MONTEVIDEo, Uruguay (AP) — The Tupamaro urban guerrillas assassinated a detective today and challenged the government to negotiate the release of kidnapped British Ambassador Geoffrey Jackson.

Another Tupamaro offer, to release the Brazilian consul for $1 million ransom, expires today, Dias Gomides' wife has been trying to raise the money but apparently has not succeeded.

Breaking a three-day self-imposed fast, the Tupamaros announced Sunday that they would be turned over to British police.

The Tupamaro communiqué said the rebels were withdrawing their offer to release Fry, 60, for 100 days of suspension of civil liberties to help in the search for the captives.

LONDON (AP) — A British secret service agent has left for London Sunday, Embassy officials said she was obeying her husband's instructions to go home if he was kidnapped.

Red Threat on Wane in Viet; On Rise in Laos, Laird Says

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird said today the Communist threat in South Vietnam is waning, but the threat is rising in Laos.

Laird said the United States has made a genuine effort to cut its military presence in South Vietnam, but he said the current target is a ceiling of 24,000 U.S. troops.

Laird also told a news conference that the United States is committed to the Vietnamization program, but he said the current target is a ceiling of 24,000 U.S. troops.

"THE WAY HEARD IT"
by John Gruber

My column last week, about musical criticism, elicited quite a bit of response. It would seem that a good many people were surprised to find that my reviews are not just arbitrary expressions of my reactions to a performance, but based on standards commonly in use by critics and musicians everywhere. Consequently I'm going to expand upon the subject at this time. In the last analysis, the standard of performance is the human voice. This is because it is the oldest musical instrument we have, as well as the most natural one. Just about everybody has a voice, but only a few have fine voices.

A truly great voice is a God-given phenomenon, but it has to be trained and its owner must have intelligence to use it artistically. Unfortunately, all too many concert and opera singers are satisfied merely with the timbre, and know nothing about the technical and artistic problems of the voice.

Training starts, or at least should start, with learning to read music. Many singers can't read music worth a darn, and this is a serious defect. It is not enough to have to teach the singers their roles by rote. Instrumentalists are prone to claim that they don't want to take time out from a career to go back and learn to read music. Be that as it may, it is a fact that German instrumentalists cannot read music. It is a fact that only rarely are singers capable of reading music.

After learning to read a part, or having it cooked up by a pedagogue, it is in order to get it into their heads, because the problem of breath-holding is a problem of the brain. This should lead a woodwind instrument, such as the flute or clarinet, to be played as if it were a part of the brain. The popular singer is the biggest offender in matters of breath control. Perry Como breathes wherever he breathes, it is not his business to breathe. It is his business to breathe in the hymn line, "I stand on a rock by Jesus" and you see what I mean.

The singer has to develop breath capacity to handle the longest of phrases. This is incidentally, usually occur in Handel, although Richard Strauss has written some extremely long ones. If the singer is running out of breath at the end of a phrase, you hear wobble in pitch. This doesn't bother most people, but it bothers those who really care. After all, the composer didn't indicate a change in pitch here.

The next thing is diction. Except in the very few cases where voices are used without words (as for example in the "Humming Chorus" in Madame Butterfly) the words are as important as the music. It is relatively easy to sing in the throat and produce the "pear-shaped" sound so common in modern pop, but these sounds can only be made on the vowels.

To understand vowels, we have to understand the consonants. People frequently ask me why "pop" singers can be understood when opera singers cannot. This is because the pop singer usually sings softly, and the notes, being sensitive to explosive sounds such as "p," "t," "k," and so on, emphasize these artificially above the actual balance, and makes the words more intelligible. When you get a "velvet" like Ethel Merman, you get the words without artificial reinforcement, but the vocal chords have to force the diaphragm out of the vowel sounds to push them up into the mouth cavity where the consonants are produced.

The result is a horrible "pop" sound, but it is a horrible sound which is not a vocal chord, and much of Judy Garland's 1,000 bills stemmed from this sort of vocal production. She early began to hear her voice, and I, for one, believe that she lost control of herself when she realized her career was about to go down the drain.

In this country most opera is sung in the original language. This means that if you don't understand the original language

Utilities, Fuel Tax May Go To Governor

WATERBURY (AP)—The Waterbury area is expected to be the first to have a sales tax on utilities and fuel and a one-cent fuel tax on gasoline.

Some of the recommendations of the task force will seek elimination of the tax on electricity, and the elimination of the tax on gasoline. The task force also recommends that the state take over the utility tax on electricity, and that the state take over the tax on gasoline.

The newspaper said the task force's recommendations will be sent to the governor for his consideration. The task force also recommends that the state take over the utility tax on electricity, and that the state take over the tax on gasoline.

Despite the gain for the state, the newspaper said, the state will be paying about $28 million less in state taxes and the state will be saving about $28 million more in state taxes.

Another beneficiary of a tax on utilities would be the state's insurance industry, which would pay some $30 million to return to its former position. The state's insurance industry would pay some $30 million to return to its former position.

his science cannot persist into almost total explanation, and potential regulation, of the processes of the brain. Eventually — at the end of a very long eventually — man will come close to the capacity to control his own thought and feeling and adjustment to life through chemical means.

If he cannot do this, he will be reduced to a state of helplessness. That might be the apocalyptic expectation. More soberly, our progress toward analysis and control of our own chemical brain processes is going to be slow and gradual and not come to any quick dramatic head.

But we are going to be doing, even while it is still far short of a goal, and knowledge is its full potential powers. It is going to be re-shaping, re-weighting, and re-directing our approaches to almost all those social and political problems which involve the behavior of human beings, individually and collectively.

We have all been forced to take, as the most formidable block to the advancement of human affairs, the annoying old bromide which says "you can't change human nature" and until you do, nothing else can really do very much good. Well, suppose we do concede, as we have to, that we haven't succeeded in changing human nature very much, not with our philosophies, or our religions, or our increasing leisure and luxury. That may be what the record says up to now, but it is not what may be.

Tomorrow we may find that we are indeed able to change human nature, merely by introducing certain chemicals into its brain processes. The great ability we have to do this, what kind of people we really want to be. And, in such a case, why not let some committee of Congress? Some committee of clergy, philosophers and psychiatrists? What a frightening, confusing, demoralizing, thrilling, inspiring, magnificent prospect, if we really can change human nature!

Clarion Call To Belt-Tightening... Gov. Thomas J. Meskill's inaugural address was not merely the privilege of the victor over the defeated, but the pro- nouncement and establishment of an international law to which we were intentionally pledging our own future obedience.

With all such conscience obligation in the background, we now find ourselves engaged in prosecuting some of our own soldiers on charges of war crimes committed in Vietnam. This is at least a partial response to our conscience. But, at the same time, it is possible to claim that there have been other acts in the war, and other policies applied to the war, which could also be interpreted as criminal by the standards of the Nuremberg Trials or the standard of the Yamashita trial. And General Telford Taylor, who was chief United States prosecutor at Nuremberg, and who has more recently been a severe critic of the war in Vietnam, is now coming out with a book which infers that General William H. Miller, who was the commander in Vietnam while some of these alleged war crimes were being committed, might be just as subject to trial as was Yamashita, who was hanged because he did not prevent his troops from committing criminal acts in the field.

It has also been suggested that, by the Nuremberg standards, such American civilian officials as former Secretary of State Dean Rusk, former Secretary of Defense Robert McNamara, and former Presidential assistants McGeorge Bundy and Walt W. Rostow, considered by many the chief architects of our full intervention in Vietnam, could be considered eligible for prosecution as war criminals. Such things are not going to happen unless North Vietnam vaults to such a victory it is handing down peace terms in Washington. But the issue is present in both the prosecution and the defense of the alleged atrocities at My Lai. We, by no means have back, free and uninvolved, the commitment we made in international law about war when we took part in the Nuremberg and Yamashita verdicts.

Conquering The Dark... When brain chemistry in the laboratory gets to the point where it can announce that it has discovered a method for regulating fear of the dark that, for the most part, that brain chemistry has now established an unshakable position in human affairs, and that there is no longer any imaginable reason why

Retooling Agnew

WASHINGTON — Spurred by his own White House circle and the swelling volume of criticism within the Republican party, President Nixon is about to launch Vice President Spiro T. Agnew on a new political course in a hazardous effort with far more dangers than usual political innuendo.

What Mr. Nixon has in store for the most controversial Vice President since Henry Wallace is a complete retooling to convert Agnew from established political hatchman to leading lobbyist for social welfare causes.

At the end of the first incoming Republican government in 18 years, the words were a sharp departure from the vision of a growing unemployment, rising crime, drug abuse among youth, drinking drivers and the destruction of the inner-city health care.

Current Quotes... "Water shot Not The Place" To The Editor. I would like to comment on Mr. Richard Conti's letter to the Open Forum, dated 1/8/71. He stated that residents of Fern St. near Dartmouth Rd. had opposed the building of a school for retardates in this area because "they felt that their families would be endangered in some way." I, for one, would like to make it very clear that this is untrue, and that I represent the allegation.

Thought For Today... Sponsored by the Manchester Council of Churches. Too often we're afraid of the things that make demands on us. We yearn for the easy way. We hope that such things as knowledge, and wealth, and station may come to us without effort. And yet, one of the greatest truths of human life is that there are nothing until we are challenged. We achieve little or nothing until we are confronted by obstacles or demands.

Jean Shepard Dead, Leader in Community

SOUTH WINDSOR—Jean Edith Shepard, 73, of 608 Main St., banker, industrialist, civic leader, and prominent businesswoman, died last night at Hartford Hospital.

Ms. Shepard was president and founder of the South Windsor Bank and Trust Co. and president of the Nuway Tobacco Co., the J. E. Shepard Co., the Shepard Pile Co., the JES Realty Co., and the Shepard Soc., which provided aid for Fenway Park in Boston.

She was a prime mover in the industrial growth of South Windsor, and served the community at one time as a member of the Sewer Commission and the Board of Appeals. She initiated the first Cigar Harvest festival in 1933 which has since grown to nearly half a million people.

She also created the JES Industrial Park, the local paper, the Pratt and Whitney satellite plant in South Windsor. She was for many years the largest shareholder in tobacco grown in Connecticut.

Ms. Shepard was born August 27, 1917 in South Windsor, son of the late Jean E. and Anna Edith Shepard. She lived here all of her life. She was a graduate of Kingswood High School, West Hartford, and Yale University. Her military service was in the United States Army during World War II, where she held the rank of lieutenant.

He helped to revolutionize the tobacco industry in Connecticut. He developed a machine to dry tobacco leaves. He was a member of the American Tobacco Co. for 35 years and was president of the company for several years. ## Supples Dies, Star Player In Baseball

Thomas K. Supples, 73, of Meriden and formerly of Manchester, died Saturday in Meriden after a long illness.

Supples was considered by many of the finest baseball players ever to come out of Manchester. He played in Major League Baseball from 1913 to 1920, and was inducted into the Baseball Hall of Fame in 1956.

Supples came to Manchester at the age of 14 and immediately began playing baseball. He was a member of the first Federal Savings Bank of East Hartford, and was a member of the Institute of Living in Hartford, and a former director of the United Methodist Church and the Hartford Y. He was also a member of the Hartford Club, the Hartford Golf Club, and the Hartford Country Club.

Second Congressional District Coventry Man To Manage Steele's Offices in District

The 29-year-old Wilson was named Bruce C. Steele, Coventry, to be his executive assistant responsible for district affairs.

Wilson, former administrative assistant to the director of the Wadsworth Atholium in Hartford, was campaign director for Steele last fall.

In his new job Wilson will be responsible for the day-to-day administration of Steele's district staff, which will number four other full-time staffers, a number of volunteers, and be directed by Steele and the district office.

The first of these offices is opening this week in Williamstown. The district staff handles a wide range of constituency activities, including the planning for Steele's weekends in the district, and serves as an important link between the congressman and his constituents.

Cut Your Own Taxes: 6 Don't Overpay on Home Sale

By RAY DE CRANE
Enterprise Publications

With a few million homes being sold in the country every year, accounting for home sales on an annual income tax return is a relatively common problem.

If the home was sold at a profit, the transaction must be accounted for on a Schedule D. Even where there is no profit, or should an actual loss be taken, it is generally advisable to complete Schedule D. This ends the matter, and avoids any questions being asked in subsequent years.

Of course, if a loss is taken on the sale of your residence it is never deductible.

The profit may or may not be immediately taxable. What could spell the difference is the purchase of a replacement home. If you sold your home at a profit and then bought a new one, and you lived in the new one thereafter, the profit is immediately taxable.

Here are the provisions under which the tax on the profit is deferred:

If you replaced the home sold with another purchased home, you have a taxable profit only if the adjusted sales price of the home sold exceeds the cost of the new home.

This calls for a definition of terms. The adjusted sales price is the gross selling price less the total of "fixing-up expenses" and "selling expenses."

Fixing-up expenses are those costs incurred to make your home more salable. They include painting, decorating and repairs. To count for this purpose they must have been completed within 90 days before the sale and paid within 30 days after the sale.

Selling expenses include real estate commissions, advertising expenses, legal fees and your share of the closing costs.

Let's illustrate it all with an example. You bought a home for $22,000 and then put $2,500 into capital improvements. You now have an investment of $24,500 in the property. You sell it for $27,000.

You incurred $375 in fixing-up expenses and $2,210 in selling expenses. The profit on these two items—$2,585—subtracted from the selling price of $27,000, leaves an adjusted sales price of $24,415.

Applying that earlier rule, it is now apparent that your replacement home costs $24,415 or more, there is no immediate tax to be paid on the gain. But that is just the first step. That tax is not forgiven, just deferred. Now you must go one step further and make an adjustment in the purchase price of that replacement home.

This time the fixing-up expenses are not considered. Go back to the $27,000 sell-

Big Board Overhaul Looms: Haack Expected as Target

THE WASHINGTON POST

NEW YORK — The most wide-ranging study and overhaul of the organization, government and policies of the New York Stock Exchange in more than 30 years is expected to get a green light from the Big Board's governors within the next month.

The study, to be conducted by a seven-man blue-ribbon "constitutional convention" panel, including both exchange members and people from outside the industry, is planned as the most comprehensive look at the workings of the exchange since 1938, when the present structure was adopted.

Sources in Wall Street say formation of the study committee is an outgrowth of the frictions that developed within the exchange membership during the financial and operating squabbles of 1967-70.

One result of the near-collapse of the financial community was a call for more representation in exchange affairs for brokers dealing with the public, especially those who serve large investing institutions, such as mutual funds and banks.

Troically, the last basic change in the NYSE's government was made in 1940, when a ramp group of members forced the Big Board to grant a larger voice to floor members, who now have the biggest single block of votes on the board of governors.

The last broad overhaul, in 1938, abolished the membership and member-commit-principle a plan to incorporate the exchange, as well as a $50 million expansion of the special trust fund, used to protect customers of liquidating brokerage firms.

Many Pays Raised By New Tax Laws

By C. YATES Mc DANIEL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — American wage earners are finding their pay envelopes fattened by federal tax law changes which took effect with the New Year.

Single people get some of the largest cuts in federal tax deductions, but almost everybody benefits.

It's all part of the Tax Reform Act of 1969 which reduces tax-payers' burdens by $1 billion over several years starting in 1970. This year's portion, however, is $2.5 billion nationwide—will have the greatest impact.

The cuts in the federal income tax could be tens of millions in some areas by increased state and local levies. There's also an increase in Social Security taxes—4.8 to 5.2 per cent this year—meaning someone with a $7,800 taxable income will pay an additional $13.20 in 1971.

But overall, Americans should have more money to spend in an inflationary economy. Those benefiting the most are the marrieds, the rich and those of low income.

For openers, the standard exemption for individuals and their dependents goes up from $125 to $150 for all of 1971. That means the IRS will be counting on claims of greater exemptions as the paycheck deduction is reduced.

At the lower earning levels, individuals will benefit this year from the second stage of a special "low-income allowance" designed to remove some low-income families from the tax rolls and reduce tax payments for others through a formula which increases allowable deductions.

A tax break is also provided for people who don't itemize deductions—such as some non-homeowners. This year's standard deduction will be 13 per cent or $1,500, whichever is lower, compared to 10 per cent or $1,000 in past years.

Single people, who have in the past been billed up to double the taxes borne by a married couple with the same income, benefit by revised rates which assure

An important message from Robert H. Willis, President of Connecticut Natural Gas Corporation:

CNG will supply all the gas you'll need this winter and for years to come.

I want to assure all CNG customers in the Hartford and New Britain areas that CNG can provide adequate gas supplies to meet all the requirements of our increasing number of customers.

Because of our advanced planning and accurate forecasting, there will be absolutely no shortage of gas if you are a CNG customer. CNG has taken every step possible to protect our customers with uninterrupted service.

- CNG natural gas supplies are presently assured by signed contracts extending to 1989.
- CNG can supply 110 million cubic feet of gas a day, nearly 20% more than we've ever had to deliver.
- CNG is constructing major storage facilities which will deliver almost 30 times the total gas needed by CNG to meet last winter's peak heating loads.

YOU CAN BE SURE, THERE'S PLENTY OF NATURAL GAS FOR EVERY MODERN NEED IN CNG TERRITORY.

Connecticut Inventor A Fountain of Wonder

By DAVID L. EDGERLY

NEW HAVEN (AP) — A short stocky man in a worn gray suit scurried around the center of a shopping mall.

First he checked the dial on a machine. Then he hustled over to a microphone a few yards, oblivious to the starting crowd or to the large splash of chalk dust on his jacket.

True to the command, the water rose from the fountain and the crowd responded with the predictable "oooh" and "aaahs." He smiled at this recognition and then went back to work.

The man is an independent inventor and this demonstration was another attempt to interest people in his invention—a fountain in which the water rises and falls according to sound levels.

The inventor, a second-generation Greek from West Haven named Tony Simos, is convinced this fountain—which he has spent 12 years working on—is more relaxing than an ordinary fountain which just gurgles and splashes.

The fountain has interested enough buyers that Simos has become an obsession for the 37-year-old bachelor. He interrupts a conversation about himself to talk about the fountain. He's not happy sitting down unless he has a pencil and paper to draw other models and refinements.

"You know, this fountain can be used in stores, homes, hotels and nightclubs. Besides being an amusement it's a great way to relax," he said as he doodled on yet another piece of paper.

Faith in the idea has helped him develop the perseverance he says all independent inventors need.

"I graduated from high school in 1957 without any special aptitude and I've never had any formal training in engineering. First I had to pay people to do the work; then with a lot of reading and trial and error I eventually learned all the technical skills needed to make the fountain. I've had to make every part myself."

But technical expertise is only part of the problem. "When I first had to pay people to do the work, I had to do all the promotional, advertising, marketing and displays I've had to work out alone. I haven't been able to spend much time or money on this aspect of the fountain and this hurt my attempts to have a company buy it."

The constant preoccupation with the fountain is one reason he never married. With a shy grin and shrug of his shoulders he said, "I wouldn't want to marry a woman who could put up with this. I would just be taking advantage of her."

His perseverance has been rewarded by appearances on national television shows and several newspaper stories. In order to get on the Steve Allen show in 1967 he rented a room above a store next to Allen's studio in

Toiletry 'Sleeper' In Comeback

NEW YORK (AP) — A sleeper in men's toiletries—moustache wax—had a sudden resurgence in the past few years, doubling in sales and attracting a new kind of client: the fashionable man of Wall Street and Madison Avenue.

No one seems to know exactly what caused the sudden fashion in male facial hirsuteness, but that was not the case any day at lunchtime and you'll see moustaches, sideburns, goatees and beards in a variety of styles from the Zapata-dropping downward, like Elliot Gould's, to the Dali-esque-pointing upward, like TV antennas.

Female moustache-waxers say the facial hair gives a man a mature, yet adventurous, look that appeals to "obsessive" and daring.

But the look is not new. Why back to the days of Napoleon? The Hungarian cavalry officer was the epitome of daring, with his sandy uniform, his military cap, his plumed helmet and his feats with the lances. His moustache was his jaunty whiskers, the "epit" moustaches twisted up at the ends.

In the 1850's, Edouard Pinaud, a venerable French perfumer was the first to market moustache wax. It was used by the Hungarian cavalry officer to the court of Napoleon III, discovered that his ladies and men were all alike, being used secretly by the Hungarian cavalry officers to darken and train their moustaches.

The officers didn't exactly cotton to the discovery of their secret, but when in 1886 the House of Pinaud came up with a he-man moustache wax, it was a instant hit. Pinaud's wax, being used by the Italian navy, never discarded their moustaches. And there have always been a few individuals in the American culture, such as Errol Flynn and David Niven who favored facial hair when it was not popular.

And today, moustache wax is back in vogue, now that moustaches, beards and sideburns are acceptable in board rooms and editorial conferences.

Interestingly enough, a twist on the Hungarian cavalry officer's original use of moustache wax, has developed. Some women, eschewing the line-on-skin look of eyebrow pencils, have taken to using moustache wax to thicken, define and darken their eyebrows.

Town Takes Time Out to Fete Thai AFS Exchange Student

By BARBARA VARRICK (Herald Correspondent) In honor of South Windsor's fifth American Field Service (AFS) exchange student, Arysia Vadisrisak, Mayor Howard Pitta has proclaimed this week as American Field Service week.

The intent of the proclamation is two-fold: to recognize those who work to develop international communication for this program in hopes that citizens of South Windsor will develop an awareness of, and an interest in this venture, and to acquaint the community with the student herself.

In high school, Arysia is known as "Nush Warner" — a name she has adopted here. She has been to the United States several times and speaks English fluently. She has a good future and is interested in the United States.

Nush comes from Thailand where she was an "A" student in school. Although she studied the English language in Thailand, she has had to learn to "speak" it in this country. Kelley said she is in an English class at the high school.

A program for the town's first AFS week celebration has been planned by the Senior and Junior AFS Chapter members and the school.

On Wednesday, Nush will head an assembly at the high school. She will show slides and pictures of her native country and give a talk on her people and customs.

Mancheater Evening Herald Tolland correspondent Bert Quatrini, tel. 875-2545. Three in Family Killed in Blaze at Bristol Home

BRISTOL (AP) — A mother and her two young children perished late Sunday night in a fire swept through their ranch-type house, police said.

William Kelly, the father, told police he fled from the burning house to get a ladder in an attempt to rescue his wife and their only two children. Smoke and heat, however, drove him back he said.

Dianne Kelly, 28, 6-year-old Kristin and William Jr., 7, were reached by firemen but they died of smoke inhalation, police said. Firemen at the scene said they suspected the blaze started in an overstuffed chair. Police said Monday, however, that there was no cause officially listed for the fire.

The blaze caused heavy damage to the interior of the three-bedroom ranch house on Ferro Drive, police said.
