South Windsor Housing Grant Denial Upsets Mayor Glassman

In a letter to Gov. Thomas Meskall, Mayor Abraham Glassman has expressed disappointment on behalf of the town that the state "did not see fit to add the required $25,000 grant to complete the town's first elderly housing project."

"Despite the many efforts of the town manager, the South Windsor Housing Authority and other local officials, this grant was denied to us and the town was forced to use local funds in order to see this project become a reality," Glassman said.

Fee Schedule For Cemeteries Effective Aug. 8

Manchester's new fee schedule for cemeteries will become effective Aug. 8, Robert Harrison, superintendent of cemeteries, has announced.

Because cemetery fee increases are subject to Phase III of federal guidelines, a 60-day delay was placed on implementing the new schedule — approved by the Board of Directors on June 12. The 60-day waiting period expires Aug. 8, unless Phase IV extends the freeze on prices, the new schedule will be in effect then.

Columbia Proposal Would Relax Zone Rules for Sheds

VIRGINIA CARLSON, Correspondent, TEL. 229-9224.

A proposal to relax zoning regulations concerning the erection of metal tool or storage sheds not on permanent foundations has been made to the Planning and Zoning Commission by building official Sam Pescatello.

Once a person applies for a license, he must wait five days unless the waiting period is waived by the First Selectman.

The ordinance exempts tool sheds from paying the fee as well as children under 18 years of age who are residents.

There would be a form which would have to be signed and notarized by adjoining neighbors which would be valid for a five-year period. This would have to be presented to the building official before a permit would be issued.

The proposal will be presented at a public hearing in August.

Economic Boom Slowing Down

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's economic growth slowed in the second quarter, as the administration wanted in its campaign to curb inflation, but the rate of braking was a little too fast for government economists.

The administration Thursday released additional details of its Phase 4 plan, including proposed ceiling price regulations for gasoline that could force rollovers of gasoline prices in some areas by Aug. 12.

The next big economic announcement is expected next week when the government likely will reveal a tough new program for allocation of petroleum products.

An announcement had been expected this week, but sources said the administration still had not decided how much of the allocation program should be mandatory and how much should remain voluntary.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Higher retail prices for food, fuels and household services shored the cost of living up seven-tenths of one per cent in June before President Nixon froze prices, the government said today.

The big gains were again led by higher grocery store prices which rose 1.7 per cent in June and were nearly 16 per cent higher than a year ago.

Bomb Found
TEL AVIV (AP) — A homemade pipe bomb was discovered on a bus that arrived in Tel Aviv today from the Arab town of Nablus, in the West Bank territory Israel occupied in the 1967 war.

But it was clear from what officials said that major features of the proposed regulations will be retained, including provisions to require large firms with inflation problems to absorb some of their increased costs rather than transfer them all into price hikes.

The regulations would allow companies to pass on cost increases only on a dollar-for-dollar basis, which means that as costs increased profit percentages would be reduced.

The Commerce Department reported Thursday that the country's economy grew at an annual rate of 2.6 per cent from April through June, the lowest quarterly increase since the fourth quarter of 1970.

The economic figures were contained in the preliminary quarterly report on the Gross National Product, a measure of the value of the country's total output of goods and services.

The report also showed that inflation continued to soar, with the price index for all urban consumers rising 6.1 per cent in the first three months of 1973.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon's new Phase 4 economic controls lifted the freeze on food immediately and on most other sectors of the economy Aug. 12. This is expected to bring even higher prices in the months ahead.

'Aloneness' Gaining

So marriage-minded has American society been traditionally that it comes as somewhat of a surprise to learn that one out of every three adult Americans is single — a total of 43 million.
Of this number, 22 million have never been married. An almost equal number, 21 million, have been married but through divorce or widowhood are again single.
To delve into the statistics further, of the 43 million single adults, 25 million are women; 14 million (of both sexes) are in the 18-24 age bracket; 14 million are in the 25-54 age bracket and 15 million are over 55.
Shifts in the population structure, and the social changes they bring, don't happen overnight, though it often seems that way. The fact is that for the past decade the singles' growth rate has been more than double that of the general population.
Between 1960 and 1970, the adult population grew by 16 per cent, but the single group (those never married) grew 39 per cent. At the same time, the widowed and divorced group grew 34 per cent. The absolute number of divorces increased by a whopping 82 per cent.

Behind the figures is a trend toward later marriage, or no marriage or non-permanent marriage which finds more and more Americans living more and more of their adult lifetimes in the single state.
All of which is leading to some of the most startling social changes our society has ever known, as witnessed by the growth of apartment complexes, and at least one country club, for singles only.
Singles now even have their own magazine, appropriately named "Single." Just debuted, this special-interest publication to the single, divorced, widowed and unmarried, says publisher Hy Steirman, "an endeavor to reach individuals who by choice or by chance find themselves single in a marriage-oriented society — to help them to adjust, to develop fully, to discover identity."
With a potential readership of 43 million, the prospects of commercial success for "Single" seem eminently bright. In any event, the growth of the single population as a percentage of all Americans promises to have great impact on the lifestyles, goals, attitudes, aspirations and more of the entire nation.

A Tiger By The Tail

There's seldom a solution to a problem that doesn't breed another problem. The current gasoline shortage is no exception.
In one approach to this problem, Congress is reportedly considering requiring the states to reduce speed limits on Interstate highways. Lower speeds would mean less fuel consumption.
But less fuel consumption would mean less fuel buying and in turn would mean fewer tax funds for highway maintenance and improvement, warns one state official.
The plan to reduce interstate speed limits can as a fuel conservation effort could hurt highway departments all over the country which depend on the fuel tax, says Ohio's transportation director, J. Phillip Richey. A little more than 4 cents of every 7 cents of this tax in Ohio goes to his department.

But there's "hope" for this problem. Also being considered is a hike in the federal gasoline tax. Possibly some of this extra revenue could go toward relief of state highway departments.
But even this "solution" raises a problem. If, as intended, a higher gasoline tax discourages automobile use, less automobile use would again mean less tax collection.
Any way you look at it, the motoring effort is going to pay, in one way or another.

Today's Thought

"We are not people who turn back and are lost. Instead, we have faith and are saved."
Hebrews 11:59
We are many times our worst enemy, because we find it so difficult to forgive ourselves. We go through life carrying with us guilt about past failures. Guilt can be such a crippling force in life, it can destroy and possibility of growth and achievement.
Men need to be forgiven in order to forgive themselves. If God accepts us, we should be able to accept ourselves and seek salvation from all that hinders us from becoming people with hope and assurance.

Flight Pay
Gentlemen:
I have just finished reading your editorial of July 13, entitled "No Flight Pay For Chairmen." The article is very strongly that paying flight pay to aviators in grades O-6 and above (Colonels, Generals, Captains, and Admirals) is a waste of taxpayers money, to the tune of $14.6 million per year to be exact. I wonder if he would feel that way, however, if he knew all of the facts.
It costs $800,000 to train a Navy pilot. Of course one could afford to pay for that kind of training himself. So where do the airlines recruit their aviators? From among the armed services-trained pilots. When an aviator has completed his five-year commitment that he must fulfill in exchange for that very expensive training, he is faced with the decision of whether to stay in the service or take an outside job. Very often he is offered a job with the airlines. If he takes an airline job, he could expect to earn $1,650,000 in a working lifetime. If he stays in the military, he can expect to earn $745,000 in the same time frame...at the present pay scale. Of course pilots who today have in (military) been in 38 years have earned much less.
The oldest person can be to start a career as an airline pilot is 34, so a serviceman can't wait to retire from the military first, even if he wanted to. The military is on shaky ground in trying to induce the young aviator to stick with that career. Sometimes the assurance that he will continue to draw flight pay throughout his entire military career is the one inducement that persuades him to stick with the military.
Flight pay after he attains the grade of O-6, which would cover approximately 10 years if the officer stays in a total of 30 years, is taxable, so only about $20,000 is retained by the officer.
Since Congress first passed the law last September to cut off flight pay for grade O-6 and above, the normal rate of resignations by young aviators has jumped from 22 officers a month to 74 per month. Each one of these officers who resigned has to be replaced. For the past 10 months 51.8 officers per month more than previously has had to be replaced. The total cost of training replacements for the added pilots who have resigned over this period is $412 million. This amount of money would pay flight pay for all O-6 and

Religious News

To the editor:
Two comments on your Saturday, July 14th, Religion page.
First, you are to be commended on carrying the AP article by George Cornell. This point of view concerning Watergate has been in most of the national major, religious periodicals for some four or five months now; but his was the first time I have seen in the secular press. Congratulations! You are allowing a real issue to be aired. You can't separate personal piety from social concern. Good people, if part of a bad system, must actively work to change it. They must get up off their apathies.
The second item, an advertisement, on the same page was misleading, and anything but Christian, was a reference to welfare recipients.
(1) The claim was made that we have spawned a "vast army with no sense of shame in preferring handouts to working." THIS IS NOT TRUE. Welfare recipients are thoroughly screened. Those who can work, do work. Those who commit fraud are prosecuted.
(2) Also, the New Testament was quoted as saying, "If any will not work, neither let him eat." Yes, the New Testament says that, but in what context? Early Christianity was very communal in its life-style. This was concerned for the welfare of all others. This is why Deacons were appointed to care for the widows, the elderly, the infirm. This reference was aimed at those capable of working, and who didn't; and as in our day, a very small minority.
(3) The reference to supplying gas money to a female welfare recipient with a new car. This same person called on me (7/9/73). I heard her entire story, and took more interest than to tell her if her story was valid, to call State Welfare, and they would provide for legitimate need.
Our writer, took this occasion when he was approached by a co-artist, to condemn a whole segment of our population.
Enough of this radical conservative theology combined with right-wing political philosophy. Give our system a chance. A system that, in its own eyes, incarnates "love of neighbor."

Today is Friday, July 20, the 201st day of 1973. There are 144 days left in the year.
Today's highlight in history: On this date in 1969, the American astronauts, Neil A. Armstrong and Edwin Aldrin Jr., became the first men to land on the moon.
On this date:
In 1654, a treaty was signed placing Portugal under English control.
In 1810, Colombia declared independence from Spain.
In 1871, British Columbia joined the Dominion of Canada.
In 1917, the first numbers were drawn in the World War I lottery.
In 1944, during World War I, Radio Berlin reported that Adolf Hitler had narrowly escaped death in a bomb plot.
In 1945, the U.S. flag was raised over Berlin as American troops prepared to take part in the occupation government after World War II.
Ten years ago, ideological talks ended between China and the Soviet Union, apparently with differences unresolved.

Motorcycle Helmet Law Unenforceable

VIN D'ALESSANDRO
Associated Press Writer
HARTFORD (AP) — With each new motorcycle death in Connecticut, cyclists are urged to wear their helmets. But almost since their birth in 1967, Connecticut's two head-protection laws have been unenforced because authorities say they're unenforceable.
Motorcycle accidents have killed at least 43 cyclists so far this year in Connecticut. Thirty-six were killed during all of 1972.
As the death toll mounted, State Police, the Motor Vehicle Department and the Connecticut Safety Commission joined in repeated pleas to cyclists to wear protective head gear, to turn headlights on at all times and to wear heavy clothing and shoes.
One of Connecticut's headgear laws requires cyclists to wear glasses, goggles or a face shield, unless the bike has a wind screen or wind shield. The second statute, commonly called the helmet law, requires cyclists and passengers to wear "protective head gear."
Violations of both laws carry maximum $100 fines.
But the courts have said the laws can't be enforced because they're vague and are not accompanied by written standards for helmets.
When the laws were first passed, "we went out and arrested a lot of people," state police Lt. Joseph Bowers says. But in a test case soon after the laws became effective a Bridgeport Circuit Court threw out the case "because of vagueness."
On April 15, 1971, soon after he took over the state police, Commissioner Cleveland B. Feusschen issued a bulletin to troopers:
"Due to the feelings of the court regarding the unenforceability of these two statutes and lack of regulations regarding protective devices, the state police department will take no enforcement action."
That's been policy ever since, Bowers says.
New York State has the list of approved helmets and enforces its helmet law to the letter, according to veteran motorcyclist

Cyclists Not Solely At Fault

HARTFORD (AP) — Gail Morin loved to ride motorcycles. She expressed that love, along with concern for the sport, in a letter 18 days before a motorcycle accident took her life.
She became one of 43 persons to die in Connecticut motorcycle accidents this year.
In a May 24 letter to the Norwich Bulletin editor, she expressed that love, along with concern for the sport, in a letter 18 days before a motorcycle accident took her life.
"Such an ecology-minded country as ours still throws things out the window into the road which cyclists must avoid hitting."
"Mr. Adint contradicts himself by stating that cyclists should wear protective clothing (and thus saying) that cyclists tend to camouflage themselves."
"The most protective clothing you can buy is leather and the leather jackets are usually black or brown."
"I think everyone should ride a motorcycle. Believe me, it would teach you more respect when driving a car. I have sat on a bike at an intersection watching the cars. It's dog eat dog. They remind me of a predator, looking for a split second place to cut in."
"A ride on a bike also would show you how bad some of our roads are. It is the best way to see the beauty of the state, especially at this time of the year with all the foliage beginning and you can see everything."
Signed: Gail Morin, Plainfield.
On June 28, Gail was a passenger on a motorcycle operated by Jeffrey Ingalls, 27, of Brooklyn, Conn., state police reported. Ingalls was killed and Miss Morin, 27, was critically injured when the cycle veered off Parker Road in Plainfield about 9:40 p.m. and hit a tree.
On June 11, in a hospital room, Gail Morin died.

Two Schools Of Thought

A Connecticut law requiring motorcyclists to wear crash helmets and some sort of eye protection while riding is all but unenforceable, officials say. The rider at left is without either, while the one on the right wears a helmet with a visor. The wearing of special equipment to reduce injuries and death among motorcyclists is a major concern of state highway officials. (AP photo) and educator Raymond Koszak of Brookfield.
"I don't understand why Connecticut doesn't go over, get the list and enforce it," Koszak says.
The 31-year-old teacher last summer conducted the only motorcycle driver education program ever offered in Connecticut's public schools.
Despite to six-year-old helmet law, the merits of helmets still remain a topic of debate.
Leading the opposition in the state Rep. Rufus Rose, R-Waterford, who has tried to repeal the law in virtually every legislative session since 1967.
At the age of 69, Rose has been riding a motorcycle for almost 50 years and still rides one to the state capital when the weather's good.
"Everyone involved, including former Gov. John Dempsey and Gov. (Thomas J.) Meskill, agree it's a bad law to have but we have to live with it on the books," Rose says. "We could lose federal highway funds if it were repealed."
Rose wears a helmet, but says on some people, helmets are dangerous.
Weighing about three pounds, helmets are heavy and tend to throw the head out of balance in emergency situations Rose says.
He also says it gets stuffy inside helmets and head-gear impedes hearing and some side vision.
There's also a constitutional problem, he says: whether or not the government can force an individual to do something for his own safety, something that doesn't affect the general public.
On top of all that, he says, statistics are hard to come by. Some figures show helmets have helped avert injuries but other statistics indicate that if a rider "didn't have a helmet on, he might not have had an accident," Rose says.

New Britain Hospital Restrictions Lifted

NEW BRITAIN (AP) — Restrictions on surgery and visiting were lifted Thursday at the New Britain General Hospital following the outbreak of a mild form of bacterial dysentery.
He said elective surgery will now be scheduled at the hospital and that visiting hours will return to normal.
The hospital has performed only emergency surgery since Monday. Tests on three persons confirmed they had the disease. Numerous other employees at the hospital complained of abdominal pains and diarrhea, the symptoms of dysentery.
Caterina food testing continues, Dr. Clark said, to determine the cause of the disease.
Dr. Blas B. Clark, hospital executive director, said no positive stool cultures of the shigella organism have appeared since last Thursday.

Space Program Emphasis Changed Since The Eagle Landed On Moon

By HOWARD BENEDICT AP Aerospace Writer CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — "Tranquilly base here. The Eagle has landed!" That was four years ago, on July 20, 1969. The first human voice from another celestial body.

— and the United States, for the foreseeable future, has abandoned manned lunar exploration. Instead, America's manned space program has turned attention back to earth with orbiting projects intended to reap benefits for mankind.

Photographs taken by Apollo astronauts from deep in space helped trigger this trend to look more inward toward earth than outward toward the stars. They showed earth as a fragile ball in a vast universe, its life protected from the harshness of space by a thin veil of atmospheric gases.

Armstrong became director of aeronautics for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. But six months later this quiet, intelligent man withdrew from the limelight of public life for something he'd always wanted to do: teach.

Gardening

with FRANK ATWOOD

A banana tree and other tropical fruits and flowers thrive in an Iceland greenhouse not far from the Arctic Circle. Hot water and steam from underground hot springs provide the heat, flowing through pipes that are too hot to touch. (Photo by Atwood)

We made a two-day stop-over at Iceland on our return recently from what Europeans call a "holiday" and Americans call a "vacation" trip to Europe. After visits to selected portions of Germany, Austria, Italy, France and Luxembourg, our short stay in Iceland provided some of the most interesting, unusual and memorable sights. Horticulturally, we were in the far North. The sun dropped below the horizon at 11:30 p.m. and rose again at 1 a.m. a little farther to the east. It was never dark. With these long hours of daylight the plants were growing and blossoming at the pace which they must maintain if they are to mature before the short summer ends. White clover and buttercup blossomed on stems only an inch or two high. The hay crop, grown for dairy cows and sheep, was not yet tall enough to cut, but sheep were grazing on miles of largely unfenced land with tiny patches of grass and weeds in hollows between great expanses of lava rock.

This is Company G, 1st Infantry, Connecticut National Guard, back in 1907 or 1909. It was led by Sgt. Phillip Cheney who is seated in the second row (see arrow). The photo was contributed by Mrs. Agnes Skoog of 103 Greenwood Dr.

O.C. Identifies Co. G

Referring to The Herald's July 17 picture of Co. G, I'm sure some corrections are due in the description. It was probably taken in 1907 rather than 1909.

Phil Cheney was then captain not sergeant. The arrow does not point to him. I have added another arrow to him. He stands in the rear rank of the picture. Next to the left in the view (on his right) is Barney Shultz, then Porterfield, Paul Mahoney, Custer.

I believe Lt. John Hickey stands behind Capt. Cheney's left shoulder. Next to him is Sgt. Fred Hill, who played on the Co. G basketball team and rifle team. He was an expert rifle marksman. Next to Hill is Frank Charlie Saunders. Then Pvt. Frank Edmunds who also served on the Manchester police force. In front of "Cap's" right arm is Pvt. "Jim" Bennett who worked at Tiffany's jewelry store in the Cheney block on Main St. Hunted rattlesnakes with O.C.

The big black arrow in the picture points to Lt. Sgt. (top kick) "Jim" Hines. Jim was a veteran of the 1898 Spanish American War and, I believe, the later Philippine insurrection. Next to him and at the end of the next line is Hewitt, one of the two company cooks.
