Discount Fares On Airlines Held Discriminatory

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Civil Aeronautics Board examiner ruled today that major airline discount fares are "unjustly discriminatory in their present form."

Examiner Arthur S. Present applied his ruling to youth standby fares, youth reservation fares, family fares and Discover America fares.

His findings, which cannot take effect unless confirmed by the CAB, were that the discounts shall not exceed: — 13 1/2 per cent for youth standby fares.

— 20 per cent for the first accompanying family member; 33 1/3 for additional accompanying family members age 12 through 21, and 50 per cent for accompanying family members aged 2 through 11.

— 30 per cent for the Discover America fares.

The examiner also ruled that the discount fares should not be offered during the 24-hour period starting at 12:01 a.m. on Fridays and Sundays.

He said youth standby fare passengers should not be seated in the first-class compartment of two-class aircraft, and family fares in such aircraft should be available only in coach service, with the members of the family required to travel together on all parts of the trip.

He said Discover America fares should be available only on flights of at least 600 miles, to persons buying a round-trip ticket with a stay of not less than seven days and not more than 30 days.

He added that Discover America fares should not be offered in first-class service.

The CAB has stayed the examiner's decision and other phases in the fare investigation until further order.

Oregon Students Burn Effigies

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — About 100 antiwar demonstrators singing "The Star Spangled Banner" burned effigies of President Nixon and Vice President Agnew Wednesday night on the University of Oregon campus.

The demonstrators, mostly students, said they were protesting United States military involvement in Vietnam and what they termed escalation of the war by the recent attempt to rescue American prisoners of war in North Vietnam.

Some of the marchers carried torches and Viet Cong flags. The march, sponsored by the Radical Collective Union, was orderly except for an exchange of obscenities between demonstrators and dormitory residents.

Hebron Two Breaks Reported During Week

Ye Friendly Spirit Shoppe on Rt. 88 and the Gilead Hill school were both broken into during the past week.

According to Resident State Trooper John Soderburg, the package store was burglarized some time late Saturday evening or early Sunday morning.

Access was obtained by breaking the glass front door.

Mrs. Joan Kiefer, owner, reported that about 80 bottles of liquor, several cases of beer and some display items, including a large pink elephant were stolen.

The store had no burglar alarm system nor does the Plaza Package Store on Rt. 66. However, owner James Darby said he has an alarm on hand and it is being installed immediately.

Some time Tuesday evening, several windows were broken at the Gilead Hill School and the cafeteria broken into. About $1.50 in cash, all that was on hand, was stolen. Nothing else was reported to have been taken from the building.

Soderburg stated last night that there have been about "two dozen" burglaries, both businesses and residences, during the past week in the Colchester, Marlborough and Hebron area.

Attempts, he said, are made on businesses during the evening and on homes during the day.

He added that the town has been "very lucky in the past" when it comes to burglaries as compared to other towns in the area.

He urges residents that "if they see anything in the least suspicious or have any problems", either he or the Colchester Troop should be informed immediately.

Even though he may not be on duty, Soderburg stated that "there is someone covering the area at all times, 24 hours a day."

Dodd Campaign $42,675 Short

HARTFORD (AP) — Sen. Thomas J. Dodd reported Wednesday that his unsuccessful re-election campaign as an independent wound up $42,675 in the red.

Dodd said he spent a total of $181,609—$40,000 of it in funds received from the Union of Operating Engineers.

The figures were contained in reports filed Wednesday with the secretary of the state.

Dodd declared that he was his own largest contributor, donating $9,823 in funds he borrowed from a bank.

The operating engineers' union contributed $24,300 from six "appreciation dinners." $4,184 from "Dollars for Dodd" and $1,986 from "Americans for Dodd," which listed their address as the engineers' state headquarters in Hamden.

Elwood "Sonny" Metz, head of the union, and his father, "Pop" Metz, each was an enthusiastic supporter of Dodd.

Dodd said he spent $78,250 on television spots, ads and $24,759 for filing campaign expense reports.

The advice was sought from the Institute of Motivational Research of Austin, Tex.

Dodd's campaign expenses are expected to be the lowest of the three senate candidates. Democrat Joseph Duffy went down to defeat on what was reported to be a $90,000 budget, and the winner—Republican Lowell P. Weicker Jr., was believed to have spent about the same.

Thursday night is the deadline for filing campaign expense reports.

Chicago — Contary to general belief, it is not your brain that aches when you have a headache. The human brain doesn't feel pain. Emotional stress and nervous tension cause most headaches.

Thursday, December 3. The Crime And The Guilt. Finally, the other day, the trial concerned with the possibility that atrocities had been committed by American troops in Vietnam developed a witness who testified that he had actually seen a specific American shoot a group of unarmed Vietnamese civilians.

But up to that point, in one court after another, there had been merely the continual appearance of a man in a suit which there was no identifiable cause. There was testimony as to bodies, but not as to how they became bodies. There was heard murder, but it was murder anonymous.

In part, no doubt, this was the result of the reluctance of the army and navy members of the armed forces to testify against one another. To be sure, if civilians were shot in a ditch, some specific individuals had to be pulling triggers. To be sure, somebody had to see what went on. The curious kind of story which was being told in the court rooms, then, was the result of the inability of members of the armed services to bring themselves to tell the truth about it themselves.

Then, the other day, there came the first witness who admitted seeing a specific individual committing the act in question. Perhaps at last — it will be for the court itself to decide — the truth was beginning to be told.

But perhaps, too, the really basic truth had been contained in the earlier versions in which crimes had certainly been committed, but not by anybody in particular.

And this much should be said, again and again. When and if the military courts ever do determine that a certain individual or individuals wearing our uniform did commit certain criminal acts in Vietnam, that should not be taken as constituting a clean bill of innocence for the institution of war, or for the training and indoctrination we give our armed forces, or for this whole civilian nation as it stands in the background, wistfully pretending it is somewhat better than committed in its uniform in situations where it has sent its young men. This nation cannot buy its own peace of mind by prosecuting its own soldiers as if they had somehow been clean only establish one part, and perhaps the least fundamental part, of the guilt. When we take our young men and put them into this kind of history — that is the shocking conduct on our part which almost makes inevitable the development of shocking conduct on theirs.

Our Own Dear Raindrop. Once more something we will always have with us — the possibility of life somewhere else in the universe — is brought into the news, this time by laboratory analysis of a meteor found in Australia.

The laboratory has recovered from the meteor a number of amino acids, including six that are normally found in living cells and which are considered the precursors of life.

For many of us, perhaps, this is merely one more unnecessary piece of evidence. Some of us have never bothered to ask whether there is or can be life elsewhere in the universe. We prefer to ask what ground there could possibly be for not expecting to find life elsewhere. Why just us alone? Why, in all that infinite vastness, just one little grain-of-and-plus-molecule raindrop with life inside it? Who dares doubt the possibility, nay, the certainty, of life elsewhere?

possibly grotesquely different existence rival to our own. Are we civilized enough to know how to conduct ourselves in a universe which contains two civilizations?

What would we really have on tap for such an experience as the discovery of another system of life? A killer instinct? A quaking fear for our own security? Some system of philosophy? A religion? Some capacity for such universal love as would find us all standing out on our observatories arms open to receive the strange unknown?

We begin to frighten ourselves. We turn back to the reassuring notion that what has just been accomplished, in one laboratory, really constitutes no positive proof, there ever really was or ever can be any more trouble for us in the universe than we can brew for ourselves right here inside our own raindrop.

No Passing Power. The Transportation Department at Washington is proposing that, starting with Detroit's 1973 models, all passenger cars be engineered so that they are limited to 55 miles an hour and so that, when they hit 55 miles an hour, they will automatically begin sounding their horns and flashing their lights.

Our first thought, as we try to reconcile such a proposal with what we know of normal traffic conditions, is that this would create a terrible and unnecessary din on all our superhighways and this, moreover, it would bunch all this noisy traffic up together and deprive any individual quiet-seeking motorist of passing power.

On The Brink Of A Trade War. The worst kind of nightmares are those in which the victim loses all sense of freedom to act. Predation seems to take over. The present world economic situation is too much like that for comfort. Having gone to the brink of international monetary chaos several times in the past few years, the world now seems to be heading for a trade war. The American trade protection lobby has succeeded in passing through the House of Representatives a bill which, if it becomes law in its present form, would start a chain reaction of trade quotas and tariffs throughout the advanced industrial world. This bill would immediately restrict imports of textiles and shoes, but it would also empower the administration to curb a wide range of other industrial imports. The bill would have some way to go before it is sent to the President, but a similar bill is before the Senate and has powerful backing. A major obstacle to the protectionists has been the declared unwillingness of the President to approve any bill which could start a trade war. The bill's backers, however, have a device which they believe will make it almost impossible for the President to use his veto. They propose tying anti-import legislation to another bill which proposes to increase social security payments in line with inflation. The President might like to deny increases in social security at a time when the Democratic Opposition is rearing its head about the growth of unemployment and poverty in American cities.

The danger of protectionism has been clear for a long time. The pressure for import controls has been mounting because of increasing penetration of traditionally "safe" American markets by foreign suppliers. Coming at the same time as the economic upswing, this has led to big losses and some bankruptcies among American companies. The protectionists have also made capital the worrying level of unemployment, now at 8.6 per cent, and the continuing decline in the US balance of payments. Unfortunately President Nixon originally gave aid and comfort to the protectionists when he was seeking their support from the South — where the lobby is strongest — before the 1968 Presidential election. The Southern economic protectionists are now insisting that he meets his political debt to them. So far the White House has been able to keep protectionist pressure within limits by launching a well-publicized campaign to get some of the largest exporters to the US — notably the Japanese — to agree to a "voluntary" restriction of shipments. The talks with the Japanese are still going on, and optimists think success in Tokyo will allow President Nixon to resist any composite bill agreed by the Senate and the House of Representatives.

The consequences of a cut in Asian imports are wider than they might appear. Already the EEC nations have warned the Japanese that they will not permit any goods diverted from American markets to be added to the already formidable flood of Japanese exports to Europe. The EEC itself is not blameless in the matter of trade balance problems; their balance of payments deficit is basically due to the Far East fighting and to the outflow of investment funds. The President knows the danger of the present version in Congress. He needs to convince the mass of American people that short-ighted protectionism cannot advance living standards but eventually will threaten them. There is still time for the trading nations to seek help from the brink. — MANCHESTER (ENG.) GUARDIAN.

possibly grotesquely different existence rival to our own. Are we civilized enough to know how to conduct ourselves in a universe which contains two civilizations?

What would we really have on tap for such an experience as the discovery of another system of life? A killer instinct? A quaking fear for our own security? Some system of philosophy? A religion? Some capacity for such universal love as would find us all standing out on our observatories arms open to receive the strange unknown?

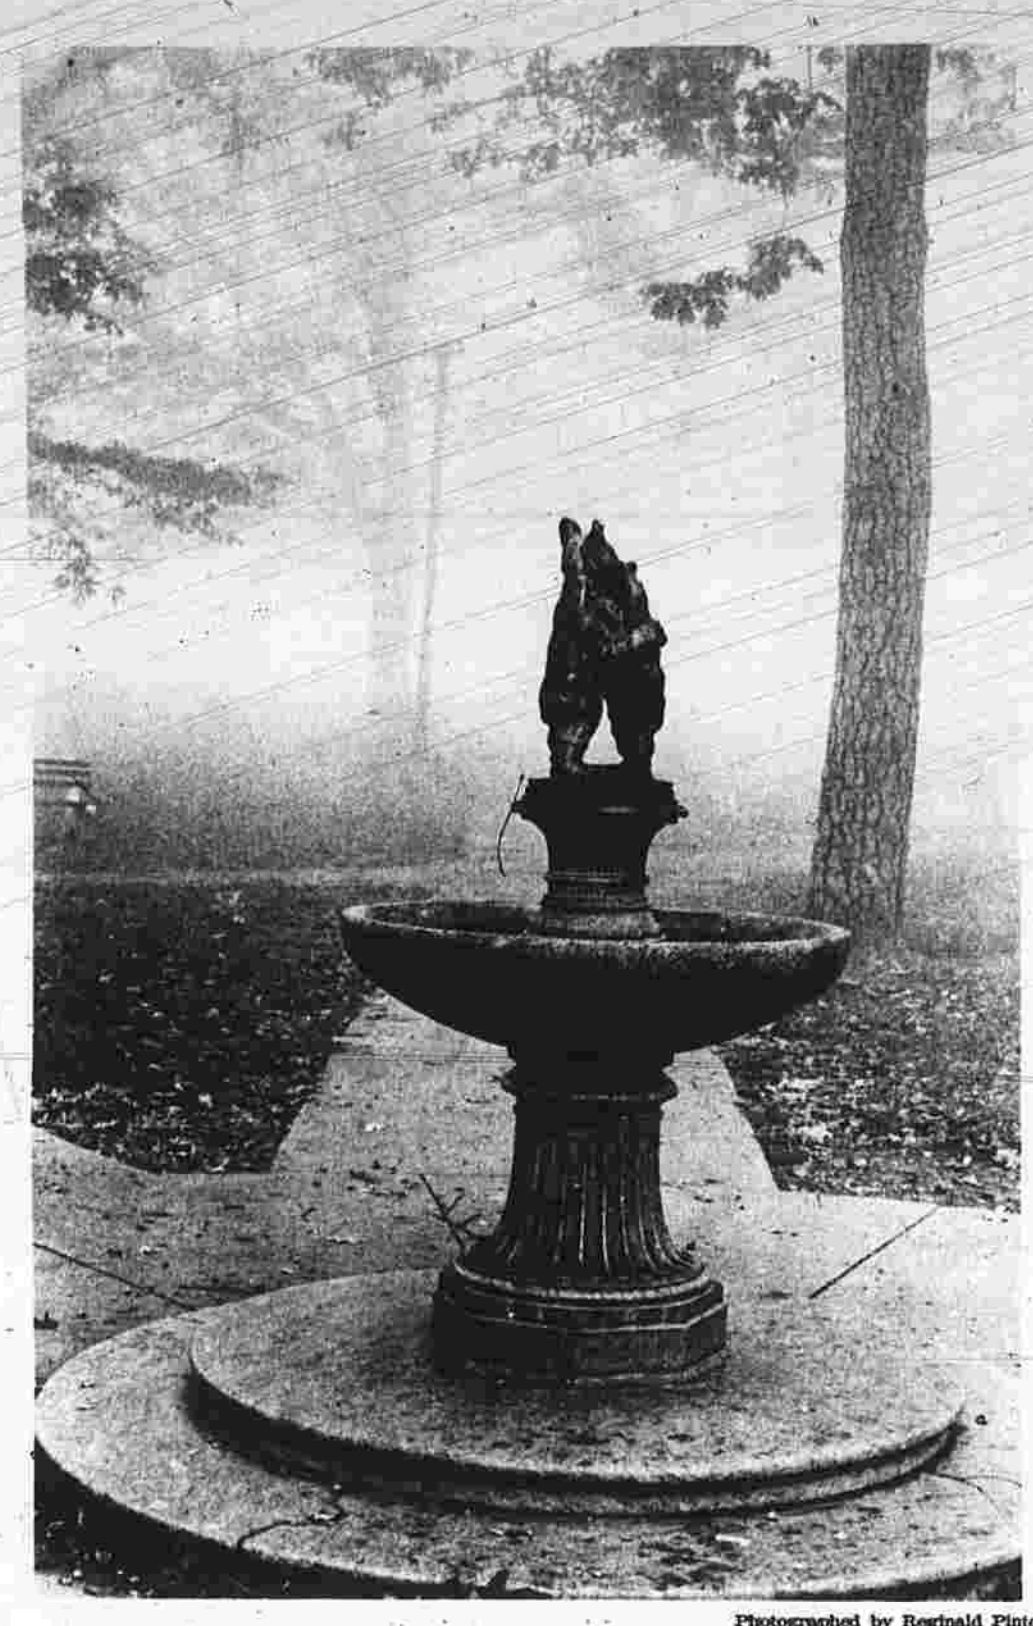

We begin to frighten ourselves. We turn back to the reassuring notion that what has just been accomplished, in one laboratory, really constitutes no positive proof, there ever really was or ever can be any more trouble for us in the universe than we can brew for ourselves right here inside our own raindrop.

No Passing Power. The Transportation Department at Washington is proposing that, starting with Detroit's 1973 models, all passenger cars be engineered so that they are limited to 55 miles an hour and so that, when they hit 55 miles an hour, they will automatically begin sounding their horns and flashing their lights.

Our first thought, as we try to reconcile such a proposal with what we know of normal traffic conditions, is that this would create a terrible and unnecessary din on all our superhighways and this, moreover, it would bunch all this noisy traffic up together and deprive any individual quiet-seeking motorist of passing power.

On The Brink Of A Trade War. The worst kind of nightmares are those in which the victim loses all sense of freedom to act. Predation seems to take over. ### Nixon's NATO Doctrine

By Rowland Evans Jr. and Robert D. Novak

WASHINGTON — Confounding neo-isolationist Senators who want massive U.S. troop reductions in Europe, President Nixon instead is now pressuring U.S. allies to enlarge their own NATO strength in return for no reduction at all in American continental troops.

Behind this Nixon European doctrine for the 1970s, adopted formally by the National Security Council late last month, is a shift in American strategy expressed privately by a top administration official this way: "We must convince the Europeans that NATO may have to fight a full-scale conventional (non-nuclear) war."

So sharp a turn in the evolution of U.S. policy in Europe reflects one sinister fact of life: The basic change in the nuclear power balance. That is, the U.S. and the Soviet Union. In 1949, when NATO was born, U.S. strategy was to use NATO as a trip-wire, with massive nuclear retaliation as the real deterrent to Soviet action in western Europe. That gave way a decade later to the Kennedy flexible-response doctrine — NATO conventional forces backed by battlefield tactical nuclear weapons.

Now, the new doctrine projects the possibility of full-scale non-nuclear conventional war in Europe as the obvious end product of the new Soviet nuclear equality. That is, the U.S. nuclear deterrent is no longer credible. This is what Mr. Nixon's agents—Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird and Secretary of State William P. Rogers—will try to sell NATO this week at Brussels, and there are signs they may be successful.

Secret studies of the conventional-force balance between NATO and the Soviet-dominated Warsaw Pact already show a dangerously growing imbalance, according to one confidential study, the Communists now have a concentration of military power exceeding "anything the world has previously seen."

Part of this imbalance comes from gradual reduction of U.S. troops assigned to Europe, now at the lowest levels since 1967 for Army, Air, and Navy. This means that combat support for a meaningful non-nuclear strategy, in the phrase of U.S. officials, has been "hollowed out."

If this "hollowing-out" process is now followed by severe unilateral U.S. withdrawals of conventional forces (as neo-isolationist Senators demand), NATO becomes a paper tiger. That would leave no other recourse than to use tactical nuclear weapons at the instant

Connecticut Yankee

By A.H.O.

If it has not happened already, it will be happening any such thing as a truly balanced budget. The explanation for this may be as difficult as any question to himself, demanding an honest answer. "Why?" he will ask himself, "did I ever want to be Governor?"

This little scene may have already been enacted. It may have taken place right after the Governor-elect got his first shocked look at the budget requests which had come in for the next state biennium.

What these requests showed was that even if you made the most drastic budget cuts imaginable and then also really socked it to the taxpayers and tax inks, and on the other side, economies nobody could make, and on the other side, burdens nobody dares impose.

This is where Messiah has now trapped himself, by getting himself elected Governor at a moment when the Connecticut public itself is beginning to have some vague idea that the time for a reckoning has arrived. He is a new face and a new hope, and the people of Connecticut are looking to him to right up and accomplish the impossible.

And it is also true that Connecticut has not been able to pay its bills for a long time. In the past few years, the Legislature have been enticed by high spending and frightened by high taxing, but they met the smart one, thought?

Whoever can be trapped into standing in the middle of this most drastic budget crisis, on one side, economies nobody could make, and on the other side, burdens nobody dares impose.

Seale Court Is Recessed After Third Juror Picked

By JUDY FREUND Associated Press Writer

NEW HAVEN (AP) — Of the 113 persons who have taken the witness stand as potential jurors in the murder case against Black Panther Bobby G. Seale and Ericka Huggins, the defense and prosecution Wednesday had agreed on only three, two black and one white.

Early in the afternoon session, Judge Harold M. Milvey recessed court until 10 a.m. Monday after hearing of the death of the mother-in-law of State's Attorney Arnold Markle, who is prosecuting the case.

Wednesday's abbreviated session marked the third week that the court had convened to form a jury.

The latest juror to be chosen is Sheila Pennix, 22, a black it New Haven resident who is a clerk in the accounting department at the Southern New England Telephone Co.

She joins a white mailman, Franklin Dilger, 42, of Wolcott, and a black retired employe of the Connecticut State Police, James Adams, 65, of New Haven.

Seale, 33, of Oakland, Calif., and Mrs. Huggins, 22, of New Haven are charged with capital crimes in connection with the slaying of Alex Rankley, 24, of New York City. His body was found May 21, 1969 in a shallow river in Middletown in central Connecticut.

Fourteen persons, including two juveniles, were originally arrested in the case. A number pleaded guilty to lesser charges.

The only person tried before Seale and Mrs. Huggins is Lonnie McLacana Jr., 24, of Jersey City, N.J., who was found guilty of conspiracy to murder and sentenced to 1 to 15 years in prison. A jury accepted his plea of guilty to murder charges.

In a related development Wednesday in Superior Court in Middletown, the state agreed to stop prosecuting McLacana on first-degree murder charges in the case.

Seale and Mrs. Huggins are charged with kidnapping, robbing, slaying and aiding and abetting murder — charges that carry the death penalty — an alleged conspiracy to murder.

Two of the remaining 28 potential jurors are now being selected and are black. The other 11 potential jurors are white.

Purchase of Land For School Okayed

By JUDY FREUND Associated Press Writer

NEW HAVEN (AP) — The purchase of land on Loveland Hill in a 1,006-281 vote and paved the way for the Board of Education to expand the present high school in that area.

The second question, dealing with an appropriation of $100,000 for purchase of a site on Phoenix and Lake streets, for some future use by the town, was turned down in a 113-305 vote in Districts 1 and 2 and 204-66 in the other two districts.

The Board of Education and Mayor Frank McCoy strongly pushed for the purchase of the site for the proposed school. The estimated cost has not been revealed but it is expected that it will be made known when the plans are reviewed.

Towns Inviting Gasoline Bids

By JUDY FREUND Associated Press Writer

MANCHESTER (AP) — Twelve towns in the Greater Hartford region were invited to submit bids on gasoline for use in the coming calendar year. All 11 towns are members of the Capitol Region Purchasing Council, an arm of a cross section of socioeconomic groups and would eliminate rivalry between two schools.

The preliminary plans for the addition have been prepared by architect William McHugh and will be presented at a public meeting to be held soon. After final plans are approved the next step will be to hand another special referendum to ask the voters to approve a bond issue to take the place of the proposed school. The estimated cost has not been revealed but it is expected that it will be made known when the plans are reviewed.

Andover Residents Reject Purchase Of Provenson Land, Truck

The town people of Andover, River, reputed to be one of the most scenic spots in the state, turned down a proposal for the purchase of a 100-acre tract of land on the Hop River, which would be used for a truck and a parking lot for the Provenson property for conservation.

In a highly charged atmosphere, with well over 100 people in attendance, all the issues at hand were discussed and debated at night. The town meeting was held at the Andover town hall, where the town selectmen and the Andover Conservation Commission were present.

The first major item to be discussed was the purchase of the Provenson property, for total pond area in the swamp. Mrs. Louise gave the presentation, which was supported by the Conservation Commission and the Andover Conservation Commission.

Mr. Gardner showed the assembly some charts that had been prepared, indicating population growth figures of the town and those of the surrounding areas as well. The town had in 1920 a total population of 289, in 1930 there were 430 residents and by 1940 the population had grown to 560. The year years of the town's growth are shown in the charts, which are accurate at least on the first and present year's population estimate. By the time the population reaches 12,000, there may no longer be available land for open space use if it is not set aside now, he warned.

Gardner pointed out the phenomenal growth in the last decade of the neighboring town of Hebron, for which figure has been over 100 per cent, while Columbia and Marlborough grew over 46 per cent and 48 per cent respectively. Andover, meanwhile, has managed to show a growth of only 18 per cent in the same decade. The overall growth rate for the state in this period was something like 20 per cent whereas for Tolland County it was 49.7 per cent. If nothing else, Gardner stated, these figures tell us that this area is expanding and still expandable.

Water Property Map
Jerry Anderson then showed the townspeople a map of the town showing all the water locations: streams, rivers and ponds. Anderson explained that one way or another all the water areas are interconnected, with streams feeding into ponds which in turn run off to other streams and rivers. Should any of these bodies be badly polluted, it would pollute all of them. The Hop River, which is the main water source for the town, would be the most vulnerable.

If nothing else, Gardner stated, these figures tell us that this area is expanding and still expandable.

Water Property Map
Jerry Anderson then showed the townspeople a map of the town showing all the water locations: streams, rivers and ponds. Anderson explained that one way or another all the water areas are interconnected, with streams feeding into ponds which in turn run off to other streams and rivers. Should any of these bodies be badly polluted, it would pollute all of them. The Hop River, which is the main water source for the town, would be the most vulnerable.

Indonesians Cheer Pope In Jakarta

The Pope gave Suharto a silver lamp with a silver engraved shade and a landscape painting called "Porta Santa Anna."

During the meeting, the Pope read a brief statement saying his visit was "a sign of our esteem for your numerous people who are so dear to us."

The crowd was expected to pick up tonight when the Pope celebrates Mass in a sports stadium. A throng of 10,000 was predicted.

An official welcoming party headed by President Suharto and about 600 schoolgirls and air force cadets were at the airport to cheer the 78-year-old pontiff as he completed the seven-hour flight from Sydney, Australia.

Appearing rested and in good health on the sixth stop of his 6,000-mile trip, the Pope thanked Suharto for his welcome and praised Indonesia as a land known for its religious tolerance.

The pontiff also used the occasion to call for world peace, saying that if politicians would put aside their political ambitions "there would be permanent peace."

Suharto thanked the Pope for his visit to Indonesia and said he was "greatly honored" by the Catholic pontiff's visit. Then he took him over to meet the official welcoming party, which included high-ranking Indonesian officials.

Senators Act To Restore 2 Welfare Bans

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Finance Committee voted Wednesday to overturn two Supreme Court decisions on rights of welfare recipients which members of the committee feel are responsible for the ballooning of welfare rolls.

Two provisions, which the committee added to a Social Security bill, would permit states to impose a one-year residency requirement before poor persons could receive welfare payments and to restore the man-in-the-house rule under which some mothers were cut off the rolls in the past.

Both provisions were adopted by 24-4 votes which confirmed tentative decisions taken last week.

Conservative liberals on the committee had sought reconsideration in order to try to defeat the provisions.

Conservatives, noting that two million persons were added to the welfare lists nationally in the last year, raising the total to 13 million, said that the high court's decisions were at least partly responsible for this trend.

These senators said also they were particularly unhappy that the cases which led to the rulings were brought by government-paid lawyers under the auspices of the American Bar Association.

In neither case did the committee restore the full residency requirement and man-in-the-house rules as they were in effect before the Supreme Court overturned them.

In the case of the residency requirement, a welfare recipient must live in a state for one year before the committee's provision, continue to receive his state payment for the year before he would become eligible in state.

As for the man-in-the-house rule, under the old procedure a woman could be denied welfare if she was living with a man who was not on the welfare rolls. The committee's provision would permit denial only if the man in question appeared to be acting as the father of the dependent children in the family.

LBJ Veto

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — W. Averell Harriman, former U.S. ambassador - at large, says President Lyndon B. Johnson once vetoed a bill to establish a strong force to help the poor.

Harriman, here for a speech at the Armed Forces Staff College, told a news conference Wednesday the main reason for rejecting the proposal was a lack of hard information on where the prisoners were being held.

The 78-year-old ex-diplomat, a former governor of New York, said he had "great admiration" for the recent unsuccessful attempt to find and release prisoners by a commando raid at Son Tay.

Japan Growing

TOKYO (AP) — Japan's population has passed the 100 million mark, the Bureau of Statistics reported Wednesday. The figure on Oct. 1 was 100,706,000.

It reported that the population increased 5.3 per cent over the past five years, compared with 5.2 per cent for the previous five-year period.

'Boston Stone' Now Hero Of Children's Fairy Tale

BOSTON (AP)—The "Boston Stone," used more than 200 years ago to grind pigment for paint and a century later to measure distances for maps, now is the "hero" of a children's fairy tale.

The story was written by Israel Katz, dean of Northeastern University's Center for Continuing Education, for the United Nations Children's Fund, UNICEF.

It is one of 65 stories in "Fables," published for UNICEF in German and on sale in Europe.

The stone is round and approximately two feet in diameter. It was brought from England in the 1700s and used to grind pigments to be mixed with linseed oil for paint.

"It later was used as a landmark from which distances were measured in Boston," said Katz.

This was in the early 1800s. Surveyors for Boston's Public Works Department used the stone as a reference point to city measure distances on city streets.

"I was mounted on a pedestal and held in awe," says the stone. "Builders had written technical articles in the fairy tale. 'Builders spoke of me in hushed tones and surveyed their lots and plots with reference to me, and the points of the compass radiated from me, with utmost care.'"

"The main streets pointed to wards me as the spokes of a wheel, and I lived at the very center of what has become known as the 'Hub City.'"

In the story, the stone casts a spell on new surveying maps using different reference points.

causing the maps to be destroyed. Surveyors then must return to Boston Stone maps.

"The legend, which is narrated by the stone itself in my fairy tale, is basically true," Katz said.

He said the city had new maps made using astronomical points rather than the Boston Stone to measure distances.

Officials wanted to get rid of the old maps for which the stone had been used, loaded what were believed to be those maps on trucks, took them to a dump and burned them.

They then discovered the new maps were still on file.

For obvious reasons, Katz is reluctant to say just when this happened. "I say it happened a long time ago," he said. "It is now in a brick wall along the 'Freedom Trail' in Haymarket Square."

Katz said he came upon the story while working with the city as a consultant on educational programs for city youngsters.

"I had written technical articles, but this was his first attempt at a children's story, he said. He has three daughters, aged 13, 20 and 23. A UNICEF representative contacted him about a story four or five years ago, he said.

He wrote the story in English and it was translated into German and shortened for publication. Katz said the book, sold to UNICEF, is expected to be published in other languages including English.

Nobody Came

"Nobody came" was the lament of Manchester election officials this morning.

Where "nobody came" was a two-hour, vote-making session last night in the town clerk's office.

The sessions are held on the first Wednesday of each month and, in the "nobody came" session, no voters showed up.

Counting the two Democrats, the one Republican and the one unaffiliated who signed up as voters during daylight office hours in the past two weeks, Manchester now has 23,214 electors, with the Democrats boasting a 519 lead.

There are 9,131 Democrats, 8,617 Republicans, and 5,461 unaffiliated voters in Manchester as of today.

Pages in Skirts

NEW YORK (AP)—Women have liberated another bastion of maleness—the New York Stock Exchange. Eleven girls pages clad in blue smocks made their debut on the trading floor Wednesday.

Girls were employed as pages during and immediately after World War II, but otherwise their 173-year history of the exchange has used only boys to run messages between brokers.

Judging by the cheers of traders and male employees, the female pages were a welcome addition. An exchange spokesman said a shortage of boys and a feeling that the job should be opened up to girls brought on the change.

Business 4 Plan Before PZC Monday

The lone item on the agenda for a Planning and Zoning Commission public hearing Monday will be a proposal to adopt a regulation creating a "Business IV Zone" and applying it to the area on the east side of Broad St. between Center St. and W. Middle Tpke.

The hearing will be held at 7:30 p.m. in the Municipal Building hearing room.

The intent of the proposed regulation is to create a zone that allows the present mixture of business and industrial uses along Broad St. to remain as they exist and still be fully in accord with recently revised zoning regulations.

The commission had been contemplating changing the section for east side of the railroad tracks to a Business III Zone. The section for several years has been zoned commercial.

The change to Business III along Broad St. was suggested by Town Planner J. Eric Potter because the uses that developed there over the years have been primarily commercial, and because the commission has been attempting to separate business from industrial functions.

Until recently the Industrial Zone had been the "lowest" zoning category—permitting all uses of higher zones, plus every other legal use.

Industrial uses now are permitted in Business III, and vice versa; thus, if the regulation had been adopted as Potter suggested, 10 per cent of the Broad St. land would no longer conform to the zoning regulations.

Several persons with dual commercial-industrial interests in the Broad St. area spoke at last month's meeting against a change to Business III, saying they had intended the dual uses when they purchased their properties.

Christmas mailing kits, if used as requested, will speed delivery, eliminate congestion in the post office, and save the government money, according to the Manchester Post Office.

Kits, including bands to wrap mail and instructions have been sent to patrons.

For mail sent from the Manchester Post Office, the Local Band should be used for mail to be delivered in Bolton, Buckland or Manchester.

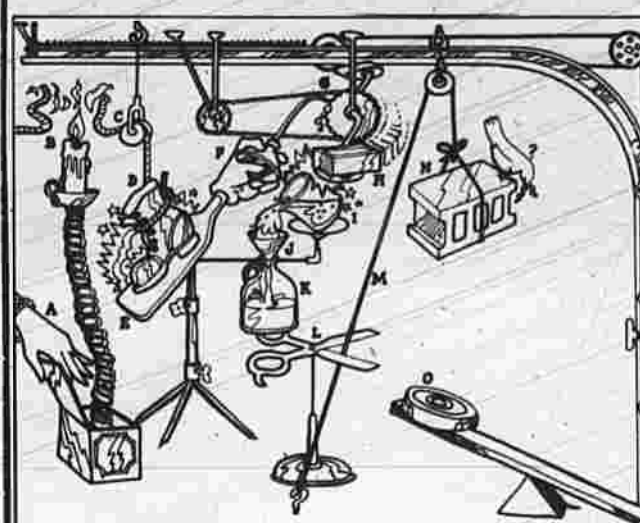

The Connecticut Band should be used for other mail addressed to cities and towns in Connecticut.

The Out-Of-State Band should be used for other mail. The bands should be wrapped tightly around the mail and their ends pressed with the finger tips. No moisture is necessary.

Mail should be addressed lightly; names of cities should not be abbreviated, and the Zip Code should be used in the address and the return address.

Stamps and areas near rural mail boxes should be kept clear of snow and ice.

Soviet Ouster MOSCOW (AP) - Mikhail Chulak has been ousted as director of the Bolshoi theater after 15 years in the post.

A press report Wednesday said he would be succeeded by Yuri Murovintsev, a relatively unknown who once headed Moscow's Gnessin Musical Institute.

A member of the Bolshoi staff said Chulak, 62, might be given a teaching assignment at the Moscow Conservatory.

At the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, women were told pantsuits are in "good judgment and good taste."

At the State Department, pantsuits began appearing on Saturdays about two months ago. Gradually, women began wearing them during the week.

Pantsuits for Pentagon, But It's Skirts for FBI

WASHINGTON (AP) - From the hushed corridors of the State Department to the planning rooms of the Pentagon, government girls are foregoing skirts for the comfort, warmth and style of pantsuits.

An exception is the FBI where Director J. Edgar Hoover won't permit them. And some question exists about wearing pantsuits at the White House.

"Thank heavens they're here," said Sandy Lee, a secretary at the Interstate Commerce Commission information office. "What a great substitute for the skirt."

In many cases, pantsuits have the approval, or at least do not have the disapproval, of male bosses.

"Would you categorize this as permissiveness?" asked Asst. Atty. Gen. Leo M. Palmeri, who stayed pantsuits for women employees of the Justice Department. "If you do, I guess that's where we fall."

At the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, women were told pantsuits are in "good judgment and good taste."

At the State Department, pantsuits began appearing on Saturdays about two months ago. Gradually, women began wearing them during the week.

Now, said one male observer, "it's gentlemen."

At the FBI, spokesman Thomas M. Bishop said, "Women employees of the FBI do not wear pantsuits while on duty. The director's requirement is that all employees be neat, clean and look like young businessmen and businesswomen should look."

Although Pat Nixon has been known to wear a yellow pantsuit at presidential retreats, Camp David, on occasion, the White House policy for employees isn't clear.

Mayor Hails Regional Drug Squad

The Capitol Region Council of Governments heard a glowing report on activities of its undercover drug control squad last night.

Meeting in Bloomfield, the council heard retiring chairman Nathan Agostinelli, mayor of Manchester, laud the efforts of the Regional Crime Squad.

He called on Hartford Police Lt. Thomas Grant for a report. Grant, as director, reported that his men, recruited as undercover agents from area police departments and on the payrolls of their local departments, filed reports on 475 individual cases of drug sales in the period Dec. 22, 1969 to Nov. 20, 1970.

Of the 475 cases, he said, 291 were served warrants for court appearances. He said the largest case was a $100,000 case of marijuana, which was seized by the squad.

Grant explained that the cases will stand up in court because of the result from "buys" by his men and that, to help guarantee that the cases will stand up in court, he will stand up in court himself.

He said that in the year the squad has been in existence, from 10 to 14 young policemen served with him at any given time.

In listing expenditures from the $34,500 budget provided for his squad, Grant said $19,100 was spent for the "buys" of various drugs and narcotics, for use as evidence against the pushers.

In addition, he listed $5,200 in expenditures for miscellaneous items by his undercover men while on the job - such items as "food and drink, hot dogs and hamburgers."

Another expenditure was $5,400 for gas, oil and maintenance for cars used in the work; $2,155 for "payoffs" to informants; $600 for a trip to Hawaii for Grant, when he attended a conference of narcotics officials and was elected vice chairman to their association.

The will be chairman next September; $600 for "burns," consisting of "fake buys," which turns out to be a baking soda and cigarette tobacco; and about $1,000 for training schools for area policemen.

School Board Alters Budget Procedures

The Board of Education has modified its budget preparation procedures for developing the 1971-72 budget.

The board has directed the superintendent, Dr. Raymond Ramsell, to prepare a "superintendent's" budget and present it for review. The board feels this method of preparation will eliminate many meetings held in past years between staff members and the board.

This year each department supervisor will discuss his or her needs with the principal of the school he services and final judgment on budget requests will be made by the superintendent. Each principal will be asked to keep a record of the requests deleted from his budget and these, along with those of the superintendent will be given to the board for review.

Manchester Area Police Charge Hospitalized Youth in Mishap

Denise L. Burton, 16, 52 Prospect St., Rockville, was charged yesterday with reckless driving and issued a warrant for her arrest.

The arrest was the result of an investigation of an accident that occurred on Nov. 20. Police said the Burton car left the road and struck a car parked at the American Gas Station at the intersection of Rt. 83 and Thrall Rd., Vernon.

Burton, who is still a patient at Rockville General Hospital, where she was taken with injuries suffered in the accident, is 20 years old.

Propp Pepper Vines

KUALA LUMPUR - Pepper berries grow on a vine that climbs like ivy on any available support. Some Indonesian growers use concrete posts, but the usual support is a kapok tree, which is tall and slender and provides light shade for the coffee that is often interspersed with the pepper.

Pepper vines take about five years to come into production and have a useful life of about 20 years.

Couple's Joy Found In Hard Work

By JAY SHARBUIT Associated Press Writer

EVERETT, Calif. (AP) — Nick and Sonia Mamula work from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. six days a week and from 7:30 to 6 on Sundays. Their days off are Thanksgiving, Christmas and Easter.

No vacations, little social life. Few of life's small pleasures, such as sleeping late on Sunday, sightseeing on a weekend.

That's been their routine for 23 years and they say they couldn't be happier.

Their occupation? Running a "Ma and Pa" grocery store. They're members of a slowly declining breed that once numbered in the millions. They are few long-term residents who have been in the area for many years.

They're a little older, but they're still young. They're still in love. They're still together. They're still happy.

They're still in love. They're still together. They're still happy.

Signs in Africa Indicate Easing of Racial Tension

By KENNETH L. WHEBING
Associated Press Writer
PRITORIA, South Africa (AP) — There are hints of relaxation in the long and bitter confrontation between black and white nations in Africa.

For more than a decade the continent's white-ruled southern provided medical technicians and other specialists, communications equipment and funds to the north which each state to the north viewed each other with fear and contempt. Militant black leaders condemned racial segregation and threatened to "liberate" blacks in the south. A succession of South American leaders warned they would tolerate no interference.

Bitterness and tension eased in the late '60s until it appeared no negotiating room was left.

Now there are small signs of a break-through.

From the South African viewpoint it is one result of Prime Minister John Vorster's "outward looking" foreign policy of mutual cooperation and aid for friendly black neighbors. This was first outlined more than two years ago. Skeptics suggested that Vorster aimed at creating a ring of neutralized buffer nations around South Africa and economically dependent on South Africa.

Foreign Minister Edgar Muller indicates Pretoria is still sensitive on this point. He told political meeting:

"We want our neighbors to become our friends voluntarily. We do not want an iron curtain around South Africa. We want to establish a friendly circle of free, independent states in this part of Africa."

Geography puts the former British territories of Botswana, Lesotho and Swaziland into South Africa's economic orbit.

His proposal. A similar number of nations rejected the idea.

Official silence greeted the plan in Pretoria, but several African specialists clearly hope for the best. If nothing else, they are available for election as president of the U.N. General Assembly for 1971.

If chosen for the prestigious but largely ceremonial post he would retain his position as foreign minister, Malik said.

"The retiring president of the assembly is Edward Hambro of Norway."

Malik Bid
JAKARTA (AP) — Adam Malik, foreign minister of Indonesia, said today he is available for election as president of the U.N. General Assembly for 1971.

Malik said he is available for election as president of the U.N. General Assembly for 1971.

Travelers Ask Auto Rate Hike In Bay State
BOSTON (AP) — Travelers Insurance Co., the largest underwriter of automobile policies in Massachusetts, has filed an overall 10.4 per cent rate increase for fire, theft and collision insurance, it became known Wednesday.

The increase was filed last week with Insurance Commissioner C. Eugene Parman and asked for a 24.7 per cent increase in comprehensive or fire and theft coverage, and a 3 per cent increase in collision rates, a spokesman for the company said.

Parmen was not available for comment, but spokesman for his office said they were unaware of the filing.

The state Supreme Judicial Court on Nov. 11 ruled unconstitutional a mandatory reduction in public liability reduction in fire theft, and collision rates ordered by the legislature as part of the state's new so-called insurance law.

Should Parman approve Travelers request it would take effect Jan. 1, said the spokesman at the company's home office in Hartford, Conn.

Pesticide Label Lingo Held Over Dropout's Head
WASHINGTON (AP) — A government-sponsored study of pesticide labels was held over a dropout's head.

"While most terms were understandable," the report said, "a few were difficult to understand—such as 'forms', 'herbicide', 'control' and 'fungicide'."

Other comments included: "Label writers and evaluators should test label messages for reading ease among intended users. Reading-ease scores should match educational levels of intended audiences."

"The personal characteristics of the individual that influence his ability to understand label terms should serve as starting points in the search for relevant questions about the potential average user."

"The pesticide label maker should be audience-oriented, rather than product- or seller-oriented."

The report said advertisements on pesticide labels should be abandoned if they take the place of information more important to the user.

Open the door, Richard.

How do you tell the difference between one dishwasher and another?

Waste King Universal dishwashers have the simplest test ever. Just open the door.

The tank and door are stainless steel—can't chip, peel or rust. In fact, the more it's used, the brighter and shinier it gets.

See the two stainless steel wash arms. One for each basket. (Like two dishwashers in one.)

Notice the other little goodies. Like the fingers in the lower basket. Each one is curled to prevent plates from nesting together. And see how far apart the upper and lower baskets are—for big plates and small glasses. Now step back and appreciate the fact that all those with stainless steel parts carry a 20-year corrosion guarantee. And the entire dishwasher is protected with Waste King's Factory Service warranty.

Post Office 'Bends' Rule On Mailing Lottery Data

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal law prohibiting the mailing of information on lotteries, but the state-run lottery is a new-sightly in the case of drawings spokesman.

To send any other information on state-run lotteries in New York and New Hampshire, the Post Office has agreed to overlook "news stories based on winners" that may appear in mail editions of newspapers.

That said, a Post Office spokesman, is the only exception.

"News stories based on winners of the lotteries have been a participant purchase a ticket."

Thus the so-called lucky lotteries are careful not to run number sweepstakes, mailed aol of the federal law.

Operators of illegal lotteries using gimmick escape the lottery provision.

Enforcement of the anti-lottery law in the case of the state-sanctioned drawings has been fairly simple, the spokesman said.

Both New York and New Hampshire have consulted the Post Office on various questions on use of the mail in operating lotteries," the spokesman said. "We have had little difficulty working things out."

Violations of the ban on mailing lottery information make up a tiny percentage of the Postal Inspection Service's caseload, in part because operators of the few legitimate lotteries are careful not to run number sweepstakes, mailed aol of the federal law.

Both New York and New Hampshire have consulted the Post Office on various questions on use of the mail in operating lotteries," the spokesman said. "We have had little difficulty working things out."

Violations of the ban on mailing lottery information make up a tiny percentage of the Postal Inspection Service's caseload, in part because operators of the few legitimate lotteries are careful not to run number sweepstakes, mailed aol of the federal law.

Marcus Expected In Capitol Spot

HARTFORD (AP) — Edward Marcus of New Haven, who led the Democratic majority in the state senate for the past two sessions, will apparently be back in the capitol in another capacity next year.

Marcus, having failed both in his bid for the U.S. Senate and his attempt to run again for state senate seat, is still keeping a foot in the political door.

Members of the 1971 general assembly recently received letters from Marcus—on his official state senator stationery—trying to climb with his leg in a which said:

"Congratulations on your victory. I look forward to working with you in the future. Hope to see you soon. Best regards!"

Several legislators said they were rattled by the letters, which were similar to those which Marcus sent out before the 1969 session.

What Marcus reportedly will be doing next year is acting as a lobbyist for the city of New Haven. His services will apparently be donated without charge.
