goodby today to Charles de-Gaulle. In the magnificence of Notre Dame Cathedral, yet with the simplicity he ordained, world leaders joined thousands of Parisians at an austere Mass concluded with the Magnificat.

De Gaulle's body was not at this church of Our Lady, where the tall general once celebrate the liberation of Paris from th legions of Adolf Hitler, T body, remained at the home village where he lived and died And there, a few hours later, i was committed to the soil France.

Great crowds had gathered at the village of Colomboy les Deux Eglises, but a simple burial in a country churchyard replaced the military pomp that DeGaulle had rejected for the final ritual.

Nonetheless scores of world leaders, including President Nixon, made the Notre Dame service the greatest such gathering since the funeral of Dwight D. Eisenhower 19 months ago. And the bells o cathedrals and churches all over France sounded a requiem cooperation of other town Dr. Frederick Spaulding, commission chairman, appoint-ed Mrs. Theresa Parla and Harry Maidment, commission members, to be a committee to organize the collection, to find depot in town where people can leave bottles they have saved, to discuss the project with organisations working with con-servation and town departments and officials, and to arrange truck transportation to the Glass Container Corp. in Dayville which buys bottles and pieces of glass.

Several women in town have started saving bottles for recycling, Mrs. Parla reported. Bottles and jars should be empty and have no wires on them. Green, brown and clear glass should be kept in separate containers. Maidment, who is also a scout eader, said he will discuss the reader, said he will discuss the proposed bottle project with boy and girl scout leaders. Miss Leale Green, speaking for the Manchester Youth for Conservation at a Conservation Forum last month, said her group plans to collect bottles doorsto-door door-to-door. Scientists, engineers and conservationists in the nation, in-cluding many in town, have become increasingly concerned with the waste of natural resources, the disposal of solid waste and the need to retrieve reusable materials. The Clean Water Revival Committee of the Manchester Jaycees presented its long range recommendations for the Hocknum River to the commission. The commission, after a mo-tion by Maldment which was seconded by Fred Sweet, voted manimously to back the recom-mendations. They include: A ontest for landscape students for a park; giving an award to the best existing treatment of the river; developing Union Pond into a recreation area; holding another townwide river clean-up; sponsoring a hike around Union Pond in the spring; and increasing the coordination with the Connecticut Department of Agriculture and Natural Resources regarding the availab ity of funds. Edward Bates, Jeffrey Keith, Donald Brown and Joseph Law-ler, all from the Jaycees, dis-cussed their plans with the com-mission. After Bates said he did mission. After bates said he did not wish to duplicate work being down by the commission, Leslie Buckland, one of its member, reassured the Joycse's that there was so much to be done. The Clean Water Revival Committee meets every week and has provided manpower for sev-eral pond and river cleanup projects, Bates reported. Dr. Spaulding reported that he has talked with John F. Jackson, head librarian of Manchester Public Libraries, about showing conservation films in the libraries. Plans for the presentations have not been completed. The commission agreed to support stricter regulations on junk yards, drive-in restaurants and car washes that have been proposed by the Planning and Zoning Commission. The commission postponed the election of officers until its next meeting which will be held Wednesday, Dec. 9, at 7:30 p.m.-in the 8th District Firehouse. Decision By Refusal To Decide Some things our Supreme Court, which our naive fancy may believe exists in order to resolve all conceivable constitutional questions on their merits and according to the law, insists on deciding questions without examining their merits or the law.

This is the way it has been with regard to the legality of the war in Vietnam, and with regard to the allied question of whether or not Americans taking part in the planning for and the action of that war could conceivably be classified as war criminals under the terms of the Nuremberg laws this nation helped establish, and therefore presumably accepted for itself, after the Second World War.

These are questions the Supreme Court consistently sweeps under the rug, refusing to let them be tried. The nearest the Court does come to hearing them is when it permits an argument before it as to whether or not it should consent to hear such a case. Recently, it did permit the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, which formally sought an opportunity to argue the unconstitutionality of the war in Vietnam, to argue that the Court should grant such an opportunity. At the same time the Justice Department of the federal government, which is conducting that war, was allowed to argue why the Court should not hear such a case.

Now the Court has voted, six to three, in favor of not hearing the case. This verdict, that the case shall not be heard, does not necessarily mean that, if the case were heard, the vote in favor of the legality of the war would be six to three. The one guaranteed unity of the six was that they didn't want the Court letting itself get involved in a procedure which might have to end up, if the law were followed, by having the Court forbid its own country to conduct a war already in progress.

Similarly, the Court has consistently over the years, refused to involve itself in the highly important moral question of whether citizens of the United States are under the injunction laid down by the Nuremberg laws - the injunction to refuse, on pain of being declared war criminals themselves some day, their cooperation to what they might consider an unjust war.

The refusal of the Court to hear such matters may well be an indication that the Justices are afraid that, if such cases were permitted, the law might have to be found to go against the actions and policies of their own coun-

When, in such a situation, they avail themselves of the device of refusing to hear such cases, the result is that they let present practice stand without having to give any reasons for their decision. It is a decision which is given by a refusal to decide.

The powerful irony is, of course, that the verdict we refuse to give to ourselves on our own actions is a verdict we did not hesitate to give to our enemies in World War II, once we had them in our possession and got around to creating law against war which we then imposed on them retroactively.

We ought, some day, even in our highest Court, develop both the honesty and the courage to satisfy our own curiosity, even if the probable result would be that we would renounce our own law and our own principle.

Champion Job Makers

The Labor Department down at Washington has just produced a study titled "United States Manpower In The Nineteen-Seventies" which is intended to be a somewhat adventurous prediction as to just how many of us are going to be working at what kind of jobs in the decade ahead.

Many of its guesses are interesting. It foresees by 1980, a 15,000,000 decrease in our total work force, with 7,000,000 of the increase representing women. The increased number of women entering the work force are going to have a harder time finding jobs because there are going to be fewer children who will require fewer teachers. Among the men, the percentage shift from blue to white collar classifications will continue, which will mean, for one thing, that dropouts will be worse off than ever. Such extrapolations run the customary risk involved in following changeable statistics rather than permanently fixed patterns of society behavior.

But one of the Labor Department's predictions can be taken as absolutely guaranteed;

When this manpower study says that it will be state and local governments which will make the biggest percentage increases as employers over the decade, it is dealing in a certainty.

One must still question, however, what oversight let this federal prognostication fail to mention the possibility that the federal government might be right in there, too.

In the gratitude we owe those government enterprises which do their best to provide jobs for people we should not neglect the federal branch.

And all three levels of government deserve credit for the way they manage to keep 'increasing the number of jobs they can provide while, at the same time, they are continually introduc-ing new machines and new systems and new computers all designed to do more work with fewer people.

Legitimate Indian Summerizing

If all those friendly weathermen who have been gossiping occasionally about the arrival of Indian Summer weather will now lend their attention, we will proceed to enlighten them, and authorize them, and all other people who love to discuss the weather, to legitimate Indian Summerizing.

There is one important thing that should never be forgotten, no matter what the blandishments of late Septem ber or an unusually benign October. It is that it is Nov. 11 which is the Martinmas, or the feast of St. Martin. What has St. Martin to do with Indian Summer? He was the kindly fellow who, meeting with a shivering beggar on a chill and gave it to the beggar Immediately, as soon as the begga was out of sight, warm weather came back to that part of England, to reward St. Martin for his saintly deed, and to make sure he did not suffer from the cold himself.

That establishes the only safe ground rules for noticing, proclaiming, or predicting an Indian Summer.

The season on Indian Summers is now officially open.

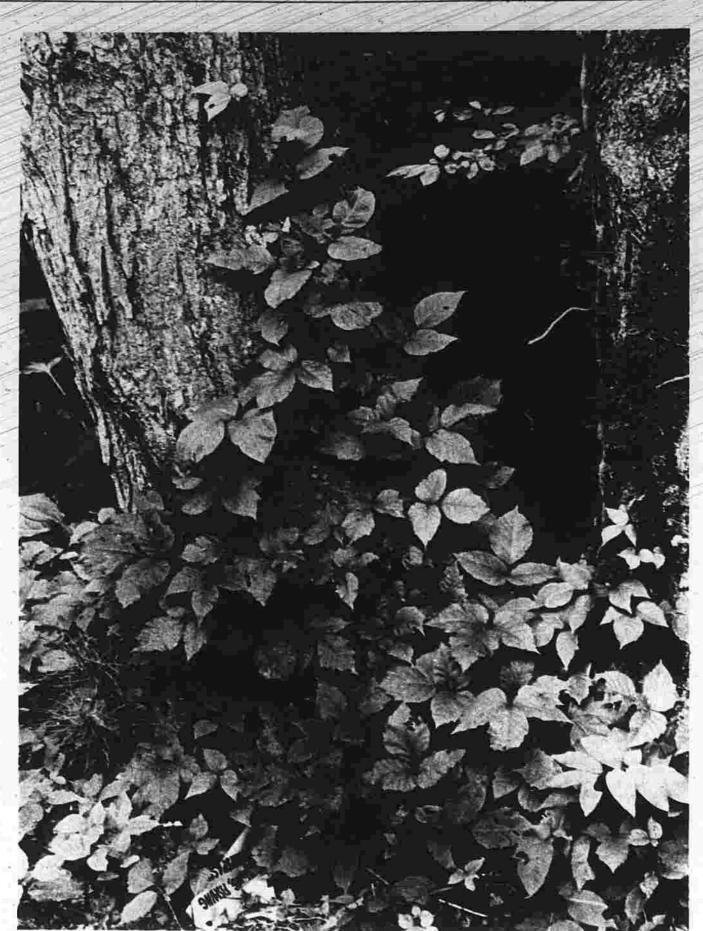

Party Lever: A Useless Appendage The criss-cross pattern of voting that was demonstrated in Tuesday's election had an unintended victim among the fallen - but one whose demise has been overdue - and that was the party Straight down-the-line balloting took it on the chin in an exceptional dis play of independent thinking. Voters were not to be fazed by voting machine

To the best of our knowledge, Connecticut is one of just two states to retain the party lever. Why this politician's crutch is needed at all, other than that it is a politician's crutch, is beyond us. There is a suggestion of insult in the presence of the party lever, in that it indicates a condescending view by poli ticians of the voter as a poor, bewilderticians of the voter as a poor, bewildered soul who barely knows how to get in and out of the voting booth. " As to the standard argument that the party lever helps preserve the two-party system, this is simply a glib cover-up for what politicians are truly after, and that is a robot-like response from the voter. If the two-party system has to depend on a mechanical gadget for its survival, God help it! The arrogance of Connecticut's politicians on the party lever issue was trotted out never more openly than in the 1965 constitutional convention, when the itous piece of machinery was lifted from the ranks of State statute and glorified as a provision of the new Constitution. There it is - locked in - to be lislodged only by constitutional amend

It is interesting that Thomas Dodd's campaign concentrated so heavily on guiding the voter past the party lever hurdle and through the intricacles of ticket - splitting - interesting since would have been much simpler to encourage the voter to disregard the pary lever altogether And the presumption from the scattershot results is that many of them did just that.

Voters have demonstrated emphat cally last Tuesday their mastery over the voting machine. They have treated the party lever for what it is, a useless appendage. The party lever never had ny business being written into the State constitution, and it remains an effronry to the voter so long as it remains. The sooner the next General Assembly moves to obtain its removal, the better, -NEW HAVEN REGISTER.

City sophistication is evident in this beautiful Gateau aux Pommes with its crown of apples and its delicate, rich flavor.

Old fashioned goodness from a country kitchen: apple cobbler, honey-glazed baked apples and an apple pie in the making.

Apples are popular everywhere - at home everywhere - in a country kitchen or a city penthouse - in an old-fashioned dish like Apple Cobbler or a sophisticated dessert like Gateau aux

Now that the new crop is at its most varied, most beautiful and best, it is time to fill the house with the wafting aroma of apples and spices. The higher cost of convenience foods has brought back the delights of home baking and homemakers have discovered how many pennies can be saved by making an apple pie "from scratch" rather than buying the finished product. And the same thing holds true for other foods as well. So-don an apron-cook up a storm-and charm your

By VIVIAN F. FERGUSON With only six months of lessons, a young girl had the courage to try out for the chorus of Sonja Henie's "Holiday on Ice." Her enterprise that day carried her far from her work as a medical secretary in Springfield, Mass. She would visit 22 foreign countries and take part in one of the first color spectaculars on television.

There was a lot of fun and lamour for Marilyn Maconald. There was a lot of hard work, too. Some days, the group would skate for 13 hours getting ready for a show. On an average day, practice was never less than nine hours,

For our younger readers, Miss Henie was a former Olympic figure - skating champion. She took first place in 1928, 1932 and 1938. Her career has been unequalled for she won the world championship in her field for ten consecutive years. This is not to mention seven European contests. In 1936, she began her professional career as a movie star. By 1939, she had skated her way into third place as the nation's box-office attraction, surpassed only by Shirely Temple and Clark Gable, Her extravagantly staged and beautifully costumed shows were widely attended, often sold out well in advance of opening night.

BOSTON (AP) — Lew Alcindor and his new side-kick Oscar Robertson are putting on quite a dazzling show for the Milwaukee Bucks these days, but don't ret the idea they're a twoman offense.

T'm interested in how the ve men on the floor are workg, not two," coach Larry Cosllo said when asked if he were pleased with the way his two sustars were playing together er Wednesday night's 123-118 ictory over Boston.

"Team play is the way you win in this game," Costello added. "I think the Celtics demonstrated that for a long time. If I geared our offense around those two guys and the other three stood around, we'd lose. Psychologically or whatever it is, it's mportant for the other guys to el they're part of the team too -and they are."

Canada Pro-Peking At U.N.

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)-Canada underlined its newly estabished relations with Red China today by informing the General Assembly i will support Peking for a U.N. seat. Canadian Ambassador Yvon

Beaulne told the 127-nation assembly his government looks forward to the day when the Red Chinese hold seats in the Assembly and the Security Council, where China holds veto power, Beaulne spoke as delegates privately expressed the belief that the mildness of the U.S speech Thursday indicates an easing of American opposition to a seat for Communist China. Canada was the first nation to announce a switch in position at this year's debate. Canada was the first nation to Guinea all established relations with Peking this year. All three had, abstained on the China question in 1969. Beaulne told the assembly however, that his delegation would continue to support the U.S.-backed resolution making the issue an "important question" requiring a two-thirds majority for approval.

"I wish to make it clear, however," the Canadian envoy added, "that, if in our judgment, continued support of such a resolution could in the future frustrate the will of the general assembly, my government will change its position." Ambassador Christopher Phillips in his speech Thursday gave far more emphasis to opposing the expulsion of Nationalist China from the world forum than he did to opposing the admission of Peking. Phillips did not make the usual U.S. charge that Red China is not fit to hold U.N. membership because it has a record Rank-and-File UAW Workers

It was the third major boobytrap or mine casualty the division has suffered in Quang Ngai this year. On Oct. 13, a booby trap rigged from an American artillery shell killed nine Americans and wounded five. On April 15, a similarly rigged 155mm shell killed 14 Americans and wounded 32.

Two more American infantry men were killed Thursday and two were wounded by another booby trap in another part of Quang Ngai, which is on the northern coastal plain. Military officials attribute at
