Terrorism Must be Stopped

The tragedy at Khartoum strikes at the very fundamentals of civilized society.

Its implications transcend national boundaries and while the Sudanese capital may be remote from Manchester, the effects of the terrorist assassination of hostages must cause each of us to reassess this precarious world and its future.

For the criminal action of the Black September terrorists is not limited merely to the men killed who were the chance victims of their demented killers.

The issue before each of us how far can we, in the name of humanity, tolerate these violence against our civilization?

Where do we draw the line in negotiation with criminals for the lives of hostages? At what point do we, as a civilization based on fundamental laws of human decency, say there is a price which cannot be paid by society as a whole for the life or lives of a few individuals?

This is very agonizing and it is grossly unfair to impose this burden upon national leaders and the relatives and friends of the hostages alone. We must and should have a vigorous debate on the issue of how far our country and other countries should go in protecting its citizens against this bestial form of extortion and kidnapping.

Heading For The Sunset?

The sheriff may appear only on the late, late show in Connecticut, presumably leading a posse in pursuit of a notorious band of outlaws, if a proposed amendment to the Constitution clears the General Assembly and meets with a favorable vote of the people in 1974.

Sen. George L. Gunther, R-Stratford, claims sheriffs, Nutmeg state, are no longer needed. He says they survived the abolition of county government 14 years ago and the scrutiny of the Constitutional Convention in 1964, clearly an indication of the durability of the office which goes back at least to the days of Robin Hood and his tilts with the notorious Sheriff of Nottingham.

The role has been dwindling for some time. As the state became more urban, town and state police have absorbed police functions and according to Gunther, the sheriffs had the job of running the jails, lost this function when jails were consolidated into the state Department of Correction.

Now the sheriffs must do something beside draw a paycheck but apparently it is very minor and very insignificant. Maybe someone can defend the position and its retention.

In the meantime, we think the assembly should seriously consider Gunther's proposal and let the people decide. Now eight sheriffs on the state payroll is not amount to much in dollars and cents but if they are really contributing to better government this money might mean eight more staff members in a custodian institution, an undermanned agency, or, if you really want to dream, a saving of thousands of dollars to the taxpayer.

Our only regret is that this casting of a critical eye on whether or not certain state officials and functionaries are necessary to good government in Connecticut is limited only to sheriffs. We think it would be wise for the assembly to periodically appraise every public service position in the state in the light of services performed, the costs of these services, and if there might not be a better way of getting the job done.

Decision, it appears to us, is inescapable.

Unless terrorists groups, be they Black Septemberists involved in Mideast politics or American bred criminals holed up in sporting goods stores, are given an unmistakable understanding there can be no bargaining on the basis of criminal acts they will continue attempts to trade human lives for their ends.

We must be prepared, and perhaps this is the most difficult decision of all, to have the courage and solidarity to stand by such a non-negotiating decision for it will be most surely tested by the criminal terrorists.

Standing by such a policy might mean the death of some future hostages; but no matter how abhorrent this thought may now seem, the stark realities of terrorist extortion and assassination leaves us little choice.

Another sacrifice, should it occur, would not be in vain if it hastens the end to this expanded form of criminality which seems to increase with each tragic attempt to negotiate.

Terrorism must be stopped. It will cost a price. We must be prepared to pay that price or words written, seemingly ages ago, will again have meaning.

"The one means that wins the easiest victory over reason: Terror and force." The author was the most brutal terrorist of all—Adolf Hitler.

Mr. Pettibone shuffled the papers. "Let's see, application to be bombed, four 3-by-5 photographs of each vital military target and six copies of your unconditional surrender agreement. Everything seems in order."

"Good," said the Rhatt. "When will you begin?"

"Not so fast," said Mr. Pettibone with annoyance. "I wasn't so bad when we rebuilt Germany and Japan into two of the wealthiest nations on the globe after World War II. But now that we're talking about pouring billions into North Vietnam, all you twobits countries want to hop on the gravy train. What makes you think you deserved to be bombed?"

"Because if you don't," said the Rhatt. "I will lose human wave attacks on neighboring Mbonga, (cq) which is a bastion of democracy and the key to South-by-Southwest Antarctica. Today Phynkia, tomorrow the world!"

"You obviously don't understand U.S. foreign policy," said Mr. Pettibone sternly. "We only do these things for our enemies." Next!

Can America Afford Enemies?

One of the busiest agencies in Washington these days is the Bureau of Bombing Applications located high up in the State Department.

Each morning, the vestibule is jammed with foreign dignitaries filling in applications and waiting to be interviewed by that harried public servant, The Hon. Homer T. Pettibone, who presides from behind a wicket one end of the room.

"All right, Number 43," called out Mr. Pettibone in a typical case the other day.

A large, bearded man in a herringbone stood up and nervously shoved his papers through the wicket. Mr. Pettibone studied them carefully.

"You are, I see," said Mr. Pettibone, "the Rhatt (cq) of Phynkia?"

"Correct," said the Rhatt. "I am the hereditary leader of my beloved people."

"Good," said the Rhatt. "When will you begin?"

WASHINGTON — The intentionally abrasive style of Howard Phillips in dismantling the Office of Economic Opportunity (OEO) — a style now being forced to be more adroitly managed by a new director after being lapped as OEO director. Although his roots are in the right-wing Young Americans for Freedom (YAF), Phillips has contacts in the party's left and helped manage liberal Republican Sen. Richard Schweiker's 1968 campaign in Pennsylvania.

Phillips, a former White House aide active in the liberal Republican Ripon Society, endorsed Phillips for the OEO post to presidential aides. Several drop-off points have been designated throughout Bolton, including the town's two cooperative nursery schools.

Hebron Kindergarten Registration

Registration for children entering kindergarten next September will be held at both elementary schools on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of this week between 9:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m. to be eligible to attend, a child must be five years of age before next Jan. 1.

The principals wish to inform parents that registration forms can be picked up at the time of registration, completed at home, and returned to the school later. However, a birth certificate to verify the child's age should be presented when registering. It is not necessary to bring the child at the time of registration.

Both principals stress that it is important to remember that registration will not be considered complete until all forms are on file in the office, and children will not be admitted to school until this matter has been attended to.

Some time in June, a visitation day at school for the children will be arranged. An orientation program for parents is also planned. More information on this will be announced at later date.

The second annual gymnastic show, sponsored by the PTO, will be held Wednesday evening at the Hebron Elementary School and Thursday evening at the Gilead Hill School. Both performances will start at 7 p.m. The PTO has scheduled two shows this year to help alleviate the overcrowdedness that occurred last year when parents and friends jammed the Gilead School. The two shows also will enable more children, grades kindergarten through sixth, to participate in the shows.

The shows not only give residents the opportunity to see what is happening in the physical education programs at the elementary schools but also to meet James Cello, the new physical education teacher at the school.

This year's shows will feature demonstrations by the children on parallel bars, uneven bars, balance beams, vaulting, side horse, and the ropes as well as tumbling and floor exercises.

The Rev. Gretchen Hall will give the meditation with participation by the four members of the board of deacons and the entire group.

In charge of preparations are members of the spiritual life and progress committees.

Ash Wednesday An Ash Wednesday evening service for all teen-age girls and women of the community sponsored by the Gilead Congregational Church Women's Fellowship, will be held Wednesday evening at 7, in the church.

King And Queen of Sikkim Visit U.S.

Matthew M. Moriarty of Manchester, along with other members of the Advisory Board of Albertus Magnus College in New Haven, were on hand to welcome the King and Queen of Sikkim when they visited the United States earlier this year. King Palden Thongyal and Queen Hope Cooke were in the United States to receive honorary degrees of Doctor of Laws from Francis H. Horn, college president, in Rosary Hall on the college campus. Reason for the secrecy surrounding the award was that the royal couple was traveling in the U.S. incognito with their family and requested that the ceremony be kept confidential until they had left the country. An audience of approximately 200, as well as four of the children of the royal family, attended the ceremonies. Following the award presentations, members of the board joined the royal family for dinner. Moriarty, president of Moriarty Bros., an automobile dealership, described the couple as "friendly and serene" while traveling to the Himalayas. His wife had died in childbirth several years earlier. The couple became officially engaged in November 1961, and were married on March 20, 1963. In presenting the degree to her, Sister Maria Patricia, O.P., Dean of Students at Albertus Magnus and princess of the Albertus Magnus religious community of the Dominican Sisters of St. Mary of the Springs, cited the queen's many accomplishments. Among these are the establishment of a museum and library of Sikkimese history as well as the promotion of Cottage Industries whose products are carried by many New York stores, particularly in textiles and jewelry. In addition, Sister Patricia said the queen has worked vigorously for educational development including the new university. Lawrence W. Jannotti of New Haven, chairman of the college's board of trustees, presented King Nangyal with "his honorary degree. As the ruler of Sikkim," Jannotti said, "he has continued to give vigorous and enlightened leadership to his country as it moves increasingly into the rapidly changing world of the late 20th century." The King received his early education in Roman Catholic schools, and also studied to become a Buddhist monk. However, when his older brother, the Crown Prince, a flier in the Royal Indian Air Force, was killed in an airplane crash, Prince Palden had to forego plans for Cambridge University in England, and as the new heir apparent, remained in Sikkim where he served as principal adviser to his father, then the king, until he succeeded him on the throne in 1965. He established an Institute of Tibetology which is one of the leading centers for Mahayana Buddhist and Tibetan studies in the world, and is actively promoting scientific agriculture, commerce and industry in his country. Children of the royal couple who witnessed the ceremony were: Prince Wogchuk, a student at the University of London; Princess Yangchen, a student at an English girls' school; Prince Palden, 9, and Princess Hope Luezum, 4. Crown Prince Tenzing, a student at Cambridge University, was not present.

But we couldn't get you to practice. Short of tying you to that piano, there was no way." "You're right," I said remembering with a blush. "But I could play 'Country Gardens' all the way through without making a single mistake."

Police Log

Two 15-year-old Manchester boys were arrested Monday and charged with a break and entry at a Sunset St. home. The boys, unidentified because of their ages, were apprehended by police at Bradley International Airport as they were attempting to buy tickets to Hawaii. Airport officials became suspicious of them due to their ages and the large amount of money they were carrying. Upon discovering where the boys were from, officials contacted town police who went to Bradley to bring the boys back. In statements given to the detective bureau Monday, the boys admitted the break and described the events of the day as follows: The boys said that they had skipped school and went to the home of one of their friends, who lives at the Sunset St. home. They found no one there, and they entered through an unlocked side door. Once inside, they found two small safes which they pried open by using a hatchet and a screwdriver. Approximately $700 in cash, jewelry and coins were taken in the break. The boys have been referred to juvenile authorities. The investigation is continuing, according to the detective bureau. Other arrest made by Manchester police included: Kevin C. Morgan, 17, of 72 Oak St., and Edward G. Millard of Bennington, Vt., charged early this morning with breach of the peace. They were taken into custody at 72 Oak St. by town and state police. The two were processed by Manchester Police and turned over to Connecticut State Police authorities. William G. Ogden, 41, of 137 Branford St., charged Monday afternoon with breach of the peace in connection with an alleged domestic incident at his home. He was released on a $100 non-surety bond. Court date is March 26. Frank W. Robozzi, 29, of Hartford, charged Sunday with operating an unregistered motor vehicle. He was observed at Main and Henry Sts. operating the vehicle and was issued a summons to appear in court March 26. Jeffery L. Chastain, 18, of 52 Village St., Rockville was issued a summons last night charging him with reckless driving. The summons was issued as a result of an incident on March 2 in which he is alleged to have been observed operating his vehicle in a reckless manner. Court date is March 26.

Conservation Group To Discuss Projects With Town Directors

BETTY RYDER (Herald Reporter)

The Manchester Conservation Commission will meet with the Board of Directors March 13 to discuss the proposed noise ordinance, acquiring Hilliard Park area by open space funding, consideration of a trial curbside newspaper pickup, and to report on the Case Mt. project to date.

The commission, headed by Mrs. Theresa Parla, had sent a letter to the Board of Directors Jan. 11 requesting such a meeting. The meeting will be held prior to the board's regular meeting.

At the commission meeting last night in the Municipal Building coffee room, discussion centered around the cost of the survey for Case Mt., which totaled $6,000.

Dr. Frederick Spaulding, commission member, said he had been assured by Town Manager Robert Weiss that 50 per cent of the cost of the Case Mt. survey is returnable to the town by the federal government through the Housing & Urban Development (HUD).

The commission voted to send a check in the amount of $9,000 to the town engineer in payment of the survey.

Mrs. Parla noted that Lyall and Foulds Division of Colonial Board Co. on Parker St. had given the town $12,000 to build the recycling facilities, and are to be repaid on a 60 to 40 per cent basis; sixty per cent of the monies realized from the paper collection to go to the paper company, the other 40 per cent to the town until the $12,000 is paid.

The problem of gypsy moth infestation was discussed and Mrs. Parla said she has 5,782 acres of town land infested with gypsy moth egg masses.

Consideration to planning a "Gypsy Moth Egg Removal Day" was also discussed, and it was decided to try to secure the present and future waste groups to scrape the egg masses off the trees.

At the hearing over the proposed State Department of Human Services, a department which would bring a single body eight present state agencies, including the correction, welfare, aging and health departments. Most of the speakers at the hearing urged that the proposal be kept from going into action while a special commission studied the plan.

A statement prepared by the Central Naugatuck Valley Health Council urged the planning to provide an additional planning period of one year with guaranteed participation in the planning by representatives of interested and affected citizens and professional groups.

The fire, which occurred last Wednesday evening, is believed to have started in a defective ceiling light and swept into the attic.

This fire was extinguished and the fire department left. It is believed, according to Comerford, that there was only about a 20-minute lapse between the time the fire chief left the house and a passing motorist reported the second fire.

At the Andover Elementary School, where the two young girls, Dolores and Brenda are students, principal Donald H. Libby reports that a committee is being formed to "assess the family's needs" with the help of public health nurse Mrs. Nancy Lack.

And the Women's Auxiliary of the fire department has organized a drive for clothing, food, bedding and toiletries for the family.

Residents in this small rural community are proving that the old custom of helping a neighbor in need is not lost.

On Sunday evening, the home of Peter Gresko on Rt. 6 and Banker Hill Rd. was raked by fire and Gresko and his three daughters lost everything.

The fire, which according to Fire Marshal Joseph Comerford, apparently started in the attached garage area, quickly spread to the basement of the house where the oil tanks are housed.

Companies responding from Bolton, Hebron, Columbia, and South Coventry, along with the Andover fire department, were unable to save the house which is considered a total loss.

Second Fire At Dwelling Under Probe

ANNE EMT Correspondent Tel. 228-3971

Andover Fire Marshal Joseph Comerford reported this morning that a second fire which occurred last week at a home on Rt. 6 owned by Richard Selig of Lake Rd. is of suspicious origin and is being investigated by the State Fire Marshal's office.

Comerford denies implications made by the owner that the fire started up again because of improper procedures by the fire department.

The fire, which occurred last Wednesday evening, is believed to have started in a defective ceiling light and swept into the attic.

This fire was extinguished and the fire department left. It is believed, according to Comerford, that there was only about a 20-minute lapse between the time the fire chief left the house and a passing motorist reported the second fire.

At the Andover Elementary School, where the two young girls, Dolores and Brenda are students, principal Donald H. Libby reports that a committee is being formed to "assess the family's needs" with the help of public health nurse Mrs. Nancy Lack.

Residents in this small rural community are proving that the old custom of helping a neighbor in need is not lost.

On Sunday evening, the home of Peter Gresko on Rt. 6 and Banker Hill Rd. was raked by fire and Gresko and his three daughters lost everything.

The fire, which according to Fire Marshal Joseph Comerford, apparently started in the attached garage area, quickly spread to the basement of the house where the oil tanks are housed.

Companies responding from Bolton, Hebron, Columbia, and South Coventry, along with the Andover fire department, were unable to save the house which is considered a total loss.

THE FUNERAL DIRECTOR IS YOUR PERSONAL REPRESENTATIVE IN...

CARING FOR THE DEAD

Man has always buried his dead with respect and ceremony—beginning with the early Egyptians, about 3000 B.C., right up to the familiar American funeral of today.

The roots of American funeral customs and practices extend back through western civilization into early Judeo-Christian beliefs concerning the nature of God, man, and hereafter. Most people believe that the sacred quality of man exists in the soul or spirit and that the body which housed the soul during life deserves dignified treatment after death.

Regarded only as a physical fact, a dead body is a worthless thing. But nothing can deny or obscure the knowledge that just at a brief moment ago it was someone dearly loved who lived in return. And so, for what it was, rather than what it is, the body is almost universally treated with reverence and dignity.

LAUREL LAKE? LAKE? YES! A Herald Background Report

MANCHESTER, CONN., WEDNESDAY, MARCH 7, 1973 - VOL. XCII, No. 12

LAUREL LAKE? LAKE? YES!

Director of Public Works William O'Neill made application for a $38,000 grant from the New England Regional Planning Commission. The grant, for conducting a Land Use - Solid Waste survey of the Olcott St. Disposal Area, to include the proposed purchase of Laurel Lake, subsequently was granted.

In March, the Town Planning and Zoning Commission backed the concept of purchasing Laurel Lake and improving the area. And in April, the state's assistant commissioner for environmental protection gave tacit backing to the proposal.

Robert Chase said that, although the state was discouraging municipalities from investing in landfill sites, Manchester plans to purchase Laurel Lake as a good idea because, in the event state plans for solid waste disposal materialize, the Laurel Lake site could be sold or used for another purpose.

In May, the Board of Directors conducted a public hearing on the proposed purchase. Most who spoke were in favor of the acquisition. The opposition concerned the price and the 10-year deferred payment proposal.

In February of 1972, the proposed acquisition was backed by the Hockanum River Linear Park Coordinating Committee. And also in February, 600 to $446,000. If the town were to pay for the purchase in one installment, the $650,000 price for purchasing it in 10 installments remained unchanged.

Also in July, came an offer under a new formula—$492,200. If the town were to purchase the 110-acre parcel 20 acres at a time.

The newest proposal was looked upon favorably by the directors. They decided to conduct a public hearing on it. The hearing was scheduled for Nov
