Union Leader Says Rail Strike Spreads Across U.S. Thursday

By NEIL GILBERT (AP Labor Writer)
WASHINGTON (AP) — A union leader said today a national railway strike will start at 12:01 a.m., EST, Thursday.
The statement came from C. L. Dennis, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, in addressing 150 representatives of four unions as they prepared to go to Capitol Hill to persuade Congress not to accept President Nixon's proposal to postpone a strike for 45 more days.
Dennis' union is the largest of the four AFL-CIO unions representing about 300,000 workers in the wage dispute.
Dennis and other speakers at the rally said a strike movement would only encourage the railroad to stall in negotiations and the threatened strike for 45 days forced to meet management's as requested by Nixon.
But Mansfield said he could not see no point in such legislation unless Nixon was prepared to take action now.
The President has to take the 45-day delay.

Brazilians Intensify Search For Kidnaped Swiss Envoy

By FRANCISCO SILVA (Associated Press Writer)
RIO DE JANEIRO (AP) — As 200 troops and police searched today for the kidnaped Swiss ambassador to Brazil, an unconfirmed report of the police said they refused to make public the release of 48 to 70 political prisoners.
The report came from a source who said the demand was made in one of two documents purporting to come from the kidnapers. The documents were in the hands of the police, who said they refused to make public the release of 48 to 70 political prisoners.
Ambassador Giovanni Enrico Bucher, whose wealthy family owns a chain of resorts in Switzerland and Italy, was kidnaped Monday in the Rio suburb of Laranjeiras. His police bodyguard was shot three times; one bullet hit his spine...

Killing of Youth by GI Triggers Vietnam Riot

By MICHAEL PUTZEL (Associated Press Writer)
QUI NHON, Vietnam (AP) — Anti-American rioting raged Monday and today in this central coastal city following the fatal shooting of a Vietnamese high school student by an American soldier.
A 24-hour curfew was ordered but demonstrations, window-smashing and the burning of U.S. military vehicles continued. Some American troops have been injured by flying rocks, informants said.
Qui Nhon was placed off limits to all Americans stationed outside the city, and those in the city were ordered to stay in their quarters. As the disturbances continued into the night, American authorities ordered all Vietnamese employees at U.S. installations to leave them.
Informant U.S. sources said the demonstrators, estimated at between 2,500 and 4,000 today, were demanding that the American soldier who killed the youth be turned over to South Vietnamese authorities for immediate trial.
The soldier was not identified. He was in custody, and military officials were investigating the shooting.
"We're not about to turn him over" to the South Vietnamese, said one U.S. official. The United States has no status of forces agreement with the Vietnamese giving them jurisdiction over American military personnel under some circumstances as it has with South Korea, for example.
Informant sources said the student was killed Monday afternoon when a group of Vietnamese youths climbed aboard an American Army truck carrying flying boxes of Cratons and tried to steal some of them.
One of the two soldiers riding in the truck fired a shot in warning, the sources said. The shot killed a high school student standing nearby who was not involved in the looting attempt.
The dead student was from a Buddhist high school which has a politically conscious student body made up largely of An Quang Buddhists, the militant anti-government faction, the sources said.
Several students paraded the dead boy's body through the streets, chanting "Xankse Go Home" and attracting followers as they marched. Then school children began hurling rocks at U.S. soldiers, smashing the windows of American Jeeps and burning vehicles.
The demonstrations subsided Monday night but resumed this morning as students from other high schools in Qui Nhon, South Vietnam's fourth largest city, joined the rioting.
Some adult opponents of the South Vietnamese government also joined the demonstration. Police tried to disperse the demonstrators with riot gas, and some students were injured by police clubs.
The national police in the city were reinforced by militia and Vietnamese military police. By this evening no regular army forces had been brought in.
American officers met with the province chief and leaders of at least three student groups. The Americans assured them that the family of the dead youth will be compensated, but they made no promise concerning the soldier who shot him.
The firing continued about three or four minutes.
Q. What position were people in the ditch?
A. They were diving on top of each other, one of the mothers were protecting kids.
It was at that point, Dursi said, that Calley told him to shoot.

Calley Trial Witness Depicts My Lai Horror

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL (Associated Press Writer)
FT. BENNING, GA. (AP) — A member of Lt. William Calley's platoon testified today that Calley had let some soldiers guard some of the Vietnamese who had been flushed from their homes in My Lai that March 16, 1968, ordered them to be "taken care of" and that when Calley returned they started shooting them.
Dursi said he left the group at a village trail and heard firing behind him, chanting "Xankse Go Home" and attracting followers as they marched. Then school children began hurling rocks at U.S. soldiers, smashing the windows of American Jeeps and burning vehicles.
The demonstrations subsided Monday night but resumed this morning as students from other high schools in Qui Nhon, South Vietnam's fourth largest city, joined the rioting.

Gambling, Marijuana, Budgets: State Legislators Get an Earful

By DON MEIKLE (Associated Press Writer)
HARTFORD (AP) — From the problems of the cities to the difficulties of law enforcement to the current economic recession, the 1971 state legislature got an earful from a group of experts Monday.
The lawmakers were told that they have little choice but to boost the state budget by a two-year total of one billion dollars or more, and that they may be wise to legalize gambling and perhaps marijuana.
The comments about gambling and "pot" came from New Haven Police Chief James P. Aberra, who said the state should get in to the numbers business and run it itself.
Aberra also said he is "dangerously close" to a position in favor of making marijuana legal, but that as long as legal pot-smoking is so common in Connecticut, he said, that any police department with a good sense of priorities has almost given up trying to stamp it out.
In the discussion on education, State Representative-elect Irving Stolberg, D-New Haven, said he plans to seek legislation which would give teachers the right to strike.
A teacher at Quinnipiac College, Stolberg said, teachers should have the same rights as other labor groups as long as they have an employer-employee relationship with school boards.
Meanwhile, State Rep. Rufus Howe, R-Waterford, took the opportunity to discuss the problems of the cities and the state as being at the mercy of national policies and trends.
Because of the number of young people entering the labor market—and other factors—it would take an increase of 8 percent in the gross national product to keep unemployment at its present level of nearly 6 percent nationwide, Tobin said.
The problems of the cities are so serious, Vaughn said, that there is not one mayor in one major city who can see his way clear to meeting his payroll in 1971.
"We're just keeping our heads above the water," said the former-Peace Corps director, who said there is less national support for a concerted attack on urban problems than there was two years ago.
"The people of the city are being abandoned by those in search of the good life," he said, "and they're taking the tax base with them."
"It's a time bomb," Vaughn said of the situation in city slums. "It's worsening."
In the panel discussion on Connecticut's economy, Yale economist James Tobin depicted the state as being at the mercy of national policies and trends.

In Hartford Teachers, Education Board Reach Tentative Agreement
HARTFORD (AP) — The Hartford Federation of Teachers and the Board of Education have reached tentative agreement on a new contract, union spokesmen revealed in a surprise announcement Monday night.
Word of the agreement came from Joseph Casella, a negotiator for the teachers, after a meeting with board negotiators. The meeting's advance billing indicated that the two sides expected only to reduce the number of issues separating them.
Details of the proposed pact were not revealed and were expected to remain secret until union teachers have had a chance to vote on it at a meeting scheduled for 8 p.m. Tuesday.
Meanwhile, school board members planned a meeting for Monday and were scheduled to meet...

Teachers, Board In Agreement

substitutes and teacher aides took the place of striking teachers.

WEST HAVEN (AP) — The Board of Education Monday accepted "conditionally" a teachers' union proposal to end a 12-week contract dispute centering on pay for teachers who took part in an 11-day strike in September.

The proposal would cost the teachers eight days' pay and two days of personal leave. It would also extend the school year by one day.

The proposal had been submitted last week by the West Haven Teachers' Association. A meeting Tuesday to vote on the plan, the board included the provision that their Monday action would be nullified if the union teachers vote down the proposal.

Hartford Guest Conductor Not a Russian After All

Igor Buketoff will be guest conductor of the Hartford Symphony Wednesday evening, offering a program that includes works by Beethoven, Mussorgsky, and Shostakovich. Probably you figure, as I did, "A Russian in an all-Russian program." But surprise, surprise! Igor Buketoff was born in Hartford.

His father was Russian, and in fact was the priest of a Russian Orthodox congregation at the time, and little Igor moved to New York City when he was only two years old, so he doesn't remember much about the town, but the fact is, he is a native New Yorker.

His musical talent manifested itself at an early age, and he was on the faculty of Juillard at the age of 20, remaining there until 1942, when he left to teach conducting and for several years was the conductor of the young people's concert by the New York Philharmonic.

At present he is the musical director of the St. Paul (Minn.) Opera and does a good deal of conducting in the area. He is also a member of the Rockefeller Foundation.

He is interviewed here, and he said he would have composed in the U.S.

Shainwold on Bridge

People sometimes ask how good a player Ely Shainwold was. (For the benefit of those who just came in, Colburn was the monarch of bridge in the early 20's.) Colburn was as good a player as he needed to be to play on top. The game has advanced since his time, but if he had maintained his interest in bridge he would have kept pace with the best players.

Neither side vulnerable. Opening lead — King of Spades. Colburn could not reproach his wife Josephine, for taking him out of the double of four spades. Since West would have lost only one trick, Colburn was not a player as he needed to be to play on top.

Signs of Things To Come

Editor's Note: Why does the United States face an energy crisis? The nation's tremendous need for energy had outstripped the ability to provide it.

The nation which put four men on the moon hasn't got enough electrical generating capacity to insure sufficient heat, light and power for its cities.

The nation richest in natural resources and the technology to utilize them has not been able to keep up with its own demand for natural gas, fuel oil and coal.

An Associated Press study of the energy crisis in the United States shows that the nation's demand for electric power doubles every 10 years while the supply grows only 10 percent.

List of Firms With Problems

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here is a selected list of electric utility companies experiencing severe fuel shortages and price increases, with descriptions by the companies of their fuel problems.

Glendale, Calif., has experienced a 200 per cent increase in the price of natural gas since the first of the year. Air pollution laws require sulphur content of no more than 2 per cent. The utility needs 200,000 barrels of the five-year-old fuel, but has been able to buy only 100,000 barrels of low-sulphur oil and 100,000 barrels of oil with 1.5 per cent sulphur content. The deficit is from 100,000 to 200,000 gallons.

Colorado Springs, Colo., fuel prices have gone up 50 per cent and the utility has been unable to get deliveries from its supplier. The utility normally contracts with a number of power plants and is seeking fuel oil as a standby in case of gas shortage.

Norwich, Conn., fuel oil prices are up 50 per cent with quality available which is a backer of the contract and is seeking fuel oil as a standby in case of gas shortage.

Henderson, Ky., coal prices are up 60 per cent due to mine breakdowns. The city's electric utility says there is an inadequate coal supply for peak power demand periods.

Linden Fire

NEW YORK (AP) — Humble Oil & Refining Co. said Monday the disaster and electric utility is limited to burning coal with a 1.5 per cent sulphur content and quality of coal is deteriorating. The utility is limited to burning coal with a 1.5 per cent sulphur content but cannot get a contract for oil beyond the present commitment which runs out Dec. 31.

Anthony, Kan., reports a 10 per cent gas rate increase coupled with a supply of fuel oil limited to six days.

Chicago (AP) — The floodlights that illuminated a Chicago landmark—the Wrigley Building—for more than 40 years have been turned off at night for the first time since World War II.

The reason, Wrigley officials said Monday, is that a building above the floodlights is under construction and is being demolished.

The lighting of the Wrigley Building was a tradition that began in 1924. The lights were turned off after the start of World War II. Whether the lights will come on again for the duration of the building's reconstruction has not been decided.

Directors Shy Away In Computer Dispute

The Manchester Board of Directors has declined to arbitrate a dispute between municipal and school officials, involved in data processing activities, and the town's Advisory Data Processing Committee.

The dispute concerns a recommendation by data processing officials that the town sell its services to outside towns, notably Glastonbury and Wethersfield.

The Advisory Committee is opposed to the suggestion, on the basis that the town has no surplus to sell its services and going into competition with private enterprises.

Town Manager Robert Weiss, during a two-hour meeting last night (it was to have been a half hour session) explained the reasons for recommending sale of town data processing services.

He said that Manchester Community College, which has been contributing $28,000 per year for data processing service, is pulling out of the program next fiscal year (1971-72).

With an estimated $143,500 budget expected next year, to be divided equally between town government and school board, sale of services to the two towns could help offset the $28,000 lost from MCC services, he said.

Not Experts

After arguments on the merits and pitfalls of selling the services, Director Wayne Mantz commented, "I and I think most of us, feel kind of frustrated. The directors are not experts in computer operation."

"Here we are, a legislative body, being asked to arbitrate an argument between the operators of a data processing system, and an advisory committee, starting us in the face!" he said.

His reply moved Mayor Nathan Agostinelli to ask, "Can this town afford to do-it-yourself, data processing, with the cost of starting us in the face?"

Regional Services

This time Town Manager Robert Weiss replied, "That's what we're talking regional operation and sale of our services."

He conceded that, in the event the Manchester service were sold, there would be no net gain to the town for the first six months, due to the cost of programming and personnel. "It would show a return later," he said.

Paul Jutner, director of Manchester's computer center, said that, with MCC pulling out of the program, the cost of converting the system would cost as much for Manchester alone as it would if Glastonbury and Wethersfield were included. "We could split the costs by selling the services," he said.

Selling Services

Leo Kwash, chairman of the advisory committee, recommended a study, before a decision is made on selling the services. "There may be problems," he warned. He recommended also that a study be made of the possibility of acquiring a more up-to-date data processing system. He predicted that educational data counts will be offered shortly on more modern systems than the one now being used locally.

Business in anticipation of retiring.

He had also resigned last Jan. 1 as chairman of the Manchester Redevelopment Agency, a desire to leave the duties. He had headed the agency the 10 years since its formation in February 1959. Keith guided the North End Redevelopment project—now almost completed—from its inception.

Keith Name to Remain

Despite the change in ownership, the store will retain the Keith family name, dropping only the initials "G. B." from its title.

That will keep a partial link with the past, begun when George B. Keith, Everett Keith's father, founded the firm in 1896 in a building still standing at 14-16 Eldridge St. (now apartments) then known as the Stenberg Building.

After a short time at that address, he purchased the building at 529 Main St. (now the site of the Mary Lewis Shop) where the furniture company was located about 20 years.

In 1921, Keith bought the present building at Main St. from St. from Cheney Brothers, which had abandoned plans to turn it over to school use. The company has remained there since—a year short of a half century.

Everett recalls that his father—located at the foot of the Main St. business district in the days before almost everybody had his own car—came up with a catchy slogan calculated to appeal to the thrifty and he easily remembered:

"It Surely Pays to Walk a Ways" appeared in company ads and kept the handle turning on Keith's front door for several years.

Everett Keith, born Aug. 22, 1909, in Manchester, attended local grammar schools, Wilbraham Academy in Wilbraham, Mass., and Antioch College in Ohio, where he studied business administration before joining the Keith firm in 1927.

Fellow Alumnus

Coincidentally, Blau is also a Wilbraham graduate, but graduated 14 years after Keith, in 1925. Blau attended the academy in 1909. Blau attended the academy at the same time as Atty. General David Keith of Manchester, may become an annual event."

Save-A-Life Sunday, Dec. 27 Civic Clubs Compete In Blood Donations

A blood competition for members of civic clubs will be held on Save-A-Life Sunday, Dec. 27, from noon to 5:30 p.m. at a Red Cross Bloodmobile at Manchester High School.

The Red Cross staff will keep a record of members donating, and the club with the highest percentage of donors will receive an award. Those who cannot give blood because of medical reasons may send a substitute who will be counted for the member's club.

Robert Fuller of the advisory board of the American Red Cross is coordinating the event. The Kiwanis Club of Manchester is issuing the challenge to other civic clubs. The Manchester Rotary Club has verbally accepted. Letters will be sent to the Manchester Lodge of Elks, the Civitan Club, the Lions Club, the Jaycees and the Kiwanis Club of Manchester, wishing to participate may contact Fuller at Colonial Board Room, 415 Park St. Donors will not be limited to members of participating clubs.

"We want the largest possible turnout," Fuller said. "No appointments are necessary."

When he was asked if the program would become an annual event, he replied, "Let's see what happens. If it turns out to be popular and meets the goal, it may become an annual event."

New Indictments Sought Court To Dismiss Charges In Bank Robbery Case

Various bank robbery charges against five persons, three from Manchester, will be dismissed soon according to Assistant U.S. Attorney F. Mac Buckley. The indictment against Greenough and Kenneth Grant, the charges will be dismissed after approval of the action is received from the Department of Justice in Washington.

Defense attorneys representing the five had filed motions to dismiss the charges in which the legality of the original arrests was questioned.

The dismissal of the charges of the five in Las Vegas shortly after indictments against them were handed down on Sept. 18.

Buckley told the court that the arrest and search involved was illegal because there was no sufficient probable cause.

The $11,388 seized at the time Robert and Carol Grant were arrested will be returned and cannot be used as evidence in the case.

Hearing Set on Location of Road Section

Coventry

The Connecticut Department of Transportation will hold a public hearing Thursday night at 8 at Coventry High School.

Purpose of the session is to discuss a proposed corridor location for a section of Rt. 275 from the vicinity of Old Eagleville Rd. in Coventry to Rt. 27 in Mansfield, a distance of approximately a mile.

The Department officials will present a general corridor location for the improvement of the road based on planning criteria such as coordination with existing proposed land use and other local planning objectives, compatibility with the environment and various social factors, engineering controls, construction costs and traffic volume.

In addition to these criteria and prior to the determination of the corridor location, all views and comments presented at the hearing will be considered, and should be submitted to the Bureau within two weeks of the hearing.

The improvement of Rt. 275 in this area would consist basically of replacing two narrow bridges, one over the William River, and the other carrying the Central Vermont Railroad over the highway. The new alignment would also bypass the sharp curves on Rt. 275 as it presently exists.

The proposed corridor would start about 100 feet southeast of Old Eagleville Rd. and would gradually swing to the south of existing Rt. 275 and Old Eagleville Rd.

It would then proceed down the hillside, cross the river and the railroad, and join Route 32 about 180 feet south of the existing intersection with South Eagleville Rd.

To provide safe sight conditions at this intersection, a short section of Route 32 would be reconstructed.

Once the corridor determination has been made, the present tentative schedule anticipates a design public hearing early in 1972, and advertising for construction bids late in 1972.

Homeowners, residential tenants and businesses where occupancy will be affected by the acquisition of rights of way for the new construction may be eligible for supplemental payments.

Homeowners may be eligible for a supplemental payment in addition to the price offered by the state for the property to be acquired.

Residential tenants affected by the highway improvement may be eligible for supplemental rental payments also.

Homeowners, tenants and businesses are afforded relocation assistance by the Department of Transportation.

General Tel Plans Move to Stamford

STAMFORD (AP) — General Telephone and Electronics announced Monday it would move its world headquarters from New York to Stamford, completing the move by March, 1973.

Some 1,000 persons will be employed in Stamford by the firm which plans to occupy, upon completion, a 10-story office complex in Stamford Forum, part of an extensive downtown redevelopment project.

The firm, known as the "General system," is parent corporation of more than 40 subsidiaries and listed 1969 sales and revenues at $3.3 billion.

President Leslie H. Warner said construction of the new building will begin next March. The firm is the first to announce it will relocate in the development.

The move announcement from Warner came as he addressed some 100 covered leaders. He said the search for a new New York City sites and possibilities in other parts of the country.

The decision was made to locate in Fairfield County in October, he said.

Six subsidiaries are to be housed here are GTE&E Service Corp., GTE&E Laboratories; GTE&E International, Inc.; GTE&E Information Systems, Inc. and Syll Communications, Inc. and Syll, Warner said.

The General System is ninth largest among U.S. corporations in terms of employment. It has about 170,000 employees.

The firm occupied its present offices on New York's Third Avenue in 1929 and has since had to rent space in other New York buildings to accommodate growth, Warner said.

HARTFORD (AP) — Indictments in wholesale of the state gambling figures in Connecticut next year, the head of the Department said most of a federal crime strike force said here Monday.

Edward P. Harrington, attorney in charge of the New England Organized Crime and Racketeering Section of the Justice Department, said most of the arrests would be made in larger cities like Hartford, New Haven, Bridgeport and Waterbury. But he said the crack-down will hit some rural gambling operations as well.

He declined to say how many indictments would be sought but said "there will be an average of 100."

Harrington is one of a group of specialists in Connecticut to tell judges, prosecutors, police and government officials about organized crime in weekend confidential sessions being held in Hartford and Norwalk.

He said the mass arrests next year would be made on the basis of evidence gathered by his strike force through wiretapping and undercover work.

Harrington said his strike force is concentrating its efforts in Connecticut, Massachusetts and Rhode Island because this is where organized gambling and loan sharking is believed to be concentrated.

Business IV Zone Adopted As Zoning Rules Amendment

The Planning and Zoning Commission called through one of its shortest and least controversial sessions in recent months last night. Several businessmen from the Broad St. area spoke in favor of its proposed new Business IV Zone and not one objector appeared.

The commission later unanimously adopted the Business IV Zone in the form of an amendment to the zoning regulations to be designated Article II, Section 8E.

The Business IV Zone is to be applied specifically to the area on the east side of Broad St. between Center St. and W. Middle Type, east to the railroad tracks which is presently zoned industrial.

The intent of the change is to permit the mixture of business and industrial uses that has developed along Broad St. over the years to remain, and still conform to an industrial Zone regulation adopted in September.

The latter regulation separates business uses from industrial development, and was designed to guard against business Christman.

Adoption of the industrial regulation had the effect of making all the business uses along Broad St. non-conforming, and the commission at first proposed changing the area to Business II as a way of solving the problem.

But several persons with business interests in the area later opposed that idea, on the grounds that 10 per cent of the use there are industrial in nature, and that with a change from Business III they would become non-conforming.

A new Business IV Zone was then proposed by Town Planner J. Eric Potter as a solution. The effect of this was to make no change at all. The amendment was written so as to allow all legal land uses except residential, plus some industries considered to be dangerous or hazardous — such as manufacture of explosives or lead melting, for example.

Potter emphasized again last night that the intent in creating the Business IV Zone was "to give all legal uses of the Broad St. area."

Appearing in support of the proposal were William Stanek, Stanek Electronics; Joseph Barrett Plumbing Supply; Thomas Collins, Collins Construction Co.; Atty. John D. LaBelle, representative developer Alexander Jarvis.

LaBelle termed the Business IV Zone "a sensible regulation for that area." Both he and Potter suggested that the commission in the future may find other sections of town where Business IV would be applicable.

Hoist for Cash

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — A crane hoisted two men 80 feet into the air Monday and they say they won't come down until 10,000 cruticles are sold.

The cakes are being sold to raise money for support of Wichita's public educational television station, KPBS. The station depends on contributions to pay its way. Officials have said they must raise $85,000 by Jan. 1 or go off the air.

The Rainbow Baking Co. agreed to make the 22 cakes and give KPBS 85 cents for each one sold. About 50,000 were sold in 10 days.

To dramatize the drive, Dale Outas, station manager, and DeWayne Johnston, bakery sales representative, borrowed a semi camper, stocked it with food, and climbed to the 86-foot level.

Victim of Economy

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — For the first time in 48 years, there will be no official, lighted Christmas trees on the Michigan State University campus.

W. Michael Egan, special assistant to the MSU executive vice president, said the decision was made as an economy measure.

Wrong Role

NEW YORK (AP) — Mayor John V. Lindsay says he'll go along with naming a narrator in a musical production of "A Christmas Carol," but he'd rather play the role of Scrooge, the crusty old tightwad.

"I'd be the best Scrooge in town. I have the urge to be Scrooge," the mayor said as he took time out Monday from his budget-planning chores to rehearse his part at the Robert F. Kennedy Theater for Children.

Lindsay will narrate the first of nine performances of the Charles Dickens' classic, which annually draws an audience of 30,000 youngsters.

Top level Democrats Atty.

General Robert Killian and Secretary of State-elect Mrs. Gloria Schaffer will attend the festivities as will outgoing Lt. Gov. Attilio Frasnelli and State Representative William B. Dickens.

The largest donation was $200 at which was raised by a testimonial dinner in Rockville on Oct. 24.

Houley recorded only one $200 donation, and several of $100. His personal expenditures amounted to $247.24 accounted for mostly by automobile mileage, gasoline and meals.

Carruthers' campaign showed several large donations, according to the report filed by his campaign treasurer, Laurence Miller. The Vernon Republican Town Committee donated $500.
