Advice Not Taken

would almost accuse Genera Charles de Gaulle, famous for his ability to draw lessons from history, of using hindsight to embellish some of his own

This temptation comes when one reads what he now says, in his memoirs, he said to our President Kennedy, about Vietnam, back in 1961.

But General de Gaulle is safe from any such doubt. At the very moment he was being so wise and foreseeing about American policy in Vietnam, he himself was engaged in liquidating the intolerable French position in Algeria, and taking France out of the same tind of position he warned America against entering in Vietnam.

The de Gaulle wisdom of 1961 is good enough to be repeated. What he now says she told President Kennedy then went as

"For you, intervention in this region will be an entanglement without end. From the moment that nations have awakened, no foreign authority, what ever its means, has any chance of imposing itself on them. You are going to see this. For, although you find officials who, by interest, agree to obey you, the are not calling for you. "The ideology that you invoke will not change anything. Even more, the masses will confuse it with your will to exert power. This is why the more you commit yourself against Communism the more the Communists will appear to be champions of national independence, the more they will receive help and, first of all, that which comes from despera-

"We French have experienced this. You Americans wanted, yesterday, to take our place in Indochina, You now want to assume our succession to rekindle a war that we ended. I predict to you that you will, step by step, become sucked into a bottomless military and political quagmire despite the losses and expenditure that you may squander. "What you, we and others should do in this unfortunate Asia is not to substitute ourselves for states on their own soil but to give them what they need to get out of poverty and humiliation which are, there as elsewhere, the causes of totalitarian regimes. I say this to you in the name of our West."

There is even more trony in this disclosure than appears in the news reports from Paris, For President Kennedy was the same individual who, as Senator making his way toward the Presidential nomination, had added to his own American prestige by delivering thoughtful, and impressive speeches on the Algerian question, in which he recommended the courageous kind of sanity General de Gaulle finally displayed there. But even though he could deliver advice to the French about Algeria, he couldn't accept similar French advice to us about Vietnam, and was himself party and authority to the first open escalation of our own armed presence

Good advice lives better in the memoirs of statesmen than in deeds.

The Sale Of Names
Not merely the Connecticut Department of Motor Vehicles, but a number of federal agencies, a Wall Street Journal survey discloses, indulge themselves in the business of selling people's names to various commercial enterprises who want to get themselves mailing lists

One purchaser was the Firearms Lobby of America, which keeps working against the passage of gun control measures by Congress.

Another purchaser was a group called

"Citizens Against Tydings," which meant that somebody was planning to use the list to reach votes in Maryland, where the gun lobby is gunning for Senator Tydings in his reelection campaign. Aside from such revelations, there is another reason why there may develop considerable support for Congressional action to ban the practice of selling lists of names. This is a practice which makes possible a lot of that junk mail which crowds the nation's delivery systems, at rates so low the public is subsidizing its own nuisance.

Both results, the sale of names to spe cial commercial or political interests, and the clogging of the mails with unwanted solicitation argue that govern ment, either in Hartford or in Washington, should be forbidden a practice which brings in only a pittance of re turn to government itself, and which amounts, in the end, to an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy.

After The Teacher Strikes New Haven's first experience with full-fledged teacher strike, and the rash of walkouts that occurred in other school systems in Connecticut the past month, give rise to many disturbing questions concerning the new role of unionism in the education field. New teacher attitudes-aggressive, demanding, belligerent, almost down to the level of the common brawler-also give

Is it too late to argue the illegality of the teacher strike? It would seem so.

Despite a specific prohibition in law the strike as a teacher weapon is a fait accompli. Teacher walkouts were an indisputable reality those opening weeks of school, and at that point the issue of lawbreaking was taking second place to an overriding wish to restore normalcy to the schools. Each outbreak created an intolerable situation, but in the end i seemed in many respects more condon ed than condemned - by school administration, by community, by the court, rise for community concern.

The role of the court has been a curiously unsatisfactory one. True, to tail union leaders or masses of teachers on the spot would have been counterpro ductive. In the New Haven and West Ha ven cases, though penalities of a mild or der had been imposed, the court was understandably reluctant to act in a manner that would have jeopardized negotiations or prolonged the walkouts It had even, perhaps unwisely, sought to act as mediator itself. At that, though teachers are back, not all issues are settled. Under the circumstances, the business of the court may have been simply the pplication of legal pressure to bring about settlement. The consequence, how ever, is a looking aside at the violation of the teacher strike ban, a response that can only lead to the law becoming total ly ineffectual. Teachers won a long-sought concession when the General Assembly granted them the right to collective bargaining five years ago. But the law that did this Iso forbade them to strike. The consequence of collective bargain-ng has been to spawn a new-militancy among the teachers. Union leadership has turned strident and bellicose. It has made full and ample use of the collective bargaining provision of the law, but has decided to ignore the companion nostrike dictate. The teachers want to play the game their own way.

Mayor Zarnowski's threat to resign over the school calendar issue in West Haven may seem overly dramatic, but t tends to point up the attitude being displayed by teachers toward the strike. In manding that the school year, in effect, begin with their return to work, the eachers are not only seeking implicit recognition of their "right" to strike, but are attempting to escape any economic loss for having taken that step. The new militancy as exhibited during the New Haven strike gives rise to pressing questions concerning the rights of those teachers who still adhere to standarr's of professionalism and believe their responsibility is in the classroom and not the ket line. In a shocking display of rowdvism, picketing union members subjected such teachers to unheard of abuse. But more serious is the question the New Haven Federation, as bargaining agent for all teachers, deprived them of a voice in ejecting them, with much invective, from a meeting. The

Federation may have abused its position with this action There were objections when The Register commented last spring tha Federation officials appeared to act like bullnecked boiler room scufflers," but sadly this characterization more than stood up in such violent words as that of President Leak: "When you see these people crossing your picket lines, break their legs in 21 places.' Teacher walkouts can no more be tolerated than a strike by police, firemen or any other essential service. The con sequences run deep and are measured in terms of human values, not lost produc tion in a plant. In staying off their jobs teachers do not merely violate State law. but they dishonor their own dedication and principles. Yet we have teacher strikes and we can undoubtedly look to more of the same in the future. Mediation and arbitration procedures must be improved and in all probabilpy will be improved in the next legislative session. But this won't be all that's needed. The teacher union movement needs to come out of dark ages of the labor era - NEW day night at 8 at Dillion Stadi um. After Saturday's game, the Knights will be on the road for three straight weeks, not re turning home until Nov. 7th against Bridgeport. This week the Knights are re turning home from a heartbreaking 37-28 loss to Bridge port. The defeat dropped the Knights to third place in the Northern Division with a 3-2 record. Bridgeport is on top with a 4-1 mark. The Jersey Tigers are currently lodged be tween the Jets and the Knights, as their record stands at 3-1 having played one less game. Thus, a Hartford win could find the Knights back in first place as Bridgeport faces the unde feated Pennsylvania Firebirds, defending ACFL champions The Firebirds are currently 4-0 and atop the Southern Division. The Tigers have Ken Carpenter, former Oregon University great who starred with the Cleveland Browns and later in Canadian football, as their head coach. Carpenter led the In-
