NEW DELHI (AP) — India established full diplomatic relations with North Vietnam today, abandoning its official pol-icy of treating Hanoi and Saion as equals. This means that India will have an embassy in Hanoi and only a consulate general, whose chief is of lower rank than an mbassy's ambassador, in Sai-

in the past, despite demands from leftist political parties and Communist nations, saying it would jeopardize its status as chairman of the International Control Commission which is charged with supervising the 1934 cease-fire in Vietnam. The Indian move came as no urprise to U.S. officials in Washington since New Delhi has for some time indicated it would establish relations with Hanol. A State Department spokesman declined comment Thursday when asked about the prospective action.

Following the Confucian ideal that the most able men should govern, an early form of civil service examinations was begun. Those who passed were called mandarins and became officials in the state bureaucracy.

During the 53-year reign of the greatest of the Han emperors, Wu Ti (140-87 B.C.), Confucianism was proclaimed the official cult of the state. Under Wu Ti, and after him, Chinese arms penetrated in all directions, from Korea to modern Vietnam to deep into central Asia. The latter is the unofficial title for that devoted group of public questioners, researchers, and eloquent debaters who have, with periodic shifts in personnel, constituted themselves the tireless watchdogs of the public business.

Their zeal and energy is such that they have never falled to occupy whatever time and opportunity the procedural rules of the official Board of Directors might leave open to them.

The new Board of Directors, in an effort to give the "shadow board" a generous turn at bat, and still accomplish something toward improving its own opportunity to do its own real business, has scheduled each first meeting of the month to be a public hearing meeting. The other night, the "shadow board" had the floor for the entire meeting; the Wrong Side Because It Lost? In our scanning of the controversy over United States policy with regard to there is one argument which is never omitted by all those who claim that we made a wrong decision when we seemed to favor Pakistan over India. It is true that they often lead off with Pakistan should have been condemned by us and should have been kept in mind by us, when India finally reacted

But then, after they have paid some respect to what they advance as sound, nonorable principle for United States foreign policy, these friends of India advance one more argument.

We should have known and realized, they tell us, that India was bound to win had more planes, more tanks, more troops in uniform, and an infinitely superior strategical position, what with a weaker and weakening Pakistan already friends of India, that might makes right. Their real reasons have been of a more elevated kind. But, in case the idealistic argument didn't capture us, in case we happened to be the kind of people who would choose, other things being equal, to play with the winner instead of the loser, they made sure the other consideration was offered to us. It was assumed, we suppose, that the Nixon Administration itself would be impervious to criticism located entirely on the idealistic plane, but that it would be very sensitive indeed to charges that it had neglected an opportunity to align itself with the nation which was inevitably going to make itself number one on the subcontinent. To pick a losing side might, these liberal idealists could not refrain from emphasizing, be even worse than picking a wrong side.

The purpose of this comment is not to pretend to be able to choose between Pakistan and India on a plane of high principle. Perhaps we should have involved ourselves a lot more deeply, a lot earlier, or have refrained from showing any preference at all,

What we are aiming at, at the moment, is the way those who will generally argue against the game of power politics will, in their post mortems on the situation in India, reach for the argument that we should have played a smarter game of power politics, paying more attention to who was certain to win a war nobody was going to stop. There are some of us who value India more because we hope it may once again lead its area in demonstration of the virtues of democracy and of peace than because we can see a temporary winner in the kind of game everybody loses even-

Unequivocal Call For Peace

The most incisive and forceful statement on the Vietnam war by any American Catholic authority is contained in the Christmas pastoral letter of the Most Reverend Carroll T. Dozier, Bish-

The pastoral is lengthy, and approaches the question of the Vietnam war gradually. It discusses Christ's message of peace, and the major obstacle to its realization-war. If the Christian has a responsibility to see to the elimination of war and the achievement of peace, how is it that Christendom and the Church have so long sanctioned war? The historic reasons for this anom aly are reviewed, and the theory of the just war is explained. In particular, the background accounting for the fact that "here in the United States our bishops until recently gave almost complete sup port to the public authorities in time of war" is sketched.

some rethinking of familiar supposttions, the bishop observes. The consequent revulsion against war and the arms race was given strong utterance by the Second Vatican Council. "We must now squarely face the fact that war is no longer tolerable for a Christian," Bishop Dozier asserts. "We must speak out loud and clearly, and repudi ate war as an instrument of national

The atrocities in Vietnam, he de clares, "have been brought into our livrooms each evening on television, and into our hearts by young men returning from Vietnam. They have shown us how dehumanizing war actually is, I believe the Holy Spirit is speaking to us in all these situations, showing us how to respond in a new way to Christ's measage of peace."

The practical response which the pas-ate stopping of the war and an end to the process known as Vietnamization. As to the first, "The present Ameri-can military action in Vietnam is not ustified, whether we judge it by the standards of the Just War Theory, or by he need to bring peace and justice to all men. The only morally acceptable act on our part is to withdraw all our armed forces, and begin to repair the damage we have done to that country.".

As to Vietnamization, "this program is transferring the instruments of slaughter into the hands of the South letnamese military. . . It is a program not for ending the war, but for continu nust we be misled by assurances that he war is 'winding down.' All that is appening is that fewer American solliers are being killed. Vietnamese leaths are continuing as before, caused by more intensive bombings by our war-

The pastoral announces that Bishop Dozier is taking certain steps in Memphis to implement a drive for peace These include his personal support of conscientious objectors, the inaugura tion of a diocesan draft counseling service, the preaching in every church of formation center on peace. Further-more, the bishop calls on all educators to make their schools instruments for peace, and on all his people to express o their elected leaders a demand that the Vietnam war be concluded forthwith.

This pastoral is unequivocal. It tackles a complex and controversial subject forthrightly, reaches unfudged conclusions, and pledges a concrete program. It is characterized throughout by clarity and courage. It will be criticized, even condemned, But any attempted rebuttal should be in its own reasoned terms.

Inappropriate, indeed outrageous, is the A-1 draft classification given to one of Bishop Dozier's priests after the publication of the pastoral and, in the bish-lication of the pastoral and, in the bishop's express opinion, in retaliation for the pastoral. This appears to be a case of reprisal and attempted intimidation of a religious leader who has dutifully ooken out on a matter of acute moral concern. Not the least of the dreadful onsequences of the Vietnam war is the amage done to our traditional freedom.
