The Half-Justice Decision As the Supreme Court decision with regard to the 18-year-old voter comes into the life of the nation, it seems likely to promote one of the most traumatic and trying experiences American democracy has yet had to weather. It is going to be hard to accept, hard to comply with, hard to live with, The first thing to be noted about it is that it evolved, in the end, as have some other historic decisions by the

That one man, Justice Black, was located in between four of his colleagues who thought the voting age action by Congress constitutional, and four of his colleagues who thought it wasn't con-

He divided himself again, until he himself could be on both sides of the issue. colleagues who thought Congress could fix the voting age, but he voted with them only with regard to voting for federal officers, such as President and members of Congress. The second Justice Black voted with the other four colleagues to decide that Congress didn't have the legal right to fix voting age where voting for state and community offices was concerned. What happened at the judicial top of the national structure, then, was that half a Justice became the deciding factor in a decision which affects the political privilege of millions - the millions of young people who would be entitled to vote, under his ruling, for federal offices, the millions of young people who won't be entitled to vote, under his ruling, for state offices, and, beyond all the 18-year-olds themselves, the great millions of adult voters who had their own opinions on this question, many of them expressed in official referendum votes which, being the most direct voice of the people conceivable, should rate top power and importance in a democracy. It now becomes, in a state like Connecticut for instance, a conflict between the will and opinion and vote of this half

Justice up on the Supreme Court and the vote of the people of Connecticut themselves, as that vote was cast on the voting machines last Nov. 3. Then the people of Connecticut voted that, for Connecticut, the legal voting ige should remain at 21 years of age. That, when it came, stood as a and unjustness of decision involved so far, what has been noted so far is almost nothing compared to what is about

Not only does the half-Justice Black decision negate the expressed will of voters in the states. It is also likely to prove, in the weeks shead, a terrible dictate to those voters and to their state legislatures to reverse themselves and do what they themselves have previously voted not to do. The only practical way to resolve the complication at the voting booths which would result from giving the 18-year-olds only half of their voting privilege will be, it seems likely to be concluded, to rush through measures giving them the right o vote for everybody. If the various states now do this, they will be doing it not because they believe in the vote for the 18-year-olds, but because they do not know how otherwise to avoid intolerable expense and confuion at election time. Observe, at the conclusion of all this, that the original move to give the 18year-old votes has surely been, from the start, one of the most shallow put-ons in the history of American political hypocrisy, a thing bounced back and forth between candidates seeking the easiest and cheapest kind of political promise anyone could make, and you now in is something fully deserved by and interested members of the 18-year wanted the privilege, and who never deserved to become either a political or a

* E 0 . W MASS IN A STAB

The former stable, now the Catholic Church of St. Maurice near Ft. Lauderdale, which parishioners working in their spare time have cleared of stalls and hayloft.

What was once a thoroughbred racehorse stable, near Fort Lauderdale, Fla., is now the Catholic Church of St. Maurice. A wooden altar occupies the former tack room. The clear voice of St. Maurice's pastor, Father David Russell, booms through the rafters and echoes off the walls at two masses each Sunday.

Father Russell arrived here in June 1970 to found the parish of St. Maurice. The cheerful young priest and his stable church attract parishioners of all ages. Retirees sit side by side on borrowed chairs with long-haired teen-agers, while a pretty miniskirted girl plays her guitar and sings a hymn from the altar during Working in their spare time, the parishioners themselves have dismantled the stalls and hayloft. There is still more "restoring" to be done to the stable, however. And construction is underway to turn the area behind the stable into a parking lot.

Father Russell hopes the simplicity and honesty of the church in the stable will have a wide appeal. "After all," he says, "the first church was a stable. We are kneeling at the door."

Like children, men often play games with Christianity. The only source of informa-tion on its origin and nature is the Bible. Yet men call themselves Christians while blithely ignoring those por-tions of Scripture at variance with their religious traditions. One is reminded of King Jeholakim who ruled Judah at the time of Jeremiah. Upon hearing read a few lines of the phophet's message of rebuke and warning from God, the King cut the roll with a knife and threw it into the fire on the hearth.

If the Bible is not the authority in Christianity, no one really knows what this religion is. Everyone becomes his own guide, and the result is spiritual anarchy. Reason demands that if one is committed to Christianity, he is committed to its author, Jesus Christ; and this means to his measurers as well to his mesengers as well—

Texas (10-0) vs. Notre Dame (9-1)

Darrel Royal's Longhorns have scored more points than any college team in the nation this year. Their ground game is relentless. Steve Worster, of course, is the workhorse behind an offensive line that has been superb.
Tackle Bobby Wuensch has been outstanding. Defensively, end Bill Atessis and linebacker Scott Henderson have stood out. Texas comes into the Cotton Bowl stronger than it was last year at this time. The upset loss to Southern Cal may have brought the Irish back to earth. One thing that came out of it was the act that quarterback Joe Theismann can't win games by himself. He was the individual star of that game, but the defense had, perhaps, its poorest game in many Notre Dame seasons. The Theismann-to-Tom-Gatewood passing combination will be clicking again, but it appears doubt-

Rose Parade Features 59 Floral Floats

Six states other than California and five areas beyond the continental United States will field 11 of the 59 floral floats participating in the 1971 Pasa-Tournament of Roses Parade to be colorcast live on the NBC Television Network Friday.

"We have placed additional emphasis this year on national and international participation in the parade," explained A: Lewis Shingler, president of the Pasadena Tournament of Roses Association, which sponsors the Rose Parade and the Rose Bowl football game.

"We feel that since television coverage has added greatly to the appreciation of the Rose Parade on national and international levels, one of the most significant contributions we can make to mutual understanding is to extend a welcoming hand to entries from across the country and around the world," he said.

State fielding floral floats include Georgia, Ohio, Oregon, Minnesota, Missouri and Texas.

Representing more distant lands will be floats from British Columbia and Alberta, Canada; Mexico; the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico and the U.S. Virgin Islands.

The cities and counties of San Diego and San Francisco, Calif., also will field floats.

Float themes include: 'Georgia, Wonderland of Fun''; 'Dragons Are Only Make Be-Heve" from Portland, Ore.; "Fun in Four Seasons" sponsored by the Minnesota Mero Tour-Tourist ouncil; "Mommy, Please Read to Me" from St. Louis, Mo.; and "Most Fun of All-Fiesta Flambeau" from San Antonio, Tex.

Ohio will be represented by the Ohio State University float. Later on New Year's Day, Ohio State will carry the ball against the Pacific Eight's Stanford University in the Rose Bowl football game, which will be carried coast-tocoast exclusively on the NBC television and radio networks (4:30 p.m. to conclusion).

Eight high school bands from six states will participate in "Tournament of Roses Band-Time," a music-with-marching exhibition to be colorcast exclusively on the NBC Television Network immediately prior to the 1971 Tournament of Roses Parade Friday, Jan. 1. States fielding bands include California, Hawaii, Kansas, Massachusetts, New York and

The 45-minute "Band-Time," to be hosted by Michael Landon of the "Bonanza" series, will be part of NBC-TV's 90minute "New Year's Parade Salute" special (10-11:30 a.m.) leading into coverage of the Rose Parade (11:30 a.m. to 1:45 p.m.) and the subsequent Rose Bowl and Orange Bowl football classics.

The youth - oriented pre-parade special will originate on both coasts, with Landon reporting on band action from Pasadena, Calif., and Bert Parks and Vonda Kay Van Dyke co-hosting highlights of the annual Junior Orange Bowl Parade from Coral Gables, Fla.

"Band-Time" entrants, all of which also will march in the Rose Parade, include Hilo High School Marching Band from Hawaii, Leavenworth School Pioneer Marching Band from Kansas, Plymouth Carver Regional High School Band from Massachusetts, Huntington Thunderers from New York, and C.E. King High School Band from Houston, Tex.

Representing California will be Granada Hills High School Band from Los Angeles, Cupertino High School Pioneer Band from Los Gatos, and Glendora High School Tartan Band.

Each of the bands will be evaluated on the basis of marching, maneuvering and musical skills and awards will be presented to outstanding entrants. The judges will be three musical directors Frank Wright of Purdue, Kelly James of University of California at Los Angeles, and Arthur C. Bartner of University of California.

Also participating in 'Band-Time' exhibition, not competing for awards, will be McDonald's All American High School Marching Band comprising musicians each of the 50 states and Wash-
