State Deficit

Thomas J. Meskill says the state deficit is estimated at $261 million and has again urged Democratic legislators to enact a boost in the sales tax to start paying off the deficit. In a special message to the General Assembly Thursday sales tax from five to seven per cent so a start could be made on paying off the deficit before the end of the fiscal year June

The Republican governor re-called that he had estimated the deficit in his budget message Feb. 16 at $250 million. "It is the purpose of this spe cial message to stress for the General Assembly the emergen cy nature of that proposal and immediate necessity of enact-ment of this measure," Meskill

The latest forecast by the Office of Finance and Control show "an adverse change of circumstance" which requires "forceful and immediate counteraction to maintain our fiscal balance," Meskill said.

Democratic leaders have consistently rejected the governor's urgings for a temporary boost in taxes. They have said they are in no hurry to impose the highest sales tax in the nation on Connecticut taxpayers, and that any new or increased taxes would have to be part of a complete fiscal package. Meskill said at his Friday mor-

Instead of being able to welcome the young people coming along, ready to put their talents and skills and energies into the common effort to make a life for us all, we look upon their approach with disquiet and half a wish they could be off somewhere else, not

There is one other thing to be said. It is precisely on this, the front of our greatest comparative failure, that it is most difficult for us to get ourselves to continuing apathy, in Congress and the nation, toward President Nixon's welfare reform proposals - the one fresh

Can we imagine repealing or amending the law of gravity? The textbook answer is no we can't. But the philosophical answer, which has to steel itself to the possibility that beyond every established truth and law there may stand a higher and different truth and law which amends it, does not dare risk the negative certainty. We have lived with our system of telling the age of stones by the carbon test for about 70 years. We have lived with the law of gravity for three centuries. These laws have served us well enough, while our knowledge was content with to challenge them. But we may, some day, find ourselves obliged to live under the law of levitation. That kind of perpetual creation of the new kind of possibility, the new kind of chance, is what makes life, and the unending game of knowledge, so irresistible.

Jury Gets

A Holiday

Sometimes all it takes is hav ing a jury on hand and ready to begin hearing a case for the defendant to decide to plead guilty after all. It happened in seven cases in a row this week in Tolland County Superior Court and was cause for Judge Paul J. Driscoll to explain to some 40 new jurors why their court duty this week involved for the most part the opportunity to get acquainted with each r. There's that, an occasional card game and a marvelous opportunity to catch up on read ing in the large jury assembly

The first day of this spring session, Tuesday, was taken up with an extraordinarily long list sentencing, leaving no time at all to begin any trials.

Five cases were ready for Wednesday and the jury panel was summoned. Since a crim inal trial in Superior Court rarely lasts less than three days once it gets started, and frequently much longer, there seemed to be sufficient procedings planned.
