Genius Still Busy At Center The genius who regulates our comings and goings up at the Center has been at

There has been, as many motorists have perhaps noticed, a relatively hopeful period up at the Center, during which in increasing number of Manchester motorists have educated themselves to the fact that the Center's proper handling of traffic coming from the north depends upon the organization of that trafextreme right, toward the west and Hartford, the other heading on the extreme left, toward and out East Center St., and the one in the middle headed for the south and down Main St.

miliarly understood by so many motorists that the operations at the Center had some occasional semblance of sence and smoothness, along came the presiding traffic genius again, and painted some lines on the pavement. There are, accurately enough, three directional indications on the pavement. But the middle, or the south direction, and the leftward, tween two lines so close together they provide room only for one line of cars. Where two lines of automobiles had learned to form, by extending their occupation of the traffic space slightly to the left, there are now the arrows which indicate two lines but the space for only

This latest stroke of genius maintains a grand consistency which has distinguished the record of the traffic experts at the Center. The record stands secure: they have never intentionally done anything yet which has not made the traffic situation there worse.

Take, for instance, what seems likely ontribution to the nation. to be the quite comfortable final solution of the million dollar problem posed by The odds now are that the million dolhan you got it. lar ransom paid by the air line involved line, so far as the ransom is concerned, would be $1,600. It also, of course, incurred fuel and crew expenses for the flights to Boston and Algeria.

So it could be possible that the air line got out of this hijacking for less actual expense and trouble than might have been involved in adding the personnel and equipment, and spending the time, recessary for that complete and thorough search of all passengers and luggage which any naive reader of the news would assume had already been instituted long ago.

The trouble with getting that comfort able about hijacking is that the basic danger in the crime-which has not yet demonstrated itself-still persists, and will persist until the crime itself has actually been halted. That is the danger of disaster to a whole plane load of innocents. It is not a game, as the deaths of at least two innocent passengers have already indicated.

It is not a game. And it is not enough to keep bluffing about the decree of security being enforced. We cannot learn to live with hijackings without, sooner or later, dying in them.

Alan King And Son

Alan King, who often stands quitalone and eminent in his ability to touch this nation's funnybone, touched the heart, the other day, with his confessions in the role of one of those fathers who finds a son in trouble. Discussing his story, in the hope might both comfort and help other fathers and other sons, the famous comedan said things like these: "The greatest danger is that we see what is happening (with our children but we don't want to see it, we don't want to believe it." "I didn't want to come home and discipline the child first thing; I didn't want to be a bad guy. I used to think that driving all night to get home was showing my concern, but all I was was body in a locked room.

When I did things with him, it was token, there was no continuity. They are aware of it when you are playing at being a father. They can smell it, just as they can smell true affection, concern and parental guidance." "The average father doesn't lead my life, but it's the same thing. He goes to work, comes home, says he doesn't want to hear about the little problems because he's had a tough day at the office, puts on the television and then goes to bed. "I see successful men running companies with hundreds of men; they know how to deal with every situation, how to discipline and reward in the business world. But the biggest business they are running is their family and they fail it. When you've been through this, you find through it." This New York Times interview with Alan King was accompanied by one with

Robert King, the son, who now believes he has emerged from his ordeal. "Sometimes," said Robert King when I'm under a lot of pressure there's that split-second urge to drugs but that's it. I've invested too much to throw it out of the window. There are lots of other things to get high on-like

No More Speeches To Give

Sen. Thomas Eagleton is shown in various gestures as he appeared on the Dick Cavett Show in New York Thursday. "There aren't any more speeches to give, there aren't any more airplanes to catch-you just sit around," the former Democratic vice presidential candidate said on the TV show. He added he harbored no bitterness toward the experience surrounding his drop from the race.

How To Do Tie-Dyeing

By JAN SCHAFFER Here are the principles of tiedying, according to the little old lady in the fifth house on the left

1. Get some material that you know will take the dye well -I suggest muslin, cotton, any of your old T-shirts or underwear. 2. Tie off the material. Use either rubber bands, string, or just plain old-fashioned knot-

ing. Always twist material before tying, and tie all knots and ties really tight. 3. Mix your dyes. 4. Use hot, hot tap water. I would suggest for your first dye that you use just the three primary colors. (That's red, blue, and yellow.) 5. Dip only parts of what you are dying into the dye - that way you get a sort of a rainbow

Ah yes-a few of my secrets that I give to you from me! A) Before you twist the material into a spiral, put a large (or small) button at the top.

B) Always dye yellow first. C) you can always keep your dves for two or thre days e D) Dys STAIN - your hands, and anything else they get into.

·(E) Don't wash your whatever in the washin' machine because Mom is really gonna get on you when her sheets start comin out like rainbows. (Moms are hung up on white

New York and Boston still have an outside chance to catch the leaders. August is an important month. Boston would like a rush on the box office. This would become a reality only if the club can win on the field.

Proof that this is a daffy baseball season were these figures supplied by Harold Kaese, columnist with the Boston Globe. "The Red Sox lead the American League in base hits - doubles, triples and home runs, yet are last in runs scored." he related.

How does Red Sox manager Eddie Kasko like day-night doubleheaders? "I don't and neither do any of the

"A string of base hits keeps the presfor Friday night's game, about 19,000," sure on a pitcher during a rally. "It's the home run that takes the pres sure off," Kasko reported as we talked. "If you still have the lead, a pitcher most always pitches better after giving up a homer. Knowing that there are runners on base worries a pitcher more than when the bases are empty. After a homer he (pitcher) doesn't have to worry about the runners and can take his stretch and he's usually far more effective." the manager said.
