BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) King Hussein ordered his army to cease fire as of 5:15 p.m. — 11:15 a.m. EDT — today while heavy fighting was reported continuing in northern Jordan.

The order was another in a succession of similar onesided cease-fire orders given to the Jordanian forces in the past three days and invariably broken.

In a broadcast over Radio Amman, the king said he was asking his soldiers to stop shooting in response to his conscience and historical responsibilities to enable the wounded to be treated and because of the grave situation created by the war.

In the north, the king's outnumbered forces were taking heavy casualties in battles with tanks from Syria at Irbid, Jordan's second largest city, Radio Amman reported.

Israeli military informants in Tel Aviv said they had received information that Irbid, about 50 miles north of Amman, had fallen to a force of Boviet-built tanks that entered Jordan on Sunday in the second of two thrusts from Syria.

The Jordanian broadcast said two brigades of tanks converged on Irbid in support of Palestinian guerrillas holding the city's center in the fifth day of their war against King Hussein's government in Amman.

By JOHN 8, LANG

WASHINGTON (AP) - The government has discovered that wingtips of the new jumbo jets are creating tornado-like winds in the sky capable of tearing apart light aircraft and hurling jetliners toward the ground.

The potential hazards of the funnel-shaped winds spinning off the wings of the 747s and CoA had been underrated, said Federal Aviation Administration officials familiar with a series of flight tests now being conclud-

The tests showed, for example, that the swirling winds trail behind the huge planes for many miles and do not readily dissipate at high altitudes. They disclosed, too, that the invisible turbulance can endanger passenger airliners as well as small

Because of the winds - called wake turbulence or wingtip vortices - the FAA has ordered a five-mile spacing at all times between the giant jets and aircraft weighing less than 300,000

There have been no cases reported of planes crashing after flying into the turbulance generated by the jumbo jets. However, records compiled by the National Transportation Safety Board from 1984 through

"If they fly into it just right they could go into a spin and lose control of the aircraft," he said. "The vortices are just like little tornadoes."

Sliff agrees the intensity of wind gusts in the core of the vortex is beyond the designed strength of light aircrfat, But he

"We don't think it is possible to encounter the direct force of the vortex. The plane would be thrown out of the vortex by the outer winds before it would be torn apart." This is disputed by a Safety

Board official who recalls that as far back as a dozen years ago a light plane was literally ripped apart in the air over Delaware when it struck the vortices of a jet bomber. The FAA measures the 747's vortex strength as 7,700 feet squared per second and the C5A's as 7,280 feet squared per second. Agency officials translate this to wind speeds of 80 to 90 miles per hour. The power of these vortices is nearly double that of the 707 jetliner which is listed in Safety

Board records as the generator of crash-causing turbulance in six cases in a three-year period. The vortex of the planned SST (supersonic transport) is estimated by the FAA at 11,200 feet squared per second- half again more powerful than that of the
