ San Marino, noted for the beautiful designs on its stamps, has just issued three new stamps reproducing paintings by the famous artist Giambattista Tiepelo (1696-1770). The designs show Girl With Candolin. Girl With Parrot, Rinaldo and Armida Surprised.

Possible Eligibility

CHICAGO (AP) - Students and part-time and retired workers may be eligible for an exemption from tax withholding provided by the Tax Reform Act of 1969. Commerce Clearing House said the eligibility relieves the student or others working parttime during the year or the employe with large itemized deductions from filing a return solely to obtain a refund of withheld taxes.

A new withholding exemption certificate-Form W-4E-is available for wages paid after April 30, 1970.

A single person making less than $1,725 this year owes no tax. The IRS bases this on the $1,100 low income allowance and a personal exemption of $625. A taxpayer over 65 can earn wages up to $2,350 without incurring a tax liability. However, final regulations on these provisions of the 1969 Act have not been issued and revisions may be made.

Two Bids Low For Fuel Oil

W. C. Mason, Inc. of Glaston bury and Tenneco Laurel Corp. of Hartford are the apparent low bidders on two grades of fuel oil for school and town buildings.

Mason submitted a bid of .0222 per gallon above the base price at New Haven for 180,000 gallons of No. 2 oil, approximately 41,000 gallons of which will be used in the schools. Tenneco Laurel bid .0095 per gallon above the New Haven base price or 503,000 gallons of No. 4 oil, all of it for school use.

Tenneco's bid on No. 2 was .0440, and Mason's on No. 4 was 0097. General Oil Co., Inc. of East Hartford bid .05 on No. 2, and .0197 on No. 4. None of the companies submitted bids on 430,000 gallons of No. 6 oil, all for school use.

required to come up with some program for insuring the safety of American passengers in American planes from international hi-jackery, what could you do better than the President's decision to have specially trained operatives riding shotgun on future overseas flights

It may be that the presence of profesdonal guards will intensify the danger to the innocent passengers. The instance in which the Israeli guards frustrated one commando attempt in the skies over Britain, even permitting themselves gun-Ire without causing disaster to the hole plane, must have involved either ectal skill or special good luck. On the 1. it may be that forenowledge of the probable presence of uards will keep hijackers away, and signal the beginning of the end of the practice

t, even if it works, all of us know that this is not really the way we want the issue resolved.

We do not want to have to spend $60,year, either out of fares or tax es, for such a negative purpose. We do not want to have to travel the rest of our lives under armed protection. This is not the kind of life or the kind of world we want to be in.

This is not the kind of life or the kind of world we want, yet it gets to be more and more, and plane travel is only one of the places where it is taking over. "Security" is the great of the day for political conantions, for sporting events, for the travel of public officials, for city streets, for meetings and lectures on and off campuses, and "security force" with or without uniform, public or private, is fastest growing professional lassification in our society.

What is happening is that we ourselves, for our own protection, are seekng refuge and safety in ever increasing police methods and mappower, not necessarily in uniform or wearing any official badge.

We are then, making ourselves into police state, not because we like the dea, not because somebody we might call fascist has been planning it that way, but because we feel we have to reach for some practical way of protecting ourselves from the increasing incidence of violence in our midst.

This would not, at first at least, be any police state fastened upon the people by an ambitions tyranny up above, but a shield the people have felt required to devise for themselves. The fact that we ourselves might have created it, for our own protection, would not protect us, in turn, against the future possibility that somebody hungry to control us-as well as the criminals - could not take over the whole apparatus and turn its trained personnel, from all our various security forces, into something to use to invade, rather than protect, our freedom and safety.

We ought to find some way to get away from the creation of new security forces, from increased deployment of shotguns in the name of order. Unless here is a better answer somewhere, he eventual guard will be for us, and we will be the ones looking into, not out over, the shotguns.

The Michael Huberman Theory To a people who have worshipped ducation in and for itself, as we Americans have, and who have lately reinforced our admiration for it by calculating out the differences it can make in a man's lifetime earnings, the suggestion of a British authority, Dr. Michael Huberman, is going to come as something of a shock.

Dr. Huberman resents the fact that so much heavy weight is given to formalized educational experience while there is no certified weight of any kind for learning that may have taken place outside institutions of education.

If he had his whimsical way, there would be no record, for prospective employers, which would distinguish those who dropped out of school from those who continued in school. In the absence of any such record, it would become the necessity of the employer to measure the actual abilities of those who applied for jobs instead of accepting the word of educational institutions.

And if people were hired purely on a basis of potential or proved merit, then, Dr. Huberman thinks, the length of a man's schooling would not necessarily be an index to the amount of his lifetime carnings.

Huberman would carry his theories forward into something even more heretical. If there is going to be public subsidy of individuals who want higher education. Dr. Huberman would also suggest subsidies for young men who wanted to make themselves apprentices in some trade, who wanted o do their own studying by themselves, or who wanted to start their career in life not by study at all but by purchasthemselves a small business to

His argument is that if there is subsidy going around, fairness demands that we stop restricting the subsidy to those who enter some formal educationinstitution One result of spreading the subsidy outside the school system might he to lessen the crush to get inside that system. In any case, Dr. Huberman denies any correlation between university grades and life achievement in any profession, and is clearly a heretic ... We should probably respect him and more if he had drop ped that "Dr." which is a mark and a label some educational institution has pinned on him, and had come to us as just Michael Huberman.

On Fish And Luck

Although fishermen vary from the ones who feel that a cane pole and a few hooks are adequate gear to those who they have at least two things in common -boundless enthusiasm for the sport and an unshakable belief in fisherman's luck Everyone knows what a tremendous role luck plays in the catch you make-why else does the fellow anchored next to you in the cove haul them in with startling regularity while you sit there feeling nubbed because they choose to ignore the assortment of tempting lures you of-

Do you have a favorite fishing hat that you've been guarding for years beause you know the whole venture might flop unless you wear it?

One small boy who catches a box full of bream each time he goes down to the pond assures me it's because he carefully spits on each worm before he tosses his line into the water. There's one school of thought that proclaims a Lucky 13 as essential equipment in any welloutfitted tackle box.

If your luck hasn't been up to par maybe you've been neglecting some of the more uncommon precautions practiced by fishermen in past centuries.

First of all, don't ever plan your outing for Friday. This is believed to be the most unlucky of all days for fishing. It's even considered bad luck to go out in a boat on this day. At one time, sailors objected so strongly to making Atlantic crossings that began on Friday the had to be adjusted to keep

It's bad luck for fishing to see a pig on your way to the lake, or even to mention the word. If you know a route where you are abolutely sure you won't run into any pigs, be sure to take it. If you should see one accidentally, you might as well go home and try another day. As an old hand at the game you probably know you should never change the name of your boat, and you must never under any circumstances point at a ship. There's an ancient safeguard you night use if you have qualms about your being swamped, Sailors and pirates of old believed that an earring was powerful protection against drowning. This explains the pictures we see in which ates wear hoop earrings.

Once you hook your first fish, don't let him get away. If the first fish is lost your whole trip will be unsuccessful. When you get that first bite, haul the monster in if you have to grab it with your bare lever count the fish you've caught.

This will put an end to your luck and you won't get any more attention, no matter what bait you use. When you've exhausted every possibil-

ty there's an old Scottish remedy you night try as a last resort. If you're havpositively rotten luck, throw one of ishermen in your party overboard then haul him in like a fish. This is supposed to start a trend. You probably won't have this man for a fishing partner again, but you may get a tremendous run of luck.

Now that you know what's been going wrong with your fishing trips, you're all set to go out and snag the most elusive specimen in the stream. No fish has a hance against such complete preparation to assure your luck. One other thing. Don't forget your fishing hat! -ANNE ABERNATHY IN THE NATION-AL. OBSERVER

An attorney for the West Haven board said that board is not "releasing its right to seek punishment for the six days already not worked." Wright said, "You may reserve your rights, but as I have indicated, I am looking more for schools' opening than I am for vengence."

luesday night New Haven PTA Council President Mrs. Phyllis Medvedow said her group had sent telegrams to negotiators for both sides, saying: "We cannot state strongly enough that the children of th city are being short changed by the inflexible demands of both groups. Only continuous nego-tiations will show that both groups are indeed sincere about ending the strike." Mrs. Ernestine Barnes, president of the Helene Grant School PTA in New Haven, said, "We feel the board of education is showing indifference to our chileducation by keeping school officially open under ab-normal conditions. The object for closing the schools is that days lost in real learning, due to the teachers strike, can be made up under normal classroom conditions. New Haven Schools Supt. Gerald Barbaresi said: "I think the

The guerrillas clashed again today with the army in Zarqa, with both sides firing heavy rockets and artillery. The guerrillas controlled the town, as they have for the past few weeks, with the army following its policy of staying in position on the town's outskirts.

The new government said in a proclamation that its primary objectives would be to end internal fighting, assist the Palestinian resistance movement, and implement cease-fire agreements between the government and the guerrillas.

The latest agreement calls for withdrawal of most army units from the cities in return for the removal of guerrilla roadblocks, an end to their armed presence in the streets, and other shows of guerrilla force seen by the government as provocative. It also replaces troops with police at embassies and public buildings in Amman, with guerrillas to be stationed outside the city's electric power station and other sites of recent fighting. Most of a dozen earlier agree ments were broken by the guer

Majali, 57, was formerly chief of staff and defense minister and recently acted as the king's military adviser. He is Jordan's highest ranking officer. A member of one of the largest of the fiercely royalist Bedouin tribes from the Jordanian desert, he was a cousin of Prime Minister Hazza Majall, assassinated by pro-Nasser elements in 1957.

It was significant that the king's new appointments did not explicitly include his uncle Nasser Ben Jamil, who was memoved as army com-mander under guerrilla pressure during the confrontation between the guerrillas and the army last June.

In accepting his new post, Maiali pledged "unswerving alle glance" to the king and the Hashemite throne.

Amman Radio announced the king had formed a military advisory group in the palace composed of outgoing Chief of Staff Mashour Haditha, divisional commanders and former army commanders, presumably in cluding Jamil.

There has been no official reaction from the guerrilla movement on the appointment of the new government, but the deep mistrust between the two sides was reflected in a guerrila broadcast urging the commandos to 'keep your fingers on the trigger and remain vigilant."

The military takeover had no direct link with the fate of air. line hijack hostages still held in secret locations by the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, one of the more ex-military rule. In an interview with a French newsman earlier this week he described the hijackings as "the shame of the Arab world."

MY JOB

What's going on in Connecticut anyhow? There's got to be something wrong, the way I see some Connecticut businesses packing up and moving out or expanding with new plants in other states. Am I going to have to worry about my job folding, too? I'm making it my business to make sure business in this state works. And grows. It just makes sense that if corporations have a chance to make a decent profit, I'm going to end up making more money. too. Send me any facts you have, right now, before it's too late.

He cites case histories of incompetents who have taught him or have been his coleagues. He cites examples of the idiocies which often accompany the writing of a doctoral ssertation-he had to try twice, succeeding at age 34. He describes the dodges used to meet the well known faculty dictum, "publish or perish." Having written several textbooks, he gives facts and figures on the financial outcome, which was unsatisfactory. He discussfoundation grants-he struck out five times in trying for a Juggenheim-and the problems they sometimes engender. In this little 111-page book O'Toole spills a lot of beans. It should prove of interest not only in academia, but also among any general readers who have rone to college and witnessed a few of the things he is talking Finally O'Toole offers a "soluthat what we need is "less education instead of more; less ed ucation in the interest of more civilization. What America needs is less knowledge, fewer facts, less professionalism, less skill, less efficiency, less progress. Will we get them? Not or

THE DICK. By Bruce Jay Friedman, Knopf. $6.95. "The Dick" is one of those books you can put down. In fact, we hadn't been persuaded that you shouldn't review books ou haven't read, we'd have put it down and never finished it.

"The Dick" resembles a long, ambling dream, in which reall y fades in and out and the "hero" doesn't walk but floats just above the ground, blown by every breeze, without a will of his own.

Kenneth LePeters, haracter, has a backburner job, pasting clippings for the homicide bureau of the New York Police Department. His suburban house is zoned so that his daughter is in an all-black school and that bothers his wife, but LePeters drifts and doe nothing about it, doean't feel anything about it. His wife has an affair with a movie maker who also has some peripheral connection with the police; Le-Peters isn't sure whether he's black or white. Again he does nothing and feels not much.

Perhaps LePeters is meant to be a modern-day wandering Jew, eternal victim. His name was Susaman until he changed it. That, and his title, are a coarse joke. Those the book doesn't bore, it can offend.

We've always noticed that the story of a dream is of chief interest to the person who had the dream. Mr. Friedman, ho hum Mary Campbel

The Buttlerflies of the Prov-ince. By Honor Tracy. Random. Miss Tracy's satirical nonsense is calculated to entertain the reader with its outrageous brashness and bizarre tone. This time she is writing about a little colony of English expatriates in Malaga, Spain, most of whom are dodging Brit-ish taxes and British living costs. They are indujent butterflies frittering away their lives in social frivolity. One of the principal characters has escaped the butterfly life by ignoring the determined invitations of the colony's social demon, a virago who stalks her victims. He is Robert Bolitho, a painter, who is trying to finish a series of abstractions for a oneman show in Paris. He is much upset by the arrival of his father, a retired physician who is fleeing the advances of a widow back home.

Upon this scene arrives one David Boone, last remnant of anristocratic line, who spooks about mysteriously-it turns out that he is trying to play bene factor to an ape-like urchin and introduce him into society; the results are crudely shocking. In one sense Miss Tracy's

UC Chancellor Keeps Tight Rein on Studies

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) -Chancellor Roger W. Heyns of the University of California has warned faculty members against relaxing teaching and classroom requirements, such as happened last spring when U.S. troops invaded Cambodia. A five-page document, distributed Tuesday, says "significant changes of either content or structure" in courses must be approved by a faculty committee set up for that purpose.

He warned against permitting course content being "deternined conclusively by a vote of students" or "allowing the course to be deflected from its intended aim by extra-academic pressures, political, social or other.' Heyns said only a few UC classes were changed in content for very long last spring, adding there will be no repetition. But, he said, there were disruptions "which strike at the

Mexican Independence Parade Ends in Riot

LOS ANGELES (AP) - A sheriff's deputy and two men were wounded by snipers, police say, when violence erupted after a Mexican Independence Day parade in the predominantly Mexican-American sector of East Los Angeles.

It was the second big disturbance there in three weeks. More than 2,000 youths pitching firebombs, rocks and bottles fought about 500 deputies and city policemen for almost five hours around a residential park Wednesday night. The youths said they were angered at "harassment" and "brutality" by deputies and attacked them "because we're tired of seeing Chicano blood on the boots of the ladrons," an epithet for police. Mike Licon, 20, Los Angeles, described by authorities as a demonstration spectator, was in critical condition from a bullet wound in the shoulder. Deputy James Woodruff and Ray Her nandez, 60, a parade monitor, were hospitalized in satisfactory condition with wounds in the arm and knee, respectively. Thirty others were injured in-
