Ellsberg Ordered To Face Charges On West Coast

BOSTON (AP)-A federal judge today ordered Dr. Daniel Ellsberg removed to California to face charges of illegal possession of secret government documents n the Pentagon Papers case.

Ellsberg, 40, a research associate at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, is charged with possession of the secret Pentagon Papers. He has said publicly he leaked their contents to the news media.

The Pentagon Papers were the result of a Defense Department study on the origins of U.S. involvement in the Vietnam war.

CUSHING ACADEMY ASHBURNHAM, MASSACHUSETTS

"Where co-education is a tradition . . ." Cushing Academy in Ashburnham, Massachusetts, a co-educational school since 1875, offers grades nine through thirteen in a rural New England setting (60 miles northwest of Boston). Consisting of 41 acres and 18 major buildings, the Academy campus offers educational opportunities for 230 residential students. The Academy provides imaginative and realistic guidance toward an appropriate choice of college. Since its inception, Cushing boys and girls have gone on to higher education in colleges throughout the Class size at Cushing averages twelve students. The school calendar is organized on a trimester plan. Senior Seminars, of which there are over sixty trimester-length options, supplement standard full-year college preparatory courses. The seminar program, which includes some tenth and eleventh graders, provides student opportunities for in-depth study of specific academic areas. There are academic honor societies for both boys A full complement of athletic opportunities - recreational, individual, and interscholastic teams in major sports - contributes to the school program. Extracurricular programs include films, studio art, field trips, choir, modern dance, aviation courses, literary publications, and numerous other clubs and activities.

The school is nondenominational and serves students of all races, creeds, and Anchors To The Right Although it is quite apparent that Richard Nixon, having been elected as a onservative Republican President, can make moves in foreign policy - such as moving toward an end of the war in Vietnam and toward a normalization of relations with Communist China - which a liberal Democratic President might have found impossible, it should not be assumed that Mr. Nixon's surprise leadership in surprise directions comes to us easy and free.

Mr. Nixon does not move in one direction without calculation of the political risks that might be involved, or without realistic appraisal of what side strategies he may employ to keep his own original political following from breaking into such open rebellion it might destroy his new policies.

Accordingly, Mr. Nixon's every move in one direction is likely to be accompanied by a whole barrage of enchors being thrown out in the opposite direc-

As it turned out the whole foreign tour of Vice President Agnew, winding up with him paying our respects to the two rightist dictatorships in Portugal and Spain, proved a magnificent touch of "cover" for the announcement of President Nixon's forthcoming grand trip inside Communist China. Anchor number two thrown out toward the American right wing might have been President Nixon's executive order reviving and broadening the powers of the Subversive Activities Control Board, one of our heirlooms from the days of McCarthyism. The President, by his order, extended to this board the appetizing privilege of making up new lists of organizations which, in its opinion, ought to be classified as subversive by Attorney General Mitchell, who always seems quite an anchor on the rightlet side of things himself. Anchor number three might well be the Presidential statement in which Mr. Nixon seemed, at least, to be repudiating and countermanding the Department of Health, Education and Welfare's plan for erosstown busing as a means of desegregating the public school system in Aus-

By such anchors, President Nixon is demonstrating that he can't be all bad. He still shows a proper respect for Dictator Pranco. He still wants to catch the Communists and expose the fellow travelers on the domestic scene. He is still against busing.

These are all normal, logical plays for a politician to be making, and they are probably not half as grotesque as the contemionism a liberal President would be exhibiting in a similar situation.

Such is Mr. Nixon's bad luck, however, that it is guite likely that neither the soft on Communium liberals or the Bucklegite right wing conservatives will admit to any satisfaction with what Mr. Nixon is doing for their respective points

It's still up to that great silent majority to understand his objectives and his side maneuvering, and give him the benefit of such doubt as the apparent contradictions present may create.

Even people who don't like to fly may have to, just to take some mode of travel which can be rated relatively safe.

And we may have to give up our long experimentation with the idea that you can take a heavy-weighted assemblage of metal enclosures, place them on the unnaturally confining route of a track, propel them with extraordinary power, and not even encounter difficulty with Travel is dangerous.

The statistics aren't quite so easy to come by, but some day we intend to do a piece on the dangers of sitting still, dangers which, we are inclined to think, may also prove quite alarming.

The Tropic Force Gardeners and lawnkeepers who have lived through the last few days will never again be in doubt as to the identity of the main force behind summer growth. It is, obviously enough, water. Con ceivably, any kind of water, even water out of a hose, would do, if one could imagine and force one's self to use exaggerated quantities of it. But there is no doubt, either, that one particular kind of water-the kind that falls warm out of a summer cloud—is the very best. It can, in some respects, be too power

It can, in a matter of a day or two, transform an almost insignificant trace of crab grass into a thick, dense, mass of intertwined chlorophyll capable of choking any mower.

And it can, with its sudden impact, take that brand of lettuce which is highly advertised for the way it resists the tendency to bolt, and make it bolt sky high even before it has finished forming the outlines of a potential head.

And where no weeds were, at the end of drought, there could be, at the end of rain, pigweed tall enough and succulent enough to stuff a compost pile.

But so much power inevitably spilled over, too, into more beneficial and pleasant uses. There was green for the eye again, and great leaps in the rows of corn, and flower plantings which had been punily impatiens during the drought now loomed large and luminous in the dusk like fluorescence rising from a jungle floor.

That is, of course, the key to it all, and learn from it, we really don't want such growth power all the time. Four or five days in the tropics - in New Eng-

the leaders in both houses of the Legismous vote. Reflected in this unified support, unfortunately, were currents of as sumption of power on the part of the egislators that would upset the so-called palance between them and the Executive Branch. The governor may have sensed these currents in exercising his veto. The power play, if it has been one, nevertheless shunts to oblivion a piece of legislation that makes a great deal of ense, can be regarded as highly needed, and should receive more attention and support. It would authorize the two State auditors to carry out performance auditing of State departments and agencies, a system of checking into fiscal operations that goes a step beyond mere-y accounting for funds. Under existing practice, the State auditors are limited to an examination of books, records, accounts and inventories for the simple purpose of determining that every penny was properly account ed for. Ferformance auditing would go to the question of what has been achieved with each penny spent.

Proponents of performance auditin point out it is a system used in federal ing Office its chief and most well known practitioner. The introduction of performance auditing has also been a recom mendation of the team of "Flying Feds." who took a quick and practiced look at Connecticut's governmental operations this year. Their report has suggested that efficiency in government can be more readily obtained if there is a "means of monitoring progress." which, in effect, is what performance auditing formance auditing bill were based on what he viewed as "open end" authority for the State auditors to hire staff, and on his belief this kind of fiscal review constituted little more than "second guessing" the Executive Branch.

The validity of both objections is much n question. The auditors would be limited, of course, by their appropriation as to their staff. And if overseeing the spending on the typically self-perpetuat bureaucratic agency is "second move the taxpayer would relish. —NEW

In Cairo, the semiofficial newspaper Al Ahram expressed displeasure over reports that the United States is considering a plan to provide Israel with 110 Phantem and Skyhawk warplanes in the next three to four years. The newspaper warned that such a step would jeopardize the U.S. peacemaking role in the Middle East. "If America is serious about her efforts how can she provide Israel with more arms before an overall settlement is reached?" the paper asked. "A move like this could only be regarded as providing Israel with means of establishing full control over occupied Arab territories." Al Ahram was commenting on Washington reports that new aircraft deliveries are being considered by the Nixon administration in an effort to per suade Israel to relax her position on an interim, ground breaking Suez Canal settle ment. The State Departmen has described the reports as | senate leaders of both parties talked of a compromise tax package based on a 6% per cent sales tax coupled with other levies including a six per cent tax on capital gains and dividends. But House Minority Leader Francis J. Collins, R-Brookfield, said it wasn't "a viable alternative," and that it had "very little support" in a caucus of Republican representatives. The package would also include taxes on real estate transfers and commuter income in the state. Then, later in the day, State Sen. Louis S. Cutillo, cochairman of the Finance Committee and a supporter of an income tax, said his committee would hold hearings on Monday because of "new elements" in tax proposals not discussed at earlier hearings during the legislature's regular session. Cutilic is a Waterbury Democrat. House Speaker William R. Ratchford, D-Danbury, and Senate Majority Leader J. Edward Caldwell, D-Bridgeport, said they were surprised by the delay. "I have serious doubts that they will find such a new approach, but I do want to indicate that we will examine it because we all agree that the wage-price spiral is a significant danger to this expanding economy. The question is what we do about it, without going all the way to a totally controlled economy." Nixon said his administration is making progress on both the unemployment and inflation fronts. He said the jobless rate will decline for the balance of the year. And he stood behind his earlier prediction that 1971 will be a "good year" for the economy. Nixon said he has asked Labor Secretary James D. Hodgson to inform him of every major wage and price "negotiation" in the economy. Buying down has become common, even in big ticket items. And as Henry Ford II said, minicars mean miniprofits.

The commoner complaint, however, is that pay raises are exceeding productivity. If higher wages are related to increases in output per manhour both employer and employe benefit. If pay raises exceed productivity increases then the boss gets sypped.

The term growth recession was born in attempts to describe a situation in which the economic indicators seems to be pointing in different directions at the same time.

Many of the indicators point upward, but polls show that businessmen and consumers remain unconvinced.
