That Sudden "Cuban Crisis" Latest disclosures from Washington about the latest "Cuban crisis" 'reveal, once more, the pitiful powerlessness to which the mere people of even a democracy can be reduced. But otherwise, Washington now finds itself puzzled by the way the White House suddenly chose to seem to create a new Cuban crisis. Every time campus disruption goes up a few more points in opinion polls rank ing the most pressing national concerns, there is another flurry of handwringing in the press about how unfair it would b to make "the kids" a political issue. The final proof of Spiro Agnew's alleged demagogy, the handwringers suggest, is his daring to raise an issue the American people recently put higher in those polls than even the war in Vietnam.

James Reston now writes that in the fall campaign, the Republicans are going to tell us "that we should think about what is 'right' in the world and not what is 'wrong'; that it is red, white and blue; that optimism is better than pessimism; that honor is preferable to dishonor and order is better than disorder. In short, we are not going to be asked to deal with the great questions of the age but with the political problems of the Republican

For our money, and we sense that a great share of the American people agrees with us, Mr. Reston has written a pretty fair summary of the issues fac ing the nation. Pessimism, national self flagellation, disorder and violence are not symptoms of the national disease,

In fact, poverty is being reduced at an unprecedented rate. In fact, it is hard if

Now, we happen to agree that the Vice President could raise these concerns far less clumsily than he does. Even within the rhetorically permissive traditions of political combat, it seems to us, his case could use more intellectual content and less emotional string-twanging, a deeper understanding and relief from all the alliteration. But that is not the charge the critics level against him, for it would carry an implicit admission that he is ouching legitimate issues the critics is raising concerns that are taboo.

find painful. Rather, they suggest his sin There is also the practical matter, which the Vice President has been known to cite, of getting a hearing in-the media for such concerns if you treat them on a non-emotional plane. Many of them were discussed at an exceptionally high intellectual level earlier this year in Edward C. Banfield's book, "The Unheavenly City," which documented society's objective progress and argued that our problem is letting our expectations run wild. The book was launched amid publicity about Professor Banfield's position as head of the Adminis tration's task force on model cities, and eated by many commentators as a blueprint to Administration thinking. Conceivably some of the Administration's critics may be unaware of these tellectual underpinnings of its view of national problems, for despite the interest in "The Unheavenly City" in many nuarters, it was not reviewed in certain restigious newspapers, Instead, the month it appeared one found reviews of erry Rubin's "Do It: Scenarios of the ution," of "The Bust Book: What to Do Till the Lawyer Comes" by bombng-fugitive Kathy Boudin and her

The mindset they show is both a widespread and

American people, and expressing the concerns of the people is what demo cratic politics is all about. So you can argue over whether Mr. Agnew and other Republicans raise these concerns in the right way; you can wonder whether they have the right answers. Had the issue been taken to the courts, there could have been little doubt that the reapportionment arrived at so painfully after the famous one-mar one-vote court decisions would have been thrown out. Recent Supreme Court decisions have been in the direction of guidelines so stiff as to make the present Connecticut apportionment, on the basis of the 1960 census, seem like a burlesque. Within the same city of New Britain, for instance, the 1960 population of one district was 19 175, that of the next only 10,-274, that of another up to 19,144 This, by the theory of the oneman-one-vote decisions, was giving some New Britain people nearly twice as much voting power in the House of Repre-

Judgment had to be, at the time, that the only thing that let the federal courts approve such districting for the Connecticut house was the fact that even the courts themselves wer tired of trying to compel a jus apportionment, and preferred to be guided by the fact that ooth political parties appeared before them agreed upon the reapportionment scheme rather than by their own examination of the actual population figures

This hearing will be held on October 15, 1970 at 8:00 P.M. in the auditorium of the George J. Penney High School, 889 Forbes Street, East Hartford, Connecticut. It will be concerned with a section of Inter-state Route 84 from 200' plus or minus west of Simmons Road in East Hartford easterly to 400' plus or minus south of Spencer Strest in Manchester, a distance of approximately 2.9 miles, and a section of Interstate Route 86 from 0.4 plus or minus mile south north of West Middle Turnpike in Manchester, a distance of approximately 2.6 plus or minus miles. Included in this project are the connecting roadways for interchanging traffic between these two intersecting highways. This hearing will be concerned with the Department's recommended design plan, as well as the acqui-sition of certain park land consisting of approximately 19.5 plus or minus acres of Veterans Memorial Park located in the Town of more particularly shown on a photogrammetric map dated June 12, 1970 entitled "Interstate 84 and Interstate 86, East Hartford and Manchester," at a scale of 1"=300" which is on display in the offices of the Town Clerks of East Hartford and Manchester. The proposed use of park land, as herein before described is for a portion of the right-of-way for the widening of Interstate 8s, which is a Connecticut highway project authorized by the General Statutes of Connecticut. The reasons for the proposed taking of said park land rather than other land are to facilitate adequate provision for efficient highway operations, to harmonise with local area planning objectives, to minimize the taking of homes and places of employment and to secure the most efficient utilization of public funds.

More detailed information and plans developed by the Connecticut Department of Transportation—Bureau of Highways are available for public inspection or copying in Room 234 at the Bureau of Highways office at 24 Wolcott Hill Road in Wethersfield, Monday through Friday, 8:30 A.M. to 4:30 P.M. through Friday, 8:30 A.M. to 4:30 P.M. In addition to the discussion of the proposed layout and acquisition of said open space lands, relocation assistance programs, as well as tentative schedules for rights-of-way acquisition and construction will be discussed at the public hearing.

Written statements or exhibits concerning this project may be submitted, either at the time of the public hearing, or may be mailed or delivered to the Connecticut Department of Transportation—Bureau of Highways office in Wethersfield until October 29, 1970.
