The Promise Of Instant Peace It is to be noted that the two gentle men who can now be labeled the leading contenders for the Democratic presidential nomination have quickly agreed on one thing both are going to say to the American people.

For both of them, a number one issue is to end the war in Vietnam now, inqualification. They would end it on the land and the sea and in the air.

We do not deny their right to campaign with such promises. Richard Nixon, as a getting himself elected President, was not in the least averse to having people get the impression he would have some

PS On The Bombs

In discussing the new American bombing offensive against North Vietnam we overlooked one of the more singular points made about this offensive by Secretary of Defense Melvin Laird. He listed a number of recent enemy actions which he alleged were in violation of the 1968 understanding under which Lyndon Johnson halted the bombing of the north-

One of these so-called violations, cording to Mr. Laird, is that "in the month of December more U.S. planes have been attacked by North Vietnam than in any month since I have been Secretary of Defense."

Read like that out of context one might almost think Mr. Laird was talking about North Vietnam planes flying into south Vietnam and attacking nerican planes on their home territo-

Of course it isn't quite like that. These enemy "attacks" on American planes did not happen in or over South Vietnam and engaged in dropping bonbs on tar-gets in North Vietnam itself. There seem their "attacks" on American planes There is no allegation yet that we know of any North Vietnam planes taking of-fensive action against American planes

Is it an "attack" when one shoots at a hostile plane flying over one's own terria Russian plane which started dropping

To call an act of self-defense of that kind an "attack" is a ridiculous distortion of language. To content that it is a ation of the terms of any understanding is absurd. Not even Lyndon Johnson ever dreamed of expecting the North Vietnamese to sit still and do nothing in return while he bombed them. At the latest count we have seen that eight American aircraft failed to return rom these missions. It is a monstrous njustice to those who failed to come rackets is to make gambling legal and respectable with the state, instead of organized crime, managing it. There has been a counter-argument, back and to all who risked lives or freeiom in this offensive to put their conduct in such a dishonest context. This I drive crime out of the gambling busione of the biggest air offensives of the ness, a state would have to offer every whole Vietnam war. Those engaged in kind of gambling, and every convenience deserve at the least an honest and convincing explanation for it. What we have had so far is neither. — CHRISTIAN for it, that the underworld could possibly offer. Otherwise, this counter-argu-SCIENCE MONITOR

ment goes, a state will wind up having its own legal system of gambling plus a substantial residue of illegal gambling which covers those areas in which the state is not competing. There has now been a report from

New York's State Commission of Investigation which seems to buttress the counter-argument. It finds that, in the climate established by the state's own operation of so much legal gambling enterprise, the enforcement of law against illegal gambling has tended to become something of a joke, in the behavior of the police on through the handling alleged violations get in court.

The Commissioner recognized, without stating its own conclusions, that the evidence it had collected had a direct bearing on a continuing question being debated in New York between advocates of all-out enforcement of gambling laws and those who would eliminate the question of enforcement by making all possible kinds of gambling legal and therefore under direct control by the state it-

"The time has come," the Commission said, "for our public officials to review and to meet this problem head-on." It did not, as we have observed, give its own answer. What it has done, it would seem, is dispose of any fancy that making some gambling legal automatically drives the rest into retirement.

The Ultimate Suspect

We noticed one Washington columnist, the other day, working himself into a high dudgeon over the obvious presence, right inside the White House circle, of some individual who has been sailing "close to the inward edge of treason" by releasing secret papers to Columnist

We ourselves have questioned the right of whoever leaks such documents and whoever decides to print them to play god with things which have been designated national secrets.

But all of us who may find ourselves concerned, to one degree or another, by the apparent ease with which these top secret proceedings have been pushed out kind of magic, instant cure for the war to the public should admonish ourselves to some slight degree of caution.

There were only some 50 people in White House circles who could have seen to it that Anderson got the papers. All of them, then, occupy posts of high national responsibility. It might not be totally wise to forget ed, everybody would be surprised at how high a source it is. It would seem unbelievable, that with such a small list of potential suspects, the identity of the culprit could not, soon er or later, be determined. If, therefore, the mystery continues to go unsolved, the conclusion might have to be that it involves someone so high disclosure of his identity is itself considered impossible, as an intolerable blow to national security.

Do you, gentle reader, following our logic, begin to glimpse the nocturnal shadow of the ultimate suspect? If you critical of young people you might keep in mind that half of the nation's population today is under the age of 28 while 64 per cent of the population is under 40, still considered a young age by many standards. Perhaps that age statistic alone is a clear indication of the changes that lie ahead in the social and economic life of America.

We're reminded of the interview with the old-timer.

during which there was the comment that he must have seen a lot of changes in his lifetime to which the old-timer "Yep, and I've been 'agin all of 'em." There was agreement between a teen-ager and yours truly the other day. During a discussion on how young people may cast their ballots this presidential year there

"Parents have shaped our thinking to a great extent since birth. Some of the things we can't shake off," commented the teen-ager.

We are surprised though by a number of polls which show young people to be conservative by nature. However, we have never read a definition of either conservative or liberal that we could completely buy.

was the unified thought that many of those voting for the first time will ballot for the same choice of their parents.

There have been some rumblings that members of Congress feel they are entitled to another pay increase. U.S. News and World Report says the salary hike will be by-passed in 1972 because it is an election year but watch out for '73. They are talking about a pay hike from $42,500 to $50,000 per year.
One will have to assume, of course, that we won't still be in a wage-price freeze by that time.

We received a call from a concerned reader asking if we are using smaller type in our news columns. We aren't but we are experiencing some mechanical problems at times which might make reading more difficult. Our future goal is to use a larger type which we hope will make it easier for you to read The Herald. And we also appreciate her final comment: Thanks for the cookbook.

In response to an inquiry about whether we should refer to a lady as Mrs. John Doe, Jane Doe or simply use the initials Ms, there is general agreement among the etters and postcards that we should never mind the Mr., Mrs. or whatever. "Everyone should be treated equally and a person should use his or her name with pride." We'll study the comments further before reaching any firm decision. While many a breadwinner is struggling to pay his taxes and make ends meet, the first big task for the new secretary general of the United Nations is also financial Article 19 provides that any member two years behind in dues loses its voting rights except in clear hardship cases. It seems obvious sky marshals aren't the answer to preventing skyjackings these days. There are some 1,500 sky marshals "riding shotgun" on some of the country's 4,000 flights a day but not once has a skyjacking been prevented. While there is a decline in such activity, the credit goes chiefly to ground screening of boarding At any rate the Office of Management and Budget is considering cutting the $87 million annual budget for the sky marshal program by about one third in the fiscal year beginning July 1.

The thinking is that none of the sky marshals would lose their jobs. They'll be reassigned to serve in the airport boarding security system or be absorbed into the

Directors Buy Snowblower

By GLENN GAMBER

The Board of Directors last night proceeded through its agenda with little controversy or dis-cussion compared to other board meetings of the not too distant past.
One matter, however, the acceptance of title for a heavy duty snowblower, was passed unanimously, but not before Town Manager Robert Weiss was briefly and pointedly critic-ized for the method by which the snowblower was acquired. The voice vote did not include direc-William Diana who was abent from the meeting due to

The board agreed to postpone the authorization of a Charter Revision Commission until February in order to allow additional time to recruit mem-bers for that commission. It was of the board to authorize the commission. According to remarks last night, the commission will consist of 15 members. The board also agreed to table any decision on whether to exrcise the option to buy the on Keeney St., because the op-tion does not expire until July 28 and a decision on the matter s not needed now. Mayor John Thompson instructed Town Counsel David Barry to investigate the possibility of extending the option on the land. Speaking about the snowblow-er, Barry related that there is a history of renting snow remov-al equipment without competi-tive bidding. He suggested, how-ever, that rentals of this type be put out to bid in the future. He said his opinion is that the ransfer of title for the snowlower for the sum of $149.19. loes not violate the charter. den by their ancestors. If they are offered safer, will not condescend to take a single step to test them. - Wang An-shih

The 300-year Sung dynasty (960-1279) has been called the outstanding example in Chinese history of Confucianist ideals in practice. A refurbished Confucianism, called Neo-Confucianism and tinged with ideas borrowed from Buddhism and Taoism, was firmly en-trenched as the national philosophy/religion. Confucian learning was the core and substance of the civil service examinations, the one road

ary composition and giving the orthodox answers rewarded conformity and discouraged A move to reorganize the imperial examina-tions to test candidates' practical knowledge was made in the 11th century by a prime min-ister named Wang An-shih. Like the socialist reformer Wang Mang, 1,000 years before him, he also attempted to give the state a monopoly north, who more and more often were bought off rather than fought off.

Even a new invention, the "fire cannon" primitive rocket—was not enough to keep a large part of China proper from being occupied by the barbarians throughout the Sung. In the late 12th century, a new scourge arose on the arid plains of Mongolia—Genghis Khan, whose undefeatable hordes swept all before them from northern China to Russia to India to Persia to Europe itself. In culture, the Sung was another brilliant, if not original, era, particularly in landscape painting. It also saw the invention of movable type for printing by one Pi Sheng, who carved type out of clay 400 years before Gutenberg.

It was the great khan's grandson, Kublai, who finally vanquished the last of the unwarlike Sung. By 1279, and for the first time in history, all of China was under foreign rule.
