Cong Flags Allowed In Connecticut

(TWENTY-EIGHT PAGES-TWO SECTIONS)

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) - A ederal judge issued a temporary restraining order today which will permit a group of students to display Viet Cong flags during a planned demonstration Friday when Vice President Agnew arrives in Hartford. The order by Judge M. Joseph Blumenfeld of U.S. District Court restrains city and state officials from arresting or prosecuting those who display the Viet Cong flags.

The ruling came on a suit filed Wednesday by two University of Connecticut law students who who said they wanted the right to wave a Viet Cong flag when Agnew comes to Hartford for a GOP fund-raising dinner.

They were challenging 1919 "red flag" law, which outlaws the display of the "red flag or any other emblem as a symbol ... to incite disorders or breaches of the law." Lindsay Chooses For Lindsay The cynical observers of New York's gubernatorial campaign, on being informed of Mayor John Lindsay's recent action, might well question: "How in the world did he manage to make a choice?"

For, in many respects, Governor Nelson Rockefeller and Democratic Nominee Arthur J. Goldberg have, in their campaigning, been offering not much more than a masterful demonstration of poll-watching, bagel-snatching, and diaper-changing.

When, in spite of the negative aspects of the choice presented by the two campaigns being waged, Mayor Lindsay, a registered Republican, somehow managed to ignore the fact the Governor Rockefeller does at least possess a record of actual and impressive accomplishments in office, and come out for the Democrat seeking his first elective office, the elemental deduction is that he must have found some unusual kind of reason.

His own explanation was that his decision was "based on principles more important than party."

Governor Rockefeller's explanation that the union between Lindsay and Goldberg represented "a political marriage of convenience."

The editorial comment of the New York Times took a look at the possibility that the Mayor had made his choice purely with the object of getting better treatment for the city from the state in the future, but then made the following somewhat enlightening observation:

"Confidence that Mr. Lindsay had made this his test might be more complete if the political consequences for the Mayor had not come in for so much discussion in connection with his encyclopedic search for outside guidance."

What such political consequences for the Mayor might be was illustrated, soon after his decision was announced, by the statement of Democratic National Chairman Lawrence F. O'Brien, welcoming the announcement as the potential first step in Mayor Lindsay's "conversion" to the Democratic party.

Such a "conversion," it might be speculated, could only become full and total in case the Democratic party happened to be looking for an Ivy League liberal nominee in 1972 or 1976.

The possibility of such a role may or may not have been the key motivation in the mayor's decision. It would seem certain to be the key result, in the event, that is, that his endorsement should seem to help produce an upset victory for Goldberg.

As he contemplated his decision, Mayor Lindaay could not help noticing that the Democratic party stands wide open in need of some kind of presidential candidate.

These are times in which normal political patterns seem to have lost some of their traditional meaning and significance and appeal, and when there seems to be in process a blind search for some reshuffling of labels and individuals which might restore the public faith in the political process. No one at this stage of Mayor Lindsay's game can say, then, that it is doomed to failure and rejection. He may be on the way to becoming a national leader.

Meanwhile, however, it does seem safe to judge that his decision was not so much for Goldberg over Rockefeller, or for New York City in itself, as it was a decision about his own political future. MANCHESTER EVENING HERALD, MANCHESTER, CONN., THURSDAY, OCTOBER 22, 1970

That would be his privilege, but hardly an entitlement to a universal salute to his nonpolitical devotion to principles.

Ecological Fires?

It should not pass unnoticed that some ecological experts think that the terrible fires which, last September, raged through 200,000 acres of watershed and forest in the San Diego region of Califorina may have been a blessing in ds-

Such a burning off of the existing vegetation and tall grass offers an unplanned, unscheduled return to systems of land management which used to exist in the past, The early Californians, for instance, kept the wild grass down by pasturing cattle on it. And the Indians, it is being remembered, kept the countryside healthy by periodic burning which kept the accumulation of incendiary growth at controllable levels.

What has happened since the Indians and since the cattle has been the unmanaged abandonment of the California hinterlands to such an extent that, when a fire comes now, it is likely to destroy the biggest trees as well as consume the undergrowth, and, of course, likely to billow to such proportions that it engulfs human dwellings instead of passing around them.

Along with its disaster, then, the San Diego September holocaust brought an opportunity for human management to try to begin to take at least as good care of the hinterlands as the Indians did, with a modern ecology which may include, standards of air pollution permitting, a revival of the ancient practice of controlled burning.

A Worthwhile Proposal

In running for office in Eastern Connecticut, it is difficult to come up with a rational and creative idea of how to benefit the district in a way that will also benefit the country.

For that reason, Bob Steele, Repubican candidate for Congressman in the Second District, has an impressive idea n seeking to make Eastern Connecticut an oceanography center of the United

First of all, the concept builds on a sting know how and expertise. In the London area, are located the Navy's Underwater Sound Laboratory the Naval Submarine base. Electric Boat, the Coast Guard Academy, and a branch of the University of Connecticut that is involved in the area of marine ecology.

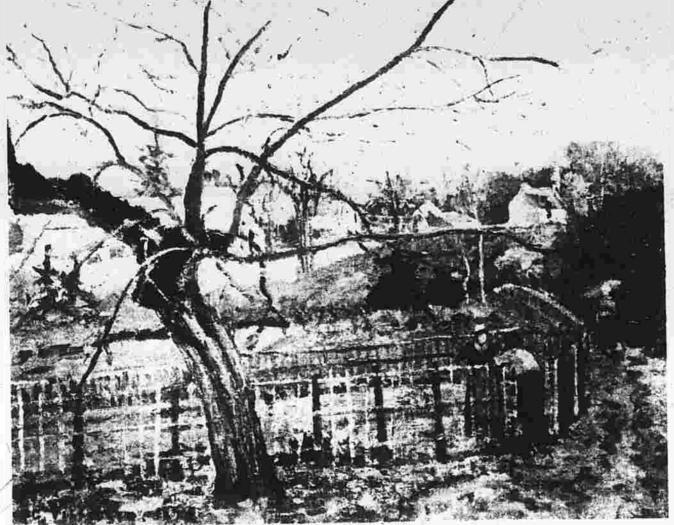

Second, oceanographic development i an area that the United States should for a variety of reasons take the lead in exploring. As Steele notes, the concept has a great potential for private industry for commercial development over the next 30 years are immense. A recent article in the Harvard Business Review noted that the hundreds of companies now involved in ocean exoration can only maintain their rate of estment if the government makes more money available to them in terms of added research spending and if they can foresee a profit. The authors said "It is generally agreed that the United States must maintain its position of exellence in technology and continue developing its technological base, or its days of leadership, security and affluence are numbered. But one of the most mportant new technological frontiers the oceans - is getting only a fraction of the attention it should be getting from industrial, scientific and governments organizations. When the oceanographic programs of Russia and certain other ries are examined, the current lack of U.S. progress is alarming." While it seems likely that Eastern

Connecticut could only share in the governmental investments-because underwater scientists like to work in warmer climes, and because other areas are ompeting for similar attention, nonetheless this is a fast-growing industry. Hayden-Stone in a 1968 survey said that oceanography is already a $7 billion-ayear business and will become three times as big in 10 years. Because only five per cent of the 140-million-squaremile ocean has been explored, and virtually all of that in relatively shallow offshore waters, it is quite possible that New London could become a major station for exploratory underwater vehicles Indeed, the Navy has already ordered the first research submarine (with wheels) and it is being built by General

In such areas as underwater prospecting, mining, food resources development, marine pharmacology and medicine, shipping and navigation, and the forecasting of weather and climate, lie the great explorations of the future-all underwater. As E. W. Seabrook Hull. editor of Ocean Science News, has exlained, it is necessary to keep in mind he laws of ocean economics: "While rising demand squeezes traditional supplies and pushes their prices up, a rapidly developing technology is pushing down the cost of working oceanic resources. When-ever these rising-price and lowering-cost curves cross, man turns to the sea. This appened hundreds of centuries ago with food, sponges, red coral, pearls and salt evaporated from seawater. More recently, it has happened with petroleum, sulfur, magnesium, iodine, fluorine, coal iron, tin, calcium carbonate (sea shells as raw material for cement), sand, gravel and others." And we can expect

While other well developed institutions such as the Scripps Institute of Ocean-ography on the West Coast, and the Woods Hole (Mass.)Oceanographic Institution, are mature institutions which will continue to grow, it should also be possible for Eastern Connecticut to win a share of the development of the ocean sciences. For that reason, the Steele proposals are well worth talking about. MIDDLETOWN PRESS.

A Thought for Today Sponsored by the Manchester Council of Churches

It is about time that we realized that crime in our day is not at all a problem confined t our slums and ghettos. Some of crime's worst manifestation are to be found in suburban areas filled with middle-class homes.

Apologies for bad morals and anti-social behaviour by young people have become a social blight. Most of the young people today who get into trouble with the law come from betterthan-average homes. There is a need to re-examine the moral influence of our homes and, al the same time, to include the churches.

Has truth, honesty , virtue, decency any relevance to religion? What standards of decency do we have? We are told that the increase in the number of sex crimes in our day is due precisely to sex literature madly presented in certain magazines. Filthy literature is the great moral wrecker of our day. It is creating criminals faster than jails can be built. What standards of decency do you have in your home? The seed we are sowing in our homes and churches, through lack of moral idealism and re-Helous conviction, will not produce a glorious harvest. Chaplain Russell E. Camp

"Our Ralph Nader?" To the Editor. I'm very impressed by Ned Coll, who is an Independent running for the U.S. Congress from Greater Hartford. Coll's efforts are obviously geared to serve, not the machine, but the public -all sectors of the public. He's endeavoring to bring together in real dialog all diverse groups of people, whether they agree or differ, since he wants to "end the war in America, too" and build a more fruitful society for duce "American Flagship," a all of us. This is a healthy aim. Coll says he plans, as U.S. Congressman, to open 13 field offices (in the 1st District) that "will be geared to hear citizen criticism as well as suggestions on the necessary programs and ideas the nation needs." I sounds to me as if he could be our Ralph Nader of politics! _____

We base our guesses about how the Connecticut gubernatorial race is going to go three factors.

The first, which should, in an ideal functioning of the demo-cratic process, be the only factor which counts at all, con. cerns strictly state issues. The most important state issue is that of sound, equitable finan cial management. Aiming for that is going to be a complicat ed, difficult task for whatever candidate and party take office in January. So far as the cam paign has gone, the situation has been that both candidate for Governor shrink away fro binding themselves irrevocab to any of the more unpleasa and difficult aspects of what it is going to take to keep the state running for the next two years. If there is this some thing of an inconclusive stan if between the candidates so far as the crucial specifics future state policy are concern ed, that leaves the voters the state back with their own generalized instincts. Simply on basis of time and the histor cally normal cycles of politics the Republicans should be th beneficiaries of some instinct toward a change. The second factor importan n the Connecticut guberna torial race is one which has no real right to any importance at all. It is the factor of the national political atmospher It involves what people think of the present leadership in the White House, and how people react to its handling of issues of war and peace, inflation an unemployment, civil libertie and law and order. In the present campaign, bar-ring some last minute burst of charisma by either candidate, i seems to us that Congressman Meskill opened with, and has maintained, a mild advantage in the realm of that personalit chemistry which determine the instinctive reaction of the chromosomes of the electorate

Our analysis finds a plus bal ance for the Republican candi date in all three campaign fac tors. If he, or his party, or his President, can refrain from somehow booting away this advantage between now and election day, we expect him to win by, something not very far, either way, from 70,000 votes.

government task group fighting corruption which wants these alien illegals-mainly American, South Korean, Indian, Filipino and stateless civilians-kicked out of Vietnam.

The Vietnamese government which expresses its concern about the black market and corruption has been reluctant to deport even those who are known, such as the Indian "merchants" who account for an estimated 70 per cent of all illegal money ransactions,

Inevitably, this lack of action suggests to some American authorities that certain key Vietnamese officials must be (1) cut in on the black market and smuggling profits, or (2) accepting bribes to look the other way. Reporting confidentially to high U.S. officials, the government's Interdepartmental Action Task Group-IATG-estimated that what it called "an illegal community" includes about 10,000 "third country nationals" and some 5,000 Americans, both civilians and military deserters. Most are said to live in the Saigon area amid a refugee-

Nudist Allowed Right to Apply For Police Duty

BALTIMORE (AP) - A federal judge has ruled that a man seeking employment on the city nolice force may not be excluded because of his membership in a nudist organization.

Chief Judge Edward S. Northrop of the U.S. District Court described as "arbitrary and capricious" the rejection of John I. Bruns III, 30, who placed first on a civil service list when he applied to the police department

14 months ago. In a ruling handed down Wednesday, Northrop ordered Police Commissioner Donald I Pomerleau to accept Bruns as a probationary officer within sevn days. He said the commissioners'

"bare allegations" were insufficient grounds for refusing to hire nudists and that the decision not to hire Bruns infringed his constitutional right of free association.

Authorities said Bruns was rejected for fear of public criticism, the belief that he would have difficulty handling indecent exposure and pornography cases, and his inability to carry sidearms 24 hours a day as required in departmental regula-

Northrop ruled, however, that Bruns' membership in Pine Tree Associates in Crownsville, Md., "in no way intrudes upon the public's sensibilities," noting that other members of the nudist club include an Army general, an Air Force colonel and two policemen. The judge also said Pomer leau failed to demonstrate that a nudist is not of sufficient moral character to hold a position of public trust. The sidearms requirement "if literally enforced . . . would prevent a member of the polic force from participating in any swimming or water activity,' Northrop held.

TOLLAND TPKE. - TALCOTTVILLE

This year, everybody's introducing a new economy car.

"Volkswagen-sized." "Volkswagen-priced." So not to be outdone, we've done the same. Except, of course, we didn't have to start from scratch. For years, while everybody else has been jumping from model to model and worrying about looks, we've stuck with our original and improved the way it works. And so today, while ours may not look like the newest economy car, it's the most developed.

It's the only one with a sealed steel bottom. To protect its insides against just about everything outside, including time. The only one with an air-cooled magnesium-alloy engine. To eliminate boiling over and freezing up. And the only one with a free electronic diagnostic system. To spot problems early and help extend its life. Best of all, compared to all the new domestic "Volkswagen-priced" cars introduced this year, ours costs about $200 less.

So even if it doesn't look the newest, maybe now it looks the best.

Strategy For Drugs Crisis

Speaking to a group of teen-aged "People for Sadlak," Anoni Sadlak, Republican candidate for state representative from Vernon offered a fourpoint attack against the drug

Sadlak told the young people that he understands both sides of the drug problem because he has worked with drug users and he knows how extensive the inderground is in every town. Sadlak's four points include: research, education, rehabilitation and enforcement of control laws. He said, "We must learn more about the physical and psychological dangers of both hard and social drugs. We must teach parents, students and teachers to recognize the symptoms. We , must make help available when users come looking for doctors, social workers, hospital beds and crash nouses. We must enforce laws and insist on heavy penalties for runners and pushers." He warned that everyone must learn that turning on can mean turning off, permanently. "If drugs are a runaway from problems, let's get together and solve the problems. Not knock ourselves apart trying to patch up mistakes," Sadlak said. Sadlak told the teenagers and their parents, "It is not enough to say we are for drug controls. We must also talk of where the money is coming from, how we are going to train teachers and counselors, who is to administer the overall program and be responsible when things go wrong." Above all, when talking about the problem on the school level, we must keep in mind that it is the students who mus make the ultimate decision Our job is to help these people to help themselves," Sadlah curb replacement cost is quick v escalated. The photos at right and below illustrate a pressure concret curb repair program. This repair method is costing approxmately $1.80 per lineal foot and t does not damage the abutting Theoretically, con sidewalk. crete applied this way has a lower moisture content and a great er "in place" density than conventionally poured concrete. These characteristics are need ed to resist "spalling."

The process involves placing hand mixed sand and cement into a pressurized vessel. This material is pneumatically conveyed, with the help of an air ompressor, to a nozzle ("gun"). The nozzle is also supplie through a separate hose, with water. The nozzle-man regulates the moisture content using his right hand to control the amount of water in the mix. The nozzleman skillfully regulates the water - cement ratio in order to build up the "spalled" curb. He is followed by a team of cement finishers who shape and trowel the new concrete.

As with any program there are risks involved. Will this concrete withstand the threat of de-icing chemicals? Will the old and new concrete surfaces form permanent bond? Will the blow blades chip the new curb out? Will the extreme cold of winter cause differential contraction and hence a failure at the interface?

The Town Engineering Division has determined through correspondence with Engineer-Officials in Montreal and Verdun, Canada, that, based on pressure concrete curb work they had undertaken in 1967, none of these fears were valid. Director of Public Works William O'Neill feels that the economics - as much as 300% - dictated that the savings Town of Manchester try pressure concrete repair. The process is widely used for retoring concrete culverts, bridges, and dams. New swimning pools are often built with pressure concrete. Using presconcrete on curbs will place greater demands upon the concrete. A few Connecticu winters will test the acceptal ty of this type of repair. This year's program covered about two miles of curb repair.

Drugs are a big scary problem. We don't know enough about them. We don't understand why our young people turn to them. We hardly know how to discuss it with them.

One thing we do know: Community Chest agencies have a lot to do with providing a better alternative to drugs. The YMCA', YWCA, Boy and Girl Scouts, Boys' Clubs, Neighbor hood Centers - and the many agencies providing health and family counseling services - all work to solve the underlying problems that lead to drugs, offering a better way, a better future to work for. The resulting bitterness shifted most of the political interest to the Senate race, but its ramifications have spilled over to the gubernatorial contest and Daddario, rated the state's most lib eral congressman, is suffering. This isn't to say Meski hasn't contributed to Daddario's discomfort. He has strengths o his own-an Irish-American in a state where that ethnic group is strong has had a tradition of po litical influence; a conservative where being a liberal may no be as strong an asset as in the past, and a record of taking advantages of opposition disunity. Meskill may not have any more flair on the platform than Daddario, but he has a reputation for being blunter and for using the language in more sim nle fashion.

Meskill also got help from on high when President Nixon made an appearance earlier this month on behalf of Meskill and the GOP senatorial candidate, Lowell P. Weicker,

The issue in the race is Connecticut's economy. The unem ployment rate is high, the state's traditional industria base is stagnant and the budge is headed toward a predicted $190 million deficit.

Although Daddario blames the policies of the Republican White louse for the state's fiscal ills. Meskill seems to have made up ground on the issue. In their 16 years of statehouse control, Meskill says, the Democrats have failed to expand the Connecticut economy from its defense industry orientation "We have a crushing deficit in

RE:

MY JOB

What's going on in Connecticut anyhow? There's got to be something wrong, the way I see some Connecticut businesses packing up and moving out or expanding with new plants in other states. Am I going to have to worry about my job folding, too? I'm making it my business to make sure business in this state works. And grows. It just makes sense that if corporations have a chance to make a decent profit, I'm going to end up making more money, too. Send me any facts you have, right now, before it's too late.

But to millions of underfepersons living in overcrowded and underdeveloped lands, the Green Revolution" is truly the staff of life. It is chapate to a hungry Indian peasant, tortillas to a Mexican and rice to an Indonesian. It has created social unrest and toppled political leaders.

Agricultural economist Lester R. Brown goes a step further in assessing its significance. "The technology represented by these new seeds will probably affect more people in a shorter period of time than any technologica change in history."

If the peoples of the world can learn to curtail their birth rate. Brown adds, the new grains "hold out hope that we can make substantial progress i eliminating hunger in most of the world in this decade.' It was in recognition of this achievement-and its prospects for eliminating starvatio around the globe-that the Nobel Peace Prize was awarded this week to Dr. Norman E. Borlaug, the former Iowa dirt farmer who pioneered development of the new strain of super wheat. The breakthrough en abled agronomists in 1962 to repeat the performance with rice. In the last five years, the new grains have revolutionized agriculture in many underdeveloped countries. To most Americans, though, the question remains: What are the new grains? Essentially, they are rede signed wheat and rice plants about half as tall as traditional varieties. The shorter stem per mits farmers to heavily fertilize the plants and double the yield. Attempts at heavy fertilization of the traditional long, thinstemmed varieties failed because the heavy head of grain caused the plant to topple over In addition, the new strains proved adaptable to a wide varlety of climates. yield of these dwarf grains is truly astounding. One leading agricultural expert said the super grains have "added a conservative 20 million tons of cereal grains to the Asian food worth All this has come about in five years. Only 200 acres of super wheat and rice were under cu tivation in Asia in 1965. In 197 more than 40 million acres o the new strains were being cul tivated. In 1965, for example, India wheat crop totaled 12 million tons. With the introduction of super wheat, the total rose to 21 million tons in 1970-an increase of 75 per cent. West Pakistan, a traditional importer of grain, is now an exporter of both wheat and rice. Even more encouraging is the comparison of food production and population expansion in Asia. In the mid 1960s, food pro duction was increasing at an an nual rate of 1.6 per cent while the population increased by 21/2 per cent a year. New land to raise more crops was rapidly diminishing. Widespread famines were predicted.

Today, however, food produc tion is increasing at 3 to 5 per cent a year while the birth rate remains nearly the same. But the increasing amount of food has also brought about social unrest. Farmers have doubled, tripled and, in some cases quadrupled their income. The gap between rich and poor is in (See Page Two)
