Injury and Damage Notices Are Served Against Town
A notice of impending legal action against the town has been filed by William Thornton, president of Manchester Band and Brass Co. on 40 Adams St., Thornton is claiming "physical damages" to his plant as a result of the town emptying Union Pond for dam repairs and dredging work there. In the notice, Thornton says that the town's opening of the mud gates at the pond dam allowed "vast accumulations of foreign matter and filth to be introduced into the town river, rendering the water unusable."

Rebrun Rubella Clinic Listed Monday

A rubella immunization program will be held in the elementary schools on Monday. Mrs. Jean Mosher, public health nurse, has informed the Board of Education that a survey of each child's cumulative health record was completed to identify those children, according to school regulations, who have not been immunized against rubella. Notices were sent to the parents of these children, she said. Informing them of the legislative requirements under Public Act 296 that all children be immunized.

Attached permission slips were included with the notices to allow the parents to request the immunization at school or inform the school of any reasons for not granting permission. Mrs. Mosher also said that physicians in the area have been notified of Monday's program. "Young Graduates" will be immunized at the school.

In her report, she also mentioned that 105 children were seen in the health rooms during November for first aid, illness, and health counseling, and that 254 courtesy audi and vision screenings of students were conducted.

An environmental survey was conducted to identify health or safety hazards that need correction. During November, Mrs. Mosher also had the opportunity to review new growth and development films. Further health screenings are planned to include representatives of the Board of Education, the Board of Health, the Board of Administration and the Board of Finance.

White Gift Sunday activities are scheduled at the First Congregational Church for tomorrow's services. The church will be distributing a later date. Members may contact either Pat Greiner, or any of the following names for a list of appropriate gifts for the children's service: Mrs. Edna Greiner, 55 Webster St., Manchester; Mrs. Ruth S. Flaherty, in notice filed by her attorney, said she will look to the town river, rendering the water unusable."

When the town let the water out of Union Pond last spring, Thornton reported that he had to find an alternate water source for the town's water supply until the water in the river cleared.

In another notice of impending legal action, Mrs. Kathleen J. Thompson, 400 Adams St., reported that she sustained injuries Sept. 29, 1970, at the town's opening of the mud gates at the pond dam. She claims the sidewalk was defective. She says she fell on the sidewalk and claims the mud gates at the pond dam allowed "vast accumulations of foreign matter and filth to be introduced into the town river, rendering the water unusable."

SIMPLE MANUEVER UPSETS OPPONENTS
By ALFRED SHINWOLD
Bridges is a competitive game, if your opponents play well, don't make the excuse that they are weak players. Part of your job at the bridge table is to make your opponents play well. The doesn't mean they have to do anything outlandish; sometimes a very simple maneuver is quite enough. North dealer.

Way Clear In Congress To Adjourn

By CARL P. LEUBSDORF
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A temporary adjournment for a week to allow the Senate to pass the bill on the judicial fee was cleared today by the House. The bill, which would increase the fee from $100 to $150, was passed by a vote of 342 to 107.

Holdouts on a Judicial Fee Claim It's Just Principle
The lawyers, God bless 'em, they should be as eager to pay fees as they are to charge them. But they aren't. The leaders of the Connecticut Bar Association claim the legislature has no right to impose professional fees on lawyers—and that, as members of the judicial branch of the state government, lawyers are protected by the constitutional separation of powers from such imperiousness by another branch of government.

top ticket candidate who seemed, to some jaded members of the public, to talk the least and say the most. Muskie is where he is now because, on the eve of Congressional elections a year ago, he made a national television speech, with calm and earnest face, he pronounced a few old-fashioned American platitudes. This happened to contrast with an unfortunate Nixon campaign finale in which the President was throwing his arms and his rhetoric about rather recklessly.

The question with Muskie, then, is simply this: Does he have intelligence enough to recognize his own kind of strength, and does he have character enough to remain true to himself in spite of all the cheap advice he is receiving from all the political pundits of the nation?

If he can remain true to himself, then at least some of the Shakespearean consequence will rub off on him, and he will have the right to be considered as a credible candidate for the Presidency.

If he is going to yield to the hour by hour advice of his critics and the findings of the polls, then his party might as well nominate Hubert Humphrey again, because Humphrey is swifter in his changes of position and can talk faster.

It is obvious that the pressures on the Senator from Maine are going to be something terrific. But, if the pressure is there, so, also, is the opportunity.

The Ralph Bunche Imperative

One excerpt, from his record and his experience, those words in which Ralph Bunche expressed the positive beliefs which kept him going through controversy, disillusionment and illness. Perhaps there were, inside him, moments when his own best beliefs faltered. That makes the fact that he continued to hold them all the more impressive.

"I have a bias against war," he said once, "a bias for peace. I have a bias which leads me to believe in the essential goodness of my fellow man, which leads me to believe that no problem of human relations is ever insoluble. And I have a strong bias in favor of the United Nations and its ability to maintain a peace between nations."

"For more than a quarter century," he said on another occasion, "I have been engaged in work in which hopefulness is an imperative qualification. One must believe that man can be saved — or salvaged — from his inevitable fallings. That all problems of human relations are solvable. . . that conflict situations, however deep-seated, bitter and prolonged, can be resolved, that a world at peace is in fact obtainable. Otherwise one's work, all diplomacy, the United Nations itself, become a futile travesty and all mankind would be doomed."

Perhaps the very moment in which Ralph Bunche died might have been the moment in which he himself would have had to confess that the actual record of mankind's behavior had come closer to a "futile travesty" than to a demonstration of any "essential goodness" in man.

But what he never believed him would still choose to live beyond him would still have chosen to live in the belief, we believe, the verdict that if we intend to do anything with our presence on this earth, "hopefulness is an imperative qualification."

It is an imperative for our attitude toward ourselves as individuals and in the mass effort for our stewardship of the institutions we create. We do not hate and throw in the sponge; we do not carry concern backward into despair either, if we can, forward into an effort at improvement; we do not accept the worst as the final truth about us; we insist on the possibility of there being a best. And in this necessary kind of effort and outlook, every man who succeeds in living with faith and hopefulness of his own is an inspiration and a help, as was Ralph Bunche.

The Ordeal of Edmund Muskie

Between the pundits and the polls, Senator Edmund S. Muskie is being subjected to those tests which truly try a candidate's soul.

Most of the advice he is being given finds that whatever he is doing is wrong and politically mistaken.

Either it is too conservative or too liberal, too cautious or too rash, too naive or too clever.

State Hired Perjured Troopers

It is mystifying why the State of Connecticut should have chosen to hire two former state troopers convicted of perjury as assistants in the State Tax Department, with the possibility of becoming full-time investigators.

While not subscribing to the theory that no man should not be eligible for jobs, either in the state or private industry, it seems particularly inappropriate to hire men convicted of lying under oath in any capacity where they will be dealing with taxes or the investigation of citizens.

It is commendable that the state personnel office does not summarily reject people as potential employees because they have been convicted of crimes. When it wants Muskie to become the president to become, something he is not. And if all manages, somehow, to ignore completely just how it ever happened to be that Muskie got as far as he is now, on the national political scene.

He is where he is because, in the 1968 presidential campaign, he was the

Inside Report

MILLVILLE, Pa. — President Nixon, though winning his battle against George Meany hands down, is badly losing the war against his potential Democrat foe for the Presidency in this industrial suburb of Pittsburgh.

The lower-income white union men who live here, most of them registered Democrats, surprisingly sided with Mr. Nixon against AFL-CIO leader Meany in their nasty quarrel over economic controls. But they overwhelmingly support each of the three top Democrats over Mr. Nixon for President.

This is the unmistakable message of our interviews with Millville voters conducted with the aid of the Oliver Quayle polling organization. Accompanied by expert pollsters Alice Guthrie and Helen Brown, we found Mr. Nixon's New Economic Policy (NEP) had not softened labor's anti-Republican sentiment in two working-class districts.

The implications are grim for White House strategists, who count on Mr. Nixon's NEP to win over the workingman. In fact, these blue-collar workers simply don't think he is fair: 40 percent of them say they would vote for Meany if he were running.

His job approval, on a scale of 1 to 100, is 42 percent and unemployment only 20 percent. "That's worse for Mr. Nixon," said one voter, "than anything else we've heard about the President's propaganda war with Meany, particularly Mr. Nixon's victory in the battle of Bal Harbour, Fla., where the President addressed the AFL-CIO convention. But interviews here point to little gain among white workers and, therefore, another cliffhanger ending in 1972.

Superficially our findings here are cause for solid Republican cheer. Out of 67 voters interviewed, 51 are registered Democrats and 97 come from families with labor union members. Yet, among those with an opinion, 25 backed Mr. Nixon and 42 supported Meany.

Despite economic distress, Millville's voters were evenly divided over whether economic or social issues (crime, drugs, etc.) is more important.

Attacking the salary increase voted Meany by the AFL-CIO convention, a 50-year-old steel worker told us Meany "caused a bad reflection on the labor movement." The 19-year-old wife of a machinist said: "I don't like Meany's attitude. He doesn't even care about high

Connecticut Yankee

By A.H.O.

For several sessions past, the Judiciary Committee of the Connecticut General Assembly has been occupied with a little too assiduously to an effort to tailor Connecticut law and the Connecticut judicial system more conclusively to the convenience and advantage of the state's lawyers.

This not unattractive interest in professional convenience and advantage has operated on many levels. It is in their own practice between sessions, leaders of the Judiciary Committee have found they had trouble negotiating their clients past a particular point in the law, perhaps so much trouble that they lost a case or had a court rule against their client, then there was a law likely to be considered in need of revision during the next session of the Legislature, as, for example, in clarification of drunken driving test procedures.

It is in what has to be rated a good conspiracy to bend this of that the state's highest judges and the state's attorneys have now collaborated to create their own central office for prosecution, with one existing state's attorney to serve as its head. Whether this pre-empting of the supposed reform will head off the new onslaught of the Judiciary Committee, has been preparing for the February session remains to be seen. It is the era of the legislative branch militant, and the lawyers of the Legislature can do almost anything except write a clear and unequivocal paragraph of law setting up a $100 fee to the state.

Firm Given Award
Nuclear Chemical Corp. of Norwalk has been singled out to receive the Kirkpatrick Chemical Engineering Merit Award for its development of a cyanide-free electroplating process.

The award which has been presented by Chemical Engineering Magazine every two years since 1952, was presented at a luncheon at the Hartford Club Thursday.

The Norwalk firm was cited for the processing breakthrough which will permit the zinc plating of steel and other metals with only slight hydrogen embrittlement and dramatic reduction of industrial waste water pollution.

The non-polluting process involves the use of neutral cyanide instead of cyanide and according to Kenneth Bellinger, president of the firm, will end the dumping of an estimated 312 million pounds of poisonous sodium cyanide into the sewers and waterways.

The award, presented by Calvin B. Cronan, editor-in-chief of Chemical Engineering, was accepted by Bellinger on behalf of his employees.

Two-Level Postal Rates Would Speed Mail Delivery

WASHINGTON (AP)—The U.S. Postal Service is studying a two-level system of postage rates that would permit mail to pay an extra fee for speedy delivery.

But postal officials emphasized the idea is only one of several which may not be put into effect for a year or more. Under the system being studied by some postal officials, the present four classifications of mail would be scrapped. In their place would go a so-called two-tier system with categories broken down into letters, packets, parcels and publications.

Matters would be given the option of taking a higher-priced "priority service" or routine delivery for each category.

The present first-class letter and third-class advertising mailers would be lumped together into a new letter category, second-class mail like newspapers and magazines would be placed in a separate class, and parcels, parcels and publications, would be placed in a separate class, and parcels, parcels and publications, would be placed in a separate class.
