Watergate And Fairness

Soap opera fans and unquenchable Nixon Republicans aren't the only ones who are not completely enchanted with the Senate Watergate

A relatively disinterested observer. columnist Bernard Levin of the Times of London, wrote recently that the inquiry "is just about the most scandalous violation of every standard of justice to take place in a free society since the Southern gentry abandoned lynching as their favourite outdoor Overstated though it may be, Levin's observation comes at an appropriate time. For as he points out. tinges of McCarthyist inquisition have crept into the hearings and they threaten at times to become a more than acceptable substitute for reruns of the old Perry Mason series.

Inevitably, the Select Committee chairman, Sen. San Ervin, D-N.C. and its vice chairman, Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn., have been thrust into the starring roles, without any noticeable kicking and screaming on Ervin gives the impression of wallowing in the spotlight, playing the kindly but stern grandfather with a folksy anecdote for all occasions (and casion but are too good not to use). Baker, cool and suave, visions of 1976 nominations no doubt dancing in his head, is the picture of fairness. Thomas Jefferson unwigged, asking so many questions about morality that one begins to look for a halo lurking around his head.

The situation is high drama, of course, and ripe for this sort of thing. A playwright's touch is needed in the hearings - minor witnesses coming first to lay down a structure that the Big Boys will have to cope with later. The question is, after all, the extent of involvement of President Nixon in

The nature of the case demands a skeptical attitude toward everybody involved. There are so many selfinterests running around like headless chickens that nothing anybody says at the hearings can really be taken for

But that attitude should be applied equally to everyone. For to all practical purposes, Presi-should not have been held. It appears that they may succeed in revealing the depths of truth that might otherwise have remained suspicion. And whatever that truth is, it must be found and studied and understood. So the imperative importance of maintaining a scrupolous fairness in the hearings should be stressed to the committee members and staff.

It is imperative because it is the right and fair thing. It is imperative because the committee's findings must not be clouded by suspicions of partisanship or hedged by hints that the facts became lost in the show business trappings.

The 8th District board of directors convened Monday night for the start of its 1973-74 year, with the highlight the swearing in of its youngest member in recent history — 27-year-old Patrick Brown. Also sworn in was Paul Cervini, veteran nember of the board and re-elected June 20 to another three-year term. Brown, also elected to a three-year term, succeeds Patrick Donlan, who declined to run for Administrating the oaths was Joseph Volz, district clerk since 1951. Also in office since 1951 is Howard Keeney, district treasurer. Mary Laraia, who continues as tax collector, has held that post since 1963. William Hankinson began his fourth consecutive one-year term as president. He had been a director from 1963 to 1989.
