WASHINGTON (AP)-The Bell System was struck by up to 500,000 telephone workers today as phone companies kept service going but prepared to halt repair service and in stallations.

Supervisory personnel filled in at switchboards after members of the AFL-CIO Communications Workers of America walked out at 6 a.m., EDT. Brief wildcat walkouts preceded the strike in many cities.

A union spokesman said the virtually nationwide walkou would last at least two weeks because of complicated labo ratification procedures. The American Telephone Telegraph Co. said it was too early to determine the effects. "But people can expect to hear a lot of male voices when calling the operator," said infor mation officer Chuck Dynes. Because telephones are highly automated, most calls will continue to go through until lack of maintenance causes breakdowns. In strike-affected areas many new telephone installations were halted, as was repair service on all but government-operated telephones essential for national security.

Pickets appeared in cities where contracts had expired. In New York, some wore yellow T-shirts bearing the slogar "Ma Bell is a cheap mothe over a design of a cracked bell. A union spokesman said, "The only reports we are getting are that people who were on the job walked off and those scheduled to picket are reporting to the

Wednesday, July 14

A Session To Lower The Rates One of the supposed truisms of public affairs is that, once a tax gets on the books, it never gets taken off.

That may already be true of the new state income tax, even though it hasn't yet gone into effect or turned in a sin-

It may be that when the General Assembly finally turned to the income tax, after years of fighting against it, the surender was final and irrevocable.

And even those who denounce the income tax in itself would want to know, as they considered the possibility and desirability of trying to repeal it, want to know, in advance, what the alternative taxes would be this time. The alternatives themselves can be frightening, as the General Assembly itself was realizing in the hours it turned toward the income tax.

But if the possibility that the income tax is here to stay is now going to be conceded, there should first be an honest effort to revise the rate schedule of the bill the General Assembly passed on July 1.

It ought to be possible to introduce the income tax principle into state taxation, nd tap the income source, without be ing this brutal about it.

As it now stands, this state income tax is a levy which, while the people of Connecticut continue paying all the more indirect state taxes they now pay, is going to take a large additional sum from almost every Connecticut family. Everything that we have all been paying, in the past, to finance our state government, we are still going to continue to pay.

On top of that, by the rates of this income tax bill, the medium family incomes of Connecticut are going to pay an additional annual sum ranging anywhere between $500 and $1,000 a year. And again it must be emphasized that this will be without relief from any other form of state tax, or any kind of relief from local real estate taxation either.

This is much too stiff an attack on the normal Connecticut income, much too handsome and easy a way to give the state more money to spend, and much too heavy a use of the income tax vehicle.

There should, at the least, be an agreement on lower rates, and a special session of the Legislature to put them into effect before collections begin.

Once More Without Feeling Once again the world is face to face with a sample of its own incapacity to feel something which is obviously a great and unforgivable human tragedy We feel nothing, and we do nothing and we keep asking ourselves how an be that we feel nothing and d nothing, and that is all. Meanwhile, the tragedy continues its course, unimpeded.

Perhaps our awareness is such that, by the time the discussion of the tragedy has progressed this far, we all know that it has something to do with what has been going on over in East Pakistan.

That general awareness does not make any of the details come real.

We are told that there may have been 200,000 people massacred back and forth between the rebels of East Pakistan and the West Pakistan army units sent to control them, but for all we know millions. We are told that there are at least 2,-500,000 people who have crossed into parts of surrounding India as refugees, but for all we know the number may be twice as large. We do not feel enough about all this, we cannot force ourselves to care enough about all this, even to insist upon finding out about it in any authoritative manner. The estimates we have just been using come from a report made, not by any international relief agency, or by any humanitarian mission of the United Nations, but from the cool economists of the World Bank, the Bank for Reconstruction and Development, who have found themselves forced to try to find out whether East Pakistan is in shape for the continuation of old aid programs or the launching of new. The World Bank economists conclude that conditions are so savage there that no one can see the way clear for such programming.

The world's economists are concerned, but the world's conscience seems only indirectly involved. There have been murmurings of concern in this country, but not enough to halt the shipping of more American arms to the government which has been engaging in this savage suppression of savage re-

We have given sharper publicity to, and actually taken more meaningful action against, some kind of red death which is moving through the fish population off the shore of Florida Then we at least act, even though we don't know there, either, why such terrible things have to keep happening in the world of nature and the world of man.

We can assume that the plague which is moving through those Florida waters is a part of nature doing its own thing, with no reflective conscience and no intent. The question is, do we have any better kind of explanation for the red flowing in East Pakistan, and, if we do, why we can't at least try to do something about it.

The Dulles-Eisenhower Rules

When all the meanings of all the words in the Pentagon papers are added up and put together and analyzed and queezed down for what is most imporant we think we have a pretty good idea. where it will all come out. We think it will mean that back in the days of Dwight D. Eisenhower and John Foster Dulles the United States had a pretty sound set of operating principle for American foreign policy which their successors could, to their advantage, have honored more than they did. Mr. Dulles was great on high-flown rhetoric and thus earned for himself the title of "brinksman." He even invented "brinksmanship" by the claim that he found it necessary to walk up close to the "brink of war." Yet the truth of the matter is that Mr. Dulles's actua ating policies, as distinct from his rhetorical policies, when tempered by Eisenhower caution were conservative and restrained

In the Dulles speeches which did not make headlines, and in his private conersations and in his actual manage meng of American foreign policy he worked out for President Eisenhower set of rules under which he would approve or disapprove of an American commitment to friendly factions in countries under real or presumed danger o internal or external aggression. He was willing to give economic and military aid and even, if necessary, send American troops provided that: 1; The government in the country in volved requested aid. 2. The government requesting aid was a effective control of the bulk of the 3. The government was backed by majority of the population, and

4. Government and people were ready, villing, and able to fight effectively in their own defense. Under this formula all of Western Europe, much of the Mediterranean, most of Latin America, South Korea, Japan, ceania, and Southeast Asia were kep out of the hands of adventurers and adenturous elements unfriendly to the United States and its allies. Egypt was a loss against the plusses. Even more important, so long as the Eisenhower-Dulles formula was observed, the United States did not get into any difficulty too big for it to handle. To over-simplify, President Eisenhower lieved in intervention - when the odds vere on his side. Playing it cautionsly paid off. He never got himself dangerusly overextended Intervention in Vietnam was not measured by the old Eisenhower-Dulles rules. Had they been applied, there never would have been an American comnitment there at all. In the beginning there was never even a request for American troops. Presi dent Diem had to be maneuvered into sking for them. It was his fatal misfor tune that he did let himself get talked into asking for them. At no time was the regime in Saigon in substantial control of the bulk of the country. There is no convincing evi dence that it has enjoyed the solid support of a majority of the people, And the evidence is still all too painful that government and people have yet to acquire the will and capacity to fight their own The Eisenhower-Dulles formula would have justified intervention in Korea. It would not have justified the massive intervention in Vietnam which came during the Kennedy-Johnson era. Every rule in their formula was ignored by the commitment to Vietnam. The chances are that when the Vietnam affair is really over and the books are closed, as they are bound to be one of these days soon, someone will remember it all as an example- of how safer the old formula really was. The Fourth South Pacific Games to be held at Papeete, French Polynesia, Sept. 8-19, will be hailed by Papua and New Guinea with a new set o four postage stamps. The stamps will depict in abstract design, four of the 16 events featured at the games-basketball; yachting, boxing, and track and field, reports the Empire Stamp Galleries. Two important changes have been made for this athletic meet since the last one was held in 1969 at Port Moresby, First, t avoid a conflict with the Munich Olympic Games to be held next summer, it was decided to move these games ahead one year. Second, the South Pacific Games will cover 11 days instead of the previous 10. Papua and New Guinea's new stamps can be obtained at your local stamp dealer.

Although the United States has just issued a new stamp honoring the 10th anniversary of the Antarctic Treaty, it is inter esting to know that the British intarctic Territory has also issued a new set of four stamps for the occasion.

The stamps have a common design at the top—an inscription "Antarctic Treaty 1961-1971," a vignette profile of Queen Eliza eth and a map of the area. The oottom half of the stamps differ The 1½ pence shows a research sutpost. The 4 pence depicts birds flying in the air. The 5 pence illustrates Antarctic ani mals. The 10 pence has a group of penguins.

To commemorate the 900th anniversary of the Bishopric of Oslo, the Norwegian Post Office has issued two new stamps designed by Norwegian artist Hak-on Stenstadvold. The 70 ore red and black bears a silhouette drawing of a church being built. The 100 ore blue and black shows people congregating out-side a church.

Elephants Branded On Hips

By PAUL DAVEY JOHANNESBURG, South rica (AP) - Elephants with numbers stamped on their ears and hips have joined the jumbo brigade in Kruger Nationa Park game reserve.

It's part of a new method o tracking the beasts and learning more about their habits. The National Parks Board has been trying for years to develop an effective way of marking ele phants in a reasonably perma nent way.

A variety of labels were test ed. Numbers were painted on the beasts, plastic markers were clipped to their ears and tails, brightly colored collars were fitted and code numbers were drilled into the tusks. None were successful. "They practically all had the serious disadvantage that they achieved, at best, only a temporary means of identification says one official, Plastic markers easily are ripped off as the animals pound through heavy bush. Ordinary paint wears off and marking usks gives no certain identifica ion because they frequently get The latest, and seemingly successful, marking method is by branding with an iron frozen to a temperature of minus 70 de grees Centigrade. Hot branding not feasible, as elephan have sensitive skin.

The numbering is being done primarily to enable conserva ionists to study and control migration habits.

The pachyderm population i the 310-mile long Kruger Park was 8,821 according to the latest census, taken last August from helicopters. A year before that there were 7,700 elephants. "They multiply because of their long life span and low in fant mortality rate," an expen

Cold branding first was tried in 1969. A bull calf was tranquil-ized and its ears cleaned before a wooden board was placed be hind the huge ear lobe and the branding iron applied. The animal showed no signs of discomfort during the branding, and conservationists are confident the method is humane and successful. "We've branded 32 Kruger Park elephants at the moment, said a parks board spokesmar "We hope to brand a further 16 by the end of this year.
