State Animal Nominations

The search is under way for a state animal. Recently the Connecticut General Assembly indicated it is receptive to suggestions and is encouraging grammar school children to make nominations.

Although we are out of that class, despite some suggestions from some quarters that we made it only through some hanky-panky, we submit the following for the Assembly's auguest consideration: The Greyhoundus Connecticutus, a large box-like critter which has recently taken to hibernating from late fall until early spring because it cannot forage for itself. Then there is the Bugling Bureaucratus which is a fattish species which gathers mainly around federal troughs, which are being phased out, and the result is a clamor

right out of an Albert Hitchcock

A not so rare species is political predator, Democratic Outsiderus, which nips and yaps at its direct cousin, Republicanus Insiderus, which depending on the whims of the Nutmeg zookeepers, frequently is known as Republicanus Outsiderus, when the Democratic Outsiderus is in-

Not to be overlooked is the Feminus Liberatus who seeks to fly from the nest and brooding duties and leave nesting duties to the Panted Paternalis, a subdued species who appears ready to switch rather than fight.

And finally there is the Harried Ruffed Taxpayerus who spends his life digging and scratching only to have most of it eaten by the Insiduous Reaching Scrounger thus placing the Harried Ruffed Taxpayerus on the endangered species list.

Seriously though the state animal Connecticut needs, and its 49 sisters, is the Schmoo, but unfortunately this critter exists only in Dogpatch.

It held alcoholism to be the nation's biggest drug problem, the use of heroin second, and marijuana a distant third. The Commission reported a year ago that marijuana was virtually harmless to the casual user and recommended then, as it did again this month, that criminal penalties be ended for smoking pot or possessing small quantities of it. Fortunately, President Nixon and Congress declined to accept the first recommendation and doubtless will reject the second.

The Commission, headed by a. former Pennsylvania governor, Raymond Schaffer, has reached some dubious and controversial conclusions. Research has not proved marijuana to be "virtually harmless" despite emperical judgment of some casual users that they have not been harmed.

Come, speak out! This is your town, run on your tax money, by representatives elected to serve YOU. Government can only be by the people, for the people, when the people want it and make it that way. At this time with the high prices of everything, can you afford not to get involved? Are you satisfied with the way the town is run? Do you think the services you receive are satisfactory?

Now is the time to express your views and it's very important that the silent majority speaks out. The forgotten man, the taxpayer, is forgotten only if YOU allow him to be.

Freed Prisoners Saluted

Today to mark the end of direct American involvemen in South Vietnam with the final release of known prisoners of war and the completion of withdrawal of American troops after almost 11 years of war, The Herald, in lieu of its regular editorial page, is publishing a list of the prisoners of war who have been freed and are home or en

The list begins on page four and continues through page six and is published as a trixqhe to the prisoners in recognition of the suffering and captivity which resulted from their service to our country, the 45,943 who gave their lives, the 453.039 who were wounded in action, and, especially those who are listed as missing in action. Because of the length of the POW list, the Business Bodies Column usually published on Saturday will be carried in Monday's Herald.
