Bell Telephone Bids To Avert Walkout

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bell telephone system today announced it would sweeten its contract offer in a last-minute attempt to keep half a million employees from walking off the job Wednesday morning.

The company said it would make public after they were formally presented to union bargaining teams sometime later in the day.

Import Flood Decried At Labor Confab

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jacob B. Potofsky, president of the AFL-CIO Communications Workers of America, said today that American labor cannot compete with the flood of cheap imports.

NEW HAVEN (AP) — The Connecticut Union of Telephone Workers says a strike against the Southern New England Telephone Co. could cost Wednesday morning at 6 a.m.

The union announced Monday that it would vote overwhelmingly to authorize a strike. The vote was 6,783 in favor of a strike and 1,783 opposed, the union said.

MEMPHIS (AP) — The United Textile Workers, AFL-CIO, reported some progress on wage issues but said serious work remains on job rules.

The communications workers have announced 400,000 members will strike the nation's telephone system Wednesday morning, setting up a record for the number of workers who will be on strike.

Meskill Denies Date Defect Exists on Income Tax Law

HARTFORD (AP) — Gov. Thomas J. Meskill denied Tuesday that there is a serious defect in the income tax law that might keep the state from imposing the new tax until Jan. 1, 1972.

There is no question about the legislative intent, Meskill said at his news conference. That intent was to levy the tax on income received after June 30, he said.

Dana coordinated the design, construction, and staffing of the 1964 World's Fair "The Triumph of Man" exhibit for the Travelers Insurance Co. Subsequently, Dana became agency coordinator for all Travelers broadcast activities, including the annual Invitational Golf Tournament.

The result is two new programs, which are awaiting approval before being offered for student enrollment. One is the drama, "The People," which includes the study of the play, "The People," and the play, "The People."

Dana spent 35 years as a teacher, writer, and producer, starting as writer and remote producer for the CBS network weekly radio series, "We the People." The program brought him into contact with many prominent persons, among them John Barrymore, Wendell Willkie, Eleanor Roosevelt, Judy Garland, and John Steinbeck.

As acting division director, Dana's duties will comprise activities in the supervision of the fine arts, English, and foreign language departments. They will include administrative work involving teaching school, faculty student loads, budgets, and hiring by faculty members. He will continue to teach a course in English composition.

Richard A. Dana, Chairman of the newly formed Manchester Community Players, will present its first production, "The Triumph of Man," at the East Catholic High School auditorium.

Talcott Village—A CUD-Type Development

(Ed. Note: Manchester's new CUD Zoning regulation, which provides for completely planned developments on tracts of 100 acres or larger, has raised a storm of controversy.

(The first application for a change to CUD is from developers Sol Lavitt and James McCarthy for 270 acres of Keeley St., on which they hope to build a complete "small village" type community with a mixture of residential housing, plus businesses to service the CUD site.

(Proponents of CUD see it as a way to plan large tracts more efficiently than under conventional, "piecemeal" zoning, while opponents view CUD as loaded with problems for the town and have termed it "a disaster waiting to happen."

(Because the planned community concept is relatively new, few developments exist in this area. It is probably safe to say the majority of townspeople have not actually visited such a community.

(For a first-hand look at a totally planned development, three Manchester officials and a Herald reporter visited Talcott Village in Farmington and talked with its developer, James S. Minges, about the history and philosophy of its creation.

(Representing the town were J. Eric Potter, town planner and architect of the CUD regulations; Ronald Blake, planning assistant; and Truman Crandall, a member of the Planning and Zoning Commission.)

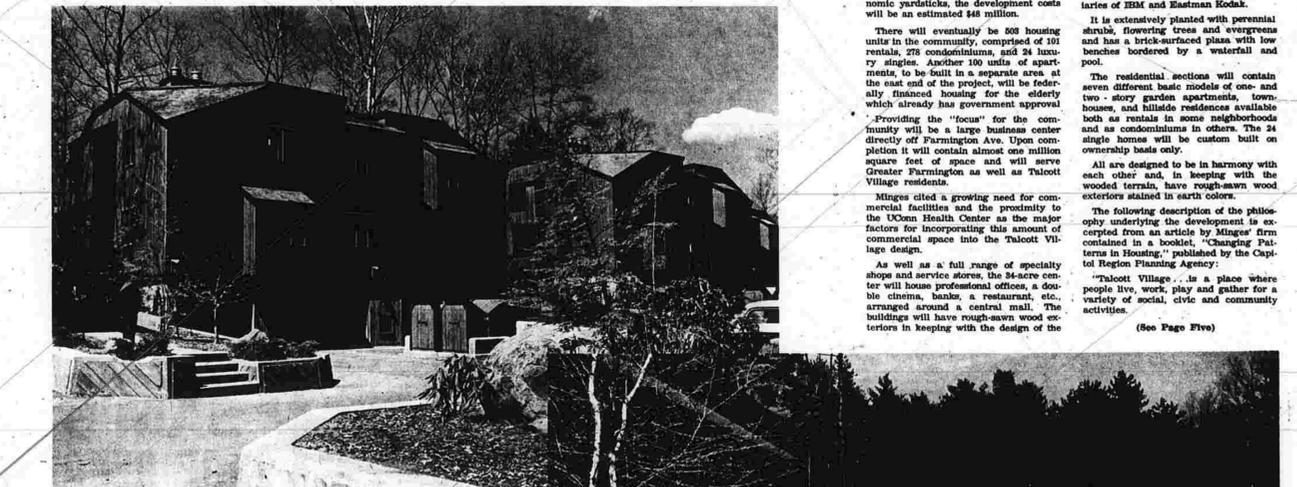

Talcott Village in Farmington, which in its initial phases of construction, was conceived by its developer, James S. Minges, as an entire planned community—where people with a variety of economic and social backgrounds can live, work and play in a functional and beautiful environment in harmony with the land.

When the project is finished—some seven years away—it will have a residential population of about 1,000 housed in single homes and apartments of various types, both owned and rented, plus a large commercial section. A three-building professional park in the tract is already complete and fully occupied.

On one point at least—that of economic-Minges' creation falls short of the goal. It is, by most Connecticut community standards, a luxury development unattainable to the "average man."

(Representing the town were J. Eric Potter, town planner and architect of the CUD regulations; Ronald Blake, planning assistant; and Truman Crandall, a member of the Planning and Zoning Commission.)

Neighbors Reacted

During the long period of controversy before Talcott Village plans received acceptance by the Town of Farmington, many residents, particularly those near the site, expressed deep concern over the potential impact.

Neighbors, bonding together, hired an attorney to represent their interests in opposing the project. The homes immediately north of the project site are exclusively single residences with two-acre minimum lots and are in the $40,000-$70,000 range.

Mrs. Whetly said trees screen the village but that thick, pine and hickory will not be happy about the project because it is too big—"like a little city."

She said the builder's original plans, which did not call for shading single houses, are being revised to include a buffer of single units with two-acre minimum lots and are in the $40,000-$70,000 range.

For a sampling of opinion on the project now that it is in progress, The Herald recently talked with three neighbors on streets closest to Talcott Village. Names were chosen at random from the phone book.

A CUD-Type Development

"Careful planning directed at the encouragement of a high level of interaction has produced the sense of neighborhood that is increasingly lacking in contemporary urban and suburban life."

"Small scale wooden residential buildings are clustered around courtyards in the forest and these clusters combine to form neighborhoods. Each neighborhood has its own (outdoor) swimming pool, community center, pathways and open space area for use by residents and their guests. The community centers are available for private entertaining as well as for a variety of neighborhood activities."

"The designer of Talcott Village, Charles Warren Callister of Thuron, Cal., characterized the objectives of his work on the new community as follows:

"To produce buildings that complement the traditional building forms and existing villages—that is, to try in every way to learn from the past and to recall it within our present architecture...to encourage a sense of the indigenous."

"When Talcott Village was in the planning stage, Minges, the developer said:

"Our plans call for maintaining the beautiful wooded landscape, designing buildings that are compatible with it, and characterizing the buildings in a manner that takes full advantage of the landscape."

Minges further said that the result will be not to provide a "suburban" but to make it "take full advantage of the landscape."

to take full advantage of the landscape. The issue was so deadlocked that it became inevitable that it would be resolved only by court action. Minges said he is locked into the master plan, so we have several existing apartment complexes that the town council is not taking advantage of the view of the town. "The town has to have a design-controlled multi-family control over a complete plan already in a concept in a single-unit, well-documented package. It added, "I must have the right to review binding, comprehensive plans before approval."

Farmington townspeople were very concerned over the effect of Talcott Village children on its schools. Minges said, as well as over the potential costs of other town services.

By combining the two ordinances, Minges' firm was able to present a complete planned unit development (PUD) in the absence of a specific PUD regulation.

Restrictions imposed by the town's planning commission "substantially reduced our planned density and much more than doubled our site costs per acre," Minges said. "We had to moderate priced housing."

But aided by support from nearly all the influential organizations in Farmington, applications were unanimously approved.

From his experience, Minges believes a planned community cannot gain the necessary community support without the high level of professional planning, coupled with enlightenment of the town's planning commission, and the support of the developer.

In his case, he engaged the nationally known planning firm of Callister and Payne in an annual net tax profit of more than $100,000.

potential costs of other town services

The second concern was partially answered by having all costs for road maintenance and repair, rubbish and snow removal, etc. incorporated in the developer into the housing development.

Regarding the effect of school children, Minges said $600 was paid for each child, and $100 for each child in the school district. "We had to moderate priced housing."

Isle of Iceland Study in Contrast

By FRED COLEMAN

Associated Press Writer

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (AP)—Anyone for golf under the wild in July? Or reindeer hunting about 800 of the animals each year.

Icelanders themselves spring from the Vikings who came from Norway in the 8th century.

The National Parliament, the Althing, began in the year 930, survived centuries of occupation by Norwegians and Danes, and since the nation became independent in 1944, has become the oldest continuing parliamentary assembly in the world.

Iceland is one of the more affluent nations in Western Europe, thanks to the fishing industry. Most families own their own homes, cars and television sets.

The nation is beginning to diversify its economy by offering tourists its scenic beauty and supplies. Thus one firm has built a ski resort in the mountains.

Another eighth of Iceland's population lives in or near the modern capital city. Its square houses, with bright red roofs look like pieces of a Monopoly board game when seen from the air.

When the eruption of the Gullfoss stream heated the water in the area, the major source of transport is by air. Without building railroads, in winter some areas are reachable only by plane.

Winters are relatively mild for the northernmost part of the world, just below freezing, and summers cool.

In summer the sun sets dark winter. They also offer some exotic dishes. One is raw sheep's head that has been buried in the ground for five or six months.

Legends fill the air. In 1894 the famous explorer, Thorvald Erikson, was the first to reach the island of Reykjavik to search for the mythical entrance to the North Atlantic. The island bear shrieks of damned souls in the murmuring lava below.

Phone Booth Challenges A Parking Meter

LOOKINGGLASS, Ore. (AP)—"We've always seen for communication," said Mayor Norm Niblett.

Lookingglass, population 40, has its first public telephone booth. It's at the north end of the 118-year-old general store Niblett operates.

"Now we have a parking meter at one end of town, a phone booth at the other," he said.

Niblett didn't say it, but he may hope the phone booth is as successful as the parking meter in attracting tourists to the tiny town.

The mayor, a Douglas County commissioner, and the telephone company's regional manager, Mark Palmgren, were at the dedication ceremonies for the pay phone booth.

An impromptu presentation marked the ceremony. A local museum curator gave the town an old picture of a former resident, Ira Howard, when he was mayor. The town's champion mushie grower.

Howard, who lived in Lookingglass in the early 1900s, had a 17-inch mushie.

The first incoming call to the phone booth generated excitement at the general store.

It was a wrong number.

Niblett says he expects more civic improvements in the future.

The village needs a manhole cover, he said, and saving money from the parking meter for water, he said, and saving money from the parking meter for water, he said, and saving money from the parking meter for water, he said.

Little Leaguers Schedule Series With Colchester

The best of Coventry's older Little League players will battle their counterparts from Colchester in a best-of-three-game series opening 8 p.m. tonight at the Colchester town green field.

The second game is scheduled for Coventry's Little League field 8 p.m. on Thursday. The third game, if it is necessary, is set for next Tuesday with time and place to be announced.

Coventry's team will be headed by Don LaFauce whose Bidwell Tavern-sponsored team took first place honors in local league play. Both Colchester and Coventry agreed that only 11-and-12-year-old players will be eligible for the inter-town games.

Selected by player and manager vote, the following boys will represent Coventry: Rick Gankovsk, Brent Richardson, Mark Palmgren, John Massey, Tom Newcomb, Dan Zurnhellen, Dick Ellwell, Mike LaFauce, Robbie Jewell, Pete LaFauce, Joe Sansone, Les Martin, Tim Fisher, Joe Haddad, Greg Locke, and Norm Kowalski. Joe Tomaselli and Eric Young.

Top players from this team in 1970 will represent Coventry in the regional tournament in Tolland, to be played on the last two weekends of July.

Coventry's younger Little League players participated in a local all-star series last week. Steve Oehman and by Tony White, shared wins in the opening two contests with the Troy night finale ending in a 6-6 tie because of darkness.

Smorgasbord

The Pine Lake Community Club is sponsoring a smorgasbord supper followed by round and square dancing at Pine Lake Shores off Rte. 275 near the Bagville Dam on July 24.

The supper will be from 7 to 9:30 p.m. and dancing will run from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. Ticket reservations may be made by calling Gerry Chandler, Pine Lake Shores, Bagville, or they may be bought at the door.

Phone Booth Challenges A Parking Meter

LOOKINGGLASS, Ore. (AP)—"We've always seen for communication," said Mayor Norm Niblett.

Lookingglass, population 40, has its first public telephone booth. It's at the north end of the 118-year-old general store Niblett operates.

"Now we have a parking meter at one end of town, a phone booth at the other," he said.

Niblett didn't say it, but he may hope the phone booth is as successful as the parking meter in attracting tourists to the tiny town.

The mayor, a Douglas County commissioner, and the telephone company's regional manager, Mark Palmgren, were at the dedication ceremonies for the pay phone booth.

An impromptu presentation marked the ceremony. A local museum curator gave the town an old picture of a former resident, Ira Howard, when he was mayor. The town's champion mushie grower.

Howard, who lived in Lookingglass in the early 1900s, had a 17-inch mushie.

The first incoming call to the phone booth generated excitement at the general store.

It was a wrong number.

Niblett says he expects more civic improvements in the future.

The village needs a manhole cover, he said, and saving money from the parking meter for water, he said, and saving money from the parking meter for water, he said.

Isle of Iceland Study in Contrast

By FRED COLEMAN

Associated Press Writer

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (AP)—Anyone for golf under the wild in July? Or reindeer hunting about 800 of the animals each year.

Icelanders themselves spring from the Vikings who came from Norway in the 8th century.

The National Parliament, the Althing, began in the year 930, survived centuries of occupation by Norwegians and Danes, and since the nation became independent in 1944, has become the oldest continuing parliamentary assembly in the world.

Iceland is one of the more affluent nations in Western Europe, thanks to the fishing industry. Most families own their own homes, cars and television sets.

The nation is beginning to diversify its economy by offering tourists its scenic beauty and supplies. Thus one firm has built a ski resort in the mountains.

Another eighth of Iceland's population lives in or near the modern capital city. Its square houses, with bright red roofs look like pieces of a Monopoly board game when seen from the air.

When the eruption of the Gullfoss stream heated the water in the area, the major source of transport is by air. Without building railroads, in winter some areas are reachable only by plane.

Winters are relatively mild for the northernmost part of the world, just below freezing, and summers cool.

In summer the sun sets dark winter. They also offer some exotic dishes. One is raw sheep's head that has been buried in the ground for five or six months.

Legends fill the air. In 1894 the famous explorer, Thorvald Erikson, was the first to reach the island of Reykjavik to search for the mythical entrance to the North Atlantic. The island bear shrieks of damned souls in the murmuring lava below.

Rock Opera, 'Superstar' Has a Pittsburgh Debut

By DIANA DIMARCO

PITTSBURGH (AP)—The actor in the role of Jesus Christ, his arms outstretched, his long hair blowing in the breeze, moved to the microphone at the front of the stage and played by Jesus Christ.

Thus ended the premiere concert performance Monday night of the authorized version of the rock opera "Jesus Christ Superstar" at the Civic Arena in Pittsburgh.

The opera is sometimes irreverent and sometimes irreverent, but it is a masterpiece of the last days of Jesus Christ.

King Herod's reaction to the most mocking: "So you are the great Jesus Christ? Prove to me that you're no fool. Walk across my swimming pool."

What Kind of Nation?

We wonder what kind of a nation we are going to be then. Well, I will fully predict that five years from now we will be the richest nation in the world...

On that, is a question. That question is raised often in your editorial columns that I have noted, because I read many of them. It should be raised. But I would only suggest that part of the reason for raising it is that again we tend to allow the problems of the moment to obscure our vision of the future...

It is here being in four wars in this century and four times young Americans have gone abroad. We have done so without any idea of what has happened in the world...

Here is a nation that did not seek the pre-eminence of the world. It came because of what has happened in World War II. But here is a nation that has helped its former enemies...

When we presented the program on July 3, some of you who may have heard me will note that I said "I am sure I am sure that I am sure that I am sure..."

But, although our social system tolerates drugs, it is not on alcohol, the use of which is, indeed, prohibited by our dominant Moslem religion...

We are then, for this mental game, that kind of country. Along, then, comes a Dr. Ray, or somebody else, making shocking and revolutionary pronouncements about the use of alcohol...

I think of what happened to Greece and to Rome, and yet I am left with only the pillars. What has happened, of course, is that great civilizations of the past have been destroyed...

The United States is now reaching that period. I am convinced, however, that we have the vitality. I believe we have the courage. I believe we have the strength out there in the heartland...

Our Feeling About Drugs

Out in Kentucky a juvenile court judge has been forced to resign his post because he made some public statements about marijuana...

Judge Joseph T. Ray said he thought the sale, possession and use of marijuana ought to be legalized...

This, he said, would reduce the amount of contact between young people and "pushers" who sell heroin and other addictive drugs...

Furthermore, he said, laws against narcotics were really attempts to legislate morals which, he said, the state shouldn't attempt...

Finally, he said, "marijuana is apparently no more harmful than alcohol, perhaps less so..."

His political superior, taking the more normal American view about marijuana, found Judge Ray to resign his post...

His resignation does not admit or prove error of his statements.

But it does reflect the fact that we Americans have natural instincts to feel the way we do about marijuana, as compared to alcohol or nicotine...

All of us who wish to decide what we really ought to think and feel about marijuana, or even more dangerous drugs, for that matter, ought to set ourselves up a mental game in which we pretend that this is a Moslem country...

Inside Report

Poland's New Economics

By Rowland Evans Jr. and Robert D. Novak

WARSAW — The threat of unsolvable economic problems in Poland, such as those which culminated in the 1956 revolution...

Sometimes when I see those pillars I think of seeing them on the Acropolis in Greece and on the Parthenon in Athens...

I think of what happened to Greece and to Rome, and yet I am left with only the pillars. What has happened, of course, is that great civilizations of the past have been destroyed...

The United States is now reaching that period. I am convinced, however, that we have the vitality. I believe we have the courage. I believe we have the strength out there in the heartland...

But I also know that people need to be alarmed. The people who can reassure them are opinion leaders, editors, television, radio commentators, teachers, even poets, preachers and politicians...

At the present time, I will simply say that in raising these problems, I don't raise them in any order of importance. I raise them in the usual sense of pointing out that the United States is a country that needs to be reformed...

Ernest J. Whitman, president of the Polish-American Chamber of Commerce, said that the United States has the destiny to play a great role, but it also knows that it must play it unless this is a healthy land, with a healthy government, a healthy citizenry, a healthy economy...

But let the problems of the moment obscure the great and good things that are going on in this country. It is that that I would suggest to the editors and other opinion makers here: that from time to time, maybe once a month, that message might come through...

Not Just Flood, Hydraulic Jump

When severe thunderstorms hit Manchester July 11, causing power disruptions and flash flooding, the Herald printed this picture of the Wells and Vine St. intersection covered with water...

The picture showed a view of water rushing over the curb into the street. The hydraulic jump shows in the picture as a curving line of turbulent water. The jump is caused by shock waves coming from the telephone pole near the center of the picture...

This flow of water is analogous to shock waves that exist in gases in air, according to Dr. Hart. He is studying shock waves in gas configurations and patterns of flow.

Camillo Gambolati Dies, Former Builder, Grower

Camillo Gambolati, 61, of 212 McKee St. and Plant City, Fla., died yesterday of a heart attack at one of the pioneers in the growth of Manchester, died yesterday at his Plant City home.

Mr. Gambolati was born Feb. 12, 1910, in Paduli, Italy, and came to Manchester as a young boy. In his early years, he was a sawmill operator and later turned to farming. He was one of the largest strawberry growers in the area as well as being instrumental in organizing the former Farmers Market at Charter Oak Field.

Just before World War II he went into the general contracting business and for 30 years was involved in the construction of a large number of homes and commercial structures in the Manchester area.

From 1950 to 1960, he spent most of his time and efforts in developing orange groves in Plant City, Fla. He was an active member of the Florida Citrus Growers Association. He was, at the time of his death, president of the Florida Citrus Growers Association. He was, at the time of his death, president of the Florida Citrus Growers Association.

Survivors are a son, Frank Gambolati, of Manchester, a daughter, Mrs. Lillian DeWitt of Tampa, Fla., and three grandchildren.

Zone Changes Granted, Apartment Bid Tabled

In one of its most lightly attended and least controversial sessions in recent months, the Planning and Zoning Commission last night granted zone changes and tabled an application for apartments.

Secretary Clarence Welli questioned the accuracy of the commission's hand-drawn map of the area to be rezoned. The UAR Realty subdivision change was presented by Atty. Herman Yules, who told the commission that the rezoning was not feasible because of the nature of the property.

Although a request by KIL Associates for stage 1 approval of apartments of New State Rd. at Hilliard St. met no opposition, the application was shelved until July 27.

Several neighbors from neighboring Blue Ridge Dr. were on hand to express their opposition to the rezoning. The commission voted to grant the rezoning and to table the apartment bid.

Commission Chairman Joseph Swenson said he would not like to see single units constructed there, since another conventional apartment complex abuts the site to the south. KIL was builder of the Coronado Club Apartments for singles off Prospect St.

Legislators To Review Income Tax

HARTFORD (AP) — The two leaders of the General Assembly today called a meeting of legislative leaders of both parties to discuss the income tax.

House Speaker William Ratchford and Senate President Tom Charles F. Alfano, both Democrats, said they are also inviting Republican Gov. Thomas J. Meskill to the meeting.

The meeting is expected to be held at 2 p.m. at the Capitol. The legislature is currently in recess, but is subject to recall by the speaker of the House and the president of the Senate.

Ratchford reiterated that a unemployment level in Connecticut said even more, unemployment which would be high Monday.

On Tuesday, an informal poll showed a majority of the state senators are willing to go back into session to reconsider the income tax and to sign a bill forcing the legislature back into session if called by the governor.

Some senators favored outright repeal of the income tax. Others wanted to reduce its rates for low- and middle-income taxpayers.

Nineteen of the 35 senators said they were willing to sign a petition recalling the legislature, which approved the tax July 1 on a vote of 21-12.

Not all of the senators who said they were willing to sign the petition Tuesday, but it was apparent that there was enough support in the legislature to force the General Assembly back into session via the petition route.

It would take 89 signatures to recall the legislature, which approved the tax July 1 on a vote of 21-12.

Sidewalk Sales Start Tomorrow

Everybody loves a bargain, and tomorrow there will be bargains galore for the hunting as Manchester's annual Mid-July Sidewalk Sale gets underway.

The three-day event, which continues through Saturday, is one of the major promotional events sponsored by the Division of the Chamber of Commerce and each year draws thousands of shoppers.

A huge selection of items at savings up to 50 per cent and more will be offered at the sidewalk displays in many of the stores.

As an added attraction at the Parade, hot dogs and sodas will be sold at five cents apiece, with the Jayco's serving.

To guide you through the bargain, a 23-page Sidewalk Sales Guide is included in today's Herald. Look it over before you hurry to the stores.

New High Set In State On Jobless Rate

HARTFORD (AP)—State Labor Department officials announced Wednesday that unemployment in Connecticut is at a 10 1/2 percent level in Connecticut.

Ratchford reiterated that a unemployment level in Connecticut said even more, unemployment which would be high Monday.

Harassment Is Charged In Suit Filed Against FBI

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The American Friends Service Committee has filed a suit in U.S. District Court today seeking to enjoin the FBI from alleged political harassment, intimidation, surveillance and other activities.

The suit names Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell, FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover and Special Agent Joe J. Janowski as defendants in their official capacities and individually.

The 15-page complaint charges the FBI with illegal and unconstitutional physical violence; threats; excessive and unwarranted electronic surveillance; searches, seizures, arrests and limitations on freedom of movement.

The complaint charges that the FBI acted for the purpose of "chilling and punishing the constitutional rights of the plaintiffs."

The FBI had no comment. Thirteen of the 18 people bringing the suit work for either the AFSC or the antiwar group set up to "engage in religious, charitable, social, philanthropic and relief work in the United States and in foreign countries."

The complaint says the FBI undertook the harassment beginning about April 1, "allegedly investigating" the theft last March of files from an FBI office in Media, Pa. Those files have been turned over to news media and one document reporting on the FBI conference in Washington said the FBI acted for the purpose of "chilling and punishing the constitutional rights of the plaintiffs."

Those files have been turned over to news media and one document reporting on the FBI conference in Washington said the FBI acted for the purpose of "chilling and punishing the constitutional rights of the plaintiffs."

The FBI had no comment. Thirteen of the 18 people bringing the suit work for either the AFSC or the antiwar group set up to "engage in religious, charitable, social, philanthropic and relief work in the United States and in foreign countries."

The complaint says the FBI undertook the harassment beginning about April 1, "allegedly investigating" the theft last March of files from an FBI office in Media, Pa. Those files have been turned over to news media and one document reporting on the FBI conference in Washington said the FBI acted for the purpose of "chilling and punishing the constitutional rights of the plaintiffs."
