Open Diplomacy's Turn?

There is at least a momentary impression that, contrary to the usual assumption, it is open diplomacy which is producing more candor and more possibility of getting real cards on the table than the secret brand of diplomacy.

President Nixon's disclosure of the secret Kissinger diplomacy with North Vietnam might easily have had the result of breaking off all negotiation with Hanoi, open or secret, One can guess, for instance, that if Hanoi had been the one to strip the secrecy off what had been going on, we would have had an instinct to denounce Hanoi for its faithless betrayal of the diplomatic process. What has happened so far, however,

American peace proposals when they were secret, it has apparently halted short of outright rejection of them now has been not only confusing, but interest-negotiation scene in a big trumped-up tion of the American proposals with the presentation of an amended version of its own list of peace demands.

The news correspondents who expected to be writing the story of dead end confrontations and negotiations collapssome new questions to ask about the latest presentation of the other.

diplomacy, with every move subject to immediate and sometimes rough public mediate political controversy, as witness the speech by Senator Muskie and the resultant denunciation of Senator Muskie by Secretary of State Roberts, is keeping itself alive and apparently making small adjustments of position which might even lead into some progress.

Things are not supposed to happen that way. Successful negotiation is supposed to need great protective

But since hardly anything seems to happen, these days, the way it is supposed to happen, perhaps we should control our surprise at this apparent reversal of the normal laws of diplomacy, and concentrate on a sliver of hope it may lead on from one question to another until at least some shadow of a satisfactory answer begins to take shape.

Brain Chemistry Reversed

Just when we were all becoming accusomed to, and impressed by, the idea that drugs which can influence the chemistry of the mind can produce a change in the behavior of human beings, along comes a reversal of the same process, a throwback to ways of life sterner than those we know today.

Instead of taking a drug to influence the chemical processes of the mind so they will result in a certain brand of action, you begin by forcing or persuading the individual into that certain brand of action. The experience of actually performing that action whips the chemical processes into line with the action, so that they accept it peacefully and without struggle, and don't need any drugs to ease them into it.

Suppose, for instance, the individual has a phobia, which might be called a dollar-phobia because it consists of being afraid to touch a dollar bill. Under the new pill-dominated psychology, you might give this individual the right kind of pill, which would pro duce a chemical reaction up in his brain, which would lead him to the ability to ouch a dollar bill without dread. But under the newest but still es entially old-fashioned method of dealing with such a phobia, you would take the individual who hated to touch dollar bills and hold his hand while you plunged it into a whole hamper basket full of dollar

Eventually, under such repeated experience, and after a sufficient number of dollars had been touched physically the experience would send signals up to the chemistry in the brain, and tell the brain chemistry that it liked dollar

There are now professional phobia curers who will give you this kind of behavior therapy for about the same fee as they would have to charge for a couch and pills.

But in an earlier, rougher America, you could and would be likely to try, or have somebody force you into, a do it yourself kind of cure.

For a couple of centuries at least New England lived and flourished on the theory that if there was anything you were afraid to do, that was the thing you

Harassing Our Friends

There are few of us who could run down the list of cold and cough remedies now put on the spot by the Federal Trade Commission without recognizing an old and comforting friend.

Now, after years of faithful and friendly service to those people who had learned to believe in them, most of the familiars on the American cold shelf scene have been ordered to stand and deliver certain proof of their efficacies. The feeling of warm and comforting friendship we may have when we reach for our own favorite remedy, or the illusion we have, afterward, that we have had our condition soothed, decongested, or even actually improved such subjective impressions will go for nought. It will take the judgment of a clinic scientist, backed by instrumental data, to give good old favorite remedy a clean bill for the future.

If it falls the test, it will then be for bidden to make any claim that it can accomplish what we hope it will ac-

And if there is one thing that is sure, it is that a patent medicine which doesn't believe in itself is certainly never going to get anybody else to beentific measurement, there is the ques tion of what harm is really done if the manufacturer and the consumer of the cough and cold medicine conspire together to pretend that the remedy in question does indeed have sovereign

Many of us, long ago, realized that there was more satisfaction than cure, more illusion than remedy, in reaching for the modern descendant of the trade name that was in the family medicine closet when we were young. And, although we don't really want to fight the Federal Trade Commission, we warn it: Before you take away, by any process of trying to discredit them, the remedies we know and love, be sure you have replacements just as good as they

Lure Of A Lottery

Public interest in establishment of a state lottery in Oregon has risen since Gov. Torn McCall said the people should take another look at this method of rais ing revenue. Sen. Jack Bain of Multnomah and others, from time to time, have unsuccessfully sought legislative approv al. A vote of the pecple to amend the Constitution would be necessary.

Almost every impoverished Latin American country has conducted lotteries for state revenues and charity through many years without discernible effect in improving the living conditions of the people. New Jersey has had better success amon? the states because it has made it so easy for all to buy 50-cent lottery tickets from machines or other dispensaries. But New Jersey is highly urnized and adjacent to the New York urban population. Even so, net revenue from its state lottery the first year was only about $60 million.

If Oregon is to take another look at a lottery, it should be a long, cool look. The idea is popular. Probably it would be voted in if put on the ballot, for the lure of enrichment for a minor invest ment is almost irresistible. But the amount of revenue to be obtained would not be great enough to make much difference in overall tax bills. A lottery would be another patchwork tax to keep the old tax structure tottering along when what is needed is a major restruc turing. It would also make many poor families poorer. And a state operate gambling system is always an invitation One thing about a state lottery is that t doesn't take the place of gambling with cards or dice or roulette wheels which many seek for excietment, recreation or profit. No skill is involved, even in the betting. The percentage of repay-ment to winners is far lower than for most gambling, even slot machines. The state takes the big bite. So let's look, but let's examine the proposition closely be-fore we put the state into the lottery busness. - PORTLAND OREGONIAN.

Connecticut Yankee By A.H.O.

Before one proclaims that another great and angry era of schism in the Democratic party of Connecticut has now arrived, there must be some development of numerical and section al strength for the challengers to the existing party order. That is not completely impos sible in a party which is out of power and full of discontented ambitions and hungers.

If the numerical and section al spread of the insurrection develops, then the captains of the rebellion, New Haven Town Chairman Arthur Barbieri, former State Senator Marcus, and former candidate for governo Emilio Q. Daddario, will have troops to go with their proclamations and their banners, and then a kind of factional state organization which will enlist malcontent sub-factions in the various cities and towns. Eventually, the insurrection may dare try for a vote in the emocratic State Central Com nittee, or for control of a state convention, with candidates of ts own for state chairman, or for governor. The progress of the insurred tion may be hastened and helped by the possibility that Dem ocratic State Chairman John Bailey, the old champion still on the mound, may not choose, or may not retain the muscle, to defend himself vigorously. filled eyes, viewed his ancestral land. Broken in health, he had nothing to offer the nation of Israel, but was accepted as he was. Similarly, all are broken to offer God as summer atonement or by which to profit his God (Job 22:2, 3). Yet when by faith he offers himself, the righteousness of Jesus Christ is imputed to him—he is accepted as he is (Titus 3:5).

HURCH OF CHRIST

Human pride gets in our way. We feel our personal goodness is sufficient, or, realizing our inadequacy, we struggle to "earn" acceptance with God. Paul found this agony futile, finally savoring victory through Jesus (Rom. 7:21-25).

Jerry West Leads Lakers Over Bucks

LOS ANGELES (AP)-Jerry West says the homecourt advantage in the National Basketball Association isn't just rumor; it's in the game Friday night that lifted the Los Angeles Lakers over Milwaukee's Bucks 118-105 in a National Basketball Association game of more importance than simply another victory. The team with the best record during the regular season gets odd playoff games at home and the importance is evident in that this year, the Bucks' only victory over the Lakers has come in Milwaukee and the Lakers' two victories over the Bucks have been here. "I went out there tonight looking to shoot the ball," said West. "I don't usually do that, but I felt I had to. I feel I play

Dressing the Circus

Not only did designer Don Foote create over 1,000 costumes for the performers in "High-lights of the Ringling Bros, and Barnum & Balley Circus," a "Bell System Family Theatre" special on NBC Feb. 27, but he designed 258 costumes just for the animals.

Disney Shows Morgan Horse

On Sundays Feb, 6 and 13 at 7:30 p.m., "The Wonderful World of Disney" will present a twopart drama/ "Justin Morgan Had a Horse," the story of Justin Morgan, a penniless schoolteacher who developed a breed of light carriage and saddle horses in colonial Vermont.

The Morgan horse is Amer-ica's first native breed and the most versatile. It was at one time king of American race

Morgan blood contributed to the American saddle horse, the Tennessee Walking Horse and the Standardbred breeds. Additionally, Morgan horse units were the most valued of the Civil War cavalries.

'Teen-Ager' Signed

Mary Colleen Fitzpatrick, Miss Teen-age America of 1972, has been signed to an exclusive, long-term talent contract by the CBS Television Network, it was announced by Fred Silverman, Vice President, Programs, "We have every confidence that we will be able to develop Miss Fitzpatrick into a major television personality. She will be used on several of our current programs, with our objective, of course, being a series of her own," Silverman said.

WTIC Presents Radar Weather

Broadcast Plaza Inc. of Hartford has introduced its new radar weather system to television audiences over WTIC-TV (Channel 3).

The new radar equipment, the most sophisticated and complex weather radar installation in the country, will enable the Travelers Weather Service to bring the best weather information available to viewers in the WTIC area.

The radar will be seen cn "Channel 3 Weather," Monday through Saturday at 6 p.m. and 11:15 p.m., and at 11 p.m. Sunday.

The radar is used to detect location of rain or snow transmitter sends out short bursts of radio energy, which are reflected off masses of raindrops or other precipitation. As the transmitter antenna rotates, these "targets" are displayed
