Town-City Bus Debuts

By DOUG BEVINS (Herald Reporter)
The Manchester - to - Hartford express commuter bus got rolling this morning with an encouraging number of passengers - 76 - according to the Connecticut Department Transportation (DOT).

The buses were all on schedule and no problems were reported by either the DOT or the Connecticut Co., which runs the The one-way fare is 50 cents.

Free parking and a bus shelter are provided at Burr Corners via a DOT arrangement with developer Charles Schnier. The buses make four stops in downtown Hartford. Returns trips will be every ten minutes between 4 and 6 p.m.

"We had a good fast ride and a comfortable ride," said State Transportation Commissioner A. Earl Wood, who took the first bus leaving Manchester. The bus run, estimated to take 18 minutes, took just over ten minutes, Wood said.

Although 76 passengers appears to be a small number all of the buses were less than half full - that figure is slightly higher than the results of the West Hartford-to-Hartford commuter bus on its first day (Jan. 17). The West Hartford route, which starts at Corbins Corner, started - like the Manchester route - as a 90-day experiment. In April, the DOT decided to continue the West Hartford service, and those buses now carry more than 250 passengers per day. Manchester Mayor John

Thompson, Deputy Mayor Pascal Prignano, and Town Manager Robert Weiss went to Burr Corners this morning to see the Mayor Thompson said he hopes the buses will be successful, and both he and Weiss urg ed Manchester residents to take advantage of the service.

Thompson, watching traffic on Tolland Tpke. by Burr Corners, lamented that many passing cars carried only a driver.

Thompson has often said he favors mass transit, such as buses to alleviate traffic congestion and pollution. "It (the Burr Corners buses) will be successful - it had better be," Thompson said. "This is our first big step in mass transit," Commissioner Wood said in regard to the two bus projects. The ultimate answer to the transportation problem, Wood noted, would require "some form of compulsion." The DOT is often under attack by conservationists for the many highway construction projects, but DOT officials have said the alternative - mass transit-will only succeed if people can forego their cars. The commuter bus project will allow families to make do with only one car, Wood added. The Connecticut Co. will receive a subsidy from the DOT to cover any loss in the express bus service from Manchester.

The Court And The Convention The Supreme Court decision with regard to the delegate wars of the Democratic National Convention was not a decision on the merits of either the McGov-

It was a decision to keep the Court out of the business of running the conern or the anti-McGovern claims.

It was a decision to leave the Democratic party, and its squabbles, up to its own devices and responsibilities, as if no courts were in existence.

There is, of course, a certain potential penalty in leaving one of the great processes in American political life to fend for itself, and be its own conscience.

It is the possibility that it will proceed to do something illegal, and that it will be allowed to get away with it, and that, as a result of law being broken, with impunity, a great injustice will be done.

Thus, although the California law said clearly that the winner of that state's Convention, through its Credentials Committee, has already mocked that law, and the main convention itself will now have to make its own decision whether it wishes to honor the law or flout it.

In this situation, the Supreme Court

now says to the Convention: Go ahead If it was a toe-tapping, ear-pleasing and do what you do; no court is going to tell you what is legal and what isn't; no court is going to tell you which delegates to seat; no court is going to be at hand, willing to jump into emergency session the next time you have some problem of legality you don't wish to resolve among the part of the Supreme Court. It may even help ruin the Democratic party, although we have great faith in that party's ability to survive its own tradi-

This may seem unkind and callous on

But the threatened possibility on the other side of coin is that the Court could, by attempting to comfort all politicians in controversial pain and by attempting to police individual actions in the political arena, wind up ruining itself.

Had the Supreme Court undertaker to give a specific ruling as to which delegations should or should not be seated at Miami Beach, the Convention itself was still going to make the decision whether or not it would accept the Court ruling. And there would be, if the Comvention voted to defy the Court, no way for the Court to punish the Convention, its delegates, or the Democratic party for its defiance of the Court order.

So the rude, rough choice had to be made, to let the Convention itself decide what is legal and what is illegal, and which it wants to do, and whatever happens to the Democratic Convention, according to its vice or virtue, at least try to preserve the Court.

Being Nice To Wallace

As we have watched everybody being so very nice to Governor George Wallace, just because he received grievous wounds from one of the unstable mentalities whom he himself specialized in exciting, we have had, we confess, some instinct to cry halt.

"This," we were almost going to write, "is still the same menace of a man he has always been; to treat him suddenly as if he were an acceptable member of society is merely to add to his power, and power of any degree for such a man as Wallace is a threat to the American way of life."

But the truth is that we are no longer sure that such a warning would be valid We don't trust Governor Wallace to recover completely from the discovery that all kinds of people can be nice to him, even across wide gulfs of instinct

We are not sure he himself is going to make those gulfs quite as wide, in the future, as he has liked to picture them, We will be surprised if all these recent tenders of political respectability, from other candidates and leaders, do not nourish within Governor Wallace himself some alight instinct to be a little more re-It is not very strange, after all, the way we are now betting. We are merely counting on the possibility that George Wallace is, after all, human, and likes to be noticed and liked and accepted and

There are several large cinemas showing Spanish and foreign films. About twenty important theatres, such as the government-sponsored ones, namely the Espanol and the Maria Guerrero, show Spanish plays, comedies, tragedies, comic operettas, ballet and many reviews in a lighter vein.

A picturesque and important figure in Madrid at night is the "sereno" (night-watchman). He alone knows all the dark secrets of the city. At the door of your house or hotel, clap your hands and he will appear with a great bunch of keys and a heavy truncheon. With a polite smile he will open your door for you for which you reward him with a small tip.

Next week look for selected dishes of Spain.

The illumination of the city's major buildings makes them a visual delight by night as well as day. This is part of a general improvement to the city's lighting, designed to help banish crime and its covering shadows from the streets, at the same time as it enchants the eye by spotlighting architectural treasures to show off both their fine detail and their imposing masses.
