Podgorny Pledges 'Material' to Egypt Medical Deductions Same

Soviet President Nikolai Podgorny has pledged that the Soviet Union will replace Egypt's "material losses" in another war with Israel and also will improve living conditions in the solution of Palestine, as an adventurer who had doublecrossed the resistance movement.

Habash said Saturday his guerrillas had no alternative but to topple Hussein and replace him with a leftist regime.

war with Israel and also will improve living conditions in the Arab nation.

Podgorny told a cheering crowd of 5,000 shipyard workers in Alexandria Sunday that his country would "bear any material losses to help Eigypt repulse Israel."

"We shall prevent any attempt to divert the Palestinian revolution from its essential goal of fighting Israel, even if we have to use armed force," said Adwan.

He claimed Habash approved and signed a peace and cooperation agreement with the Jordanian government Jan. 13, then secretly sent word to his guerillas to ignore it.

John Foster Dulles, punishing Egypt for There was, of course, an advance tip negotiating to buy from Russia arms we from Washington, to the effect that the had refused to sell to Egypt, withdrew a Nixon game plan for 1972 would include the Aswan Dam across the Nile. Four days later, Egypt's President Nasser issued an order nationalizing the Suez Canal, in which Britain and France had both been shareholders.

United States offer to help Egypt build

Three months later, an Israeli-French-British military attack was launched against Suez, with the apparent object of punishing Nasser by either capturing the Canal or blasting him out of office.

Within a few days, President Eisenhower, proclaiming that United Nations against war must be enforced our enemies, made possible the United Nations action which did end the war, leaving Nasser still in power, which criticized the Dulles action in withdrawing aid. Since that time, there was a mistake which set in motion a chain of developments which led directly into the present continuing crisis in the Near East, helping cause the two short wars which have already been fought in the region, and threatening to make the seat of ancient civilization the starting point for the war which would end all civilization.

There ought to be some limit to belaboring the dead for their mistakes in policy. Still, the possibility that what individual men may think and feel and do can have such an effect on history is an absorbing possibility which should never be ignored. We, in this space, have always placed the Dulles mistake with regard to Egypt at an earlier date, and located it in a. much smaller act which was, nonetheless, the fatal giveaway as to what kind of intention and principle our Secretary of State might be expected to follow. Mr. Dulles was new in power himself, and Nasser himself was still merely a secondary figure in the Egyptian revolution when Mr. Dulles went to Cairo to pay his respects to Colonel Naguib, the new Egyptian head of state, and was photographed presenting to him, as a token of America's esteem and friendship, a handsomely tooled revolver. How could anything good come of an opening as cheap and cynical and suggestive and unprincipled as that?

Harvard's Choice

If one were to stay within this con-
