Let's Keep Our Cool

All of us are selfish at times. And all of us can panic at times.
Fortunately, for most of us, we rarely are selfish and panicky at the same time. For when we are sometimes too foolish things which we regret later.

Now we can understand the concern of everyone over the ever-rising price of food and the fact that certain commodities like bacon are not in abundance like they were a year ago. But we can't understand the impulse to hoard foods which may be in short supply as a hedge against higher prices.

The action of hoarders is being reported in various cities in the wake of Phase 4. One man in Tennessee reportedly bought 34 pounds of bacon in three days in order to escape price increases. Now it may be that he may have had bacon very badly but if every bacon eater merely doubled his purchase, the price would quadruple overnight if you could find bacon to buy.

The artificial demand created by hoarding hurts everyone by throwing the normal flow of supplies out of kilter. The hoarder who thinks he is pretty astute in saving a few dollars by stockpiling will have to ante up in the end anyway because hoarding by him and others has driven the price higher than it would have been under normal supply and demand conditions. The only way a hoarder can beat high prices is not to replace his hoard once it is gone.

Our advice to our Manchester area readers is not to panic and not to become selfish in the coming weeks as food prices seemingly skyrocket. It is clearly a time to keep our cool. Prices will rise only as long as there are those of us who will either pay them without protest or panic and try to corner the market.

By careful shopping, avoiding waste, reading store advertising for the best values and a little self-restraint, not only at the check stand but at the dinner table, we can keep shortages at a minimum until production (which in the case of most foodstuffs is a several-month process at best) is increased. Then hopefully with supply meeting reasonable demands (not inflated by hoarding) prices may level off and in many instances start moving downward.

As painful as higher prices may be the alternative is even more painful, complete wage and prices controls and rationing, which we don't believe anyone wants.

'Well Done'

Dear Sir: "Well done" to you and your staff on the coverage of past history and old photos of Manchester. I especially want to thank you for identifying Capt. Philip Cheney as the commanding officer and the sergeant in the photo as 1st Sgt. James P. Hynes. It is understandable that in group pictures of this type some confusion would arise and it is gratifying to know they were both remembered.
1st. Sgt. James P. Hynes, during his 25 year association with the men of Co. C, referred to them as "my boys," and it is with pride that my sisters and I recall "our dad." The National Guard was a part of our New England Heritage but it is also the heritage of the U.S.A.
Sincerely,
Dorothy Hynes Hicking

Scientists Look Heavenward For Solution To Energy Crisis

By Lee Roderick
(Special to The Herald)
WASHINGTON — Scientists, professional workers, and the U.S. government all are looking heavenward to the sun for one solution to the energy crisis. Unlike idolators of old, however, their objective is to harness, not worship it. For many years, sun belts have argued the merits of the sun as a constant, pollution-free source of energy to turn man's machines on earth. However, except for isolated cases, such as in Japan which has some two million solar water heaters, the idea has largely been ignored. The official neglect in the United States came to an end in June 1971 when President Nixon first spoke of the sun as an "inexhaustible source of energy." Congress has appropriated $12 million dollars during the current year for solar energy research. Although scientists agree that $12 million dollars a year begins to touch the commitment needed, still the amount is nearly 100 per cent below what the U.S. was spending just three years ago.
The potential for solar energy was detailed recently at a gathering of 600 scientists from throughout the world, meeting in Paris under the auspices of a UN agency.
An observer of the proceedings, in an article reprinted in the Congressional Record, summarized the projections of a panel of experts from NASA and the National Science Foundation. "Just five years from now, solar heating could be in commercial use around the globe. In less than 10 years, these rays could be producing commercial electric power," wrote Claire Sterling.

Tax Simplification

(Editor's Note: Andrew Tully is on vacation. During his absence CAPITAL FARE will be written by an assortment of guest columnists.)
By Donald C. Alexander
Commissioner of Internal Revenue
Can a tax lawyer after years of dealing with complex corporation tax matters be sympathetic to the problems of the "small" taxpayer wrestling with his income tax return?
As the new Commissioner of Internal Revenue, and the tax lawyer described in the question, I say, "Yes."
I, too, have an annual encounter with Form 1040. And like most taxpayers, I've often wished for a simpler, less time-consuming return. My wish is not new or unique. I share it with millions of taxpayers.
Simplification of tax returns has also been the objective of prior Commissioners of Internal Revenue. My predecessors and I, however, have been aware that to achieve real simplification of tax returns, there must be simpler tax laws.
Nevertheless, the IRS has tried to ease the taxpayer's task within the confines of the present tax law. For example, this past year the IRS reintroduced the Short Form 1040. Nearly 22 million taxpayers who would not benefit from itemizing their deductions took advantage of the simpler form.
This year, we are renewing our efforts to make Form 1040 an easier to understand, easier to use form. We do this out of a sense of responsibility to aid taxpayers in meeting their obligations under the law.
Also, the less complicated a form, the less chance for error on the part of the taxpayer —

What's more, while you were on vacation, another 270 million income tax returns would have been filed by our fellow citizens.
Counting returns probably is the least of our problems in processing them. At this writing we have processed nearly 73 million returns and certified over 80 million refunds totaling more than $2.1 billion. That averages out to $349 per return, a 84% increase over the average refund for the same period last year.
As I indicated, the number of individual income tax returns filed doesn't tell the entire story of the IRS task. In fiscal year 1972, more than 112 million returns of all kinds were filed. Add to that the various schedules, supplementary sheets, other documents and correspondence from taxpayers, and you'll see that IRS handles about 400 million pieces of paper a year.
With all this, the IRS collected $110-billion in taxes from all sources in fiscal 1972. Yet it only cost the Revenue Service 54 cents to collect every $100 of tax revenue — the lowest cost for tax administration in the world.
How can our taxes be collected so economically? Up-to-date information processing equipment and systems are important. Over 70,000 IRS employees in more than 1,100 offices across the country help administer the nation's tax program play a vital role. However, you, the citizen-taxpayer, goes most of the credit for the low cost and effectiveness of Federal tax administration in the United States. It is because you and the vast majority of your fellow citizens are conscientious in meeting your tax obligations.

Today's Thought

"He said to him, Follow Me."
John 21:19

When we are disappointed, we are apt to regard the call to follow Christ as an impossible request. We will no longer be able to do as we please or live by our desires. We will have to deny self and take up His cross. We follow because it is the highest calling anyone can have — to be accepted by Him and to be a fellow-laborer with Him, this is our privilege. It shows we are accepted by Him and He loves us.
Lord, draw us to you, that we may follow you. Amen.

The Man Who Tasted Glory

I want to hold the hand of the man
Who has been through it all and seen,
Who has walked through the night of an unseen
dread and stuck to the world-machine;
Who has thirsted and starved and bared his breast,
To the winds of dawn and felt
The bite and sting of the bitter blasts that the mouths of the foul have dealt;
Who was tempted and fell, and rose again and gone
on trusty and true;
Who with God — supreme in his manly heart and his
courage burning anew,
"I'd give my all" — "be it little or great" —
To walk by his side today —
To stand up there with the man who has known the sting of the burning fray
Who has clenched his fist, and gritted his teeth
and gone on doing his best.
Because of the love of his fellowman and the faith in his manly breast.
I want to walk with him — "Hand in hand," —
together journey along
For the man who has fought and won is the man that can make men strong.
I want to walk by the side of the man who has seen and suffered and known,
Who has measured his pace on the battlefield
and given and taken blows;
Who has never whined when the scheme went wrong
nor scoffed at the falling plan —
But taken his dose with the heart of trust and the faith of a gentleman.
Who has struck and parted and given and sought and scarred with a thousand spears —
Can lift his head to the stars of heaven and isn't afraid of his tears.

The Temptation Is Awful

(From The New York Times)
Congress finds itself these days much in the position of a child left alone with a cookie jar. It is sorely tempted to help itself to a handful of goodies, but fearful of getting caught in the act.

A special commission set up to review high level federal salaries has made its recommendations to President Richard M. Nixon.

Mr. Nixon is sitting on them, but it is reported the panel's proposals include a $10,625 a year — or 25 per cent — hike in congressional pay.

Under the law, the President can alter, kill or pass along intact the commission's package. The salary kickup then would become effective in 30 days unless voted down by either chamber on Capitol Hill.

But unless Mr. Nixon takes some action soon — or the rules are changed — the matter will ride over until 1974, an election year. Few lawmakers, even those who want a raise so bad they can taste it, relish that prospect.

Sen. Gale McGee (D-Wyo.) is pushing a face-saving, hide-saving out. He would amend the present procedure so as to force the President to transmit his suggestions for pay boosts to Congress by the end of August.

McGee's claim that his scheme would promote "more rational" consideration of the matter is pious piffle. The obvious intent is to slip the paycheck fattener through on the sly while the public's back is turned.

We believe a 25 per cent pay increase would be outrageous at a time when (1) ordinary Americans are being asked to tighten their belts, and (2) lawmakers enjoy lush fringe benefits such as generous pensions and allowances for living and travel expenses to supplement their $42,000 pay.

If the senators and representatives really feel entitled to more, the fair, honorable course would be to take their case to the people openly instead of being devious.

Today in History

Today is Tuesday, July 31, the 212th day of 1973. There are 153 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On this date in 1777, the Marquis de Lafayette offered his services to the American colonists, and the French nobleman was commissioned a major general in the Continental Army.
On this date: In 1492, Christopher Columbus discovered the island of Trinidad.
In 1790, the U.S. government issued its first patent — to Samuel Hopkins of Vermont for a process to make potash.
In 1877, Thomas A. Edison

took out an early patent leading to his development of the phonograph.
In 1917, the World War I battle of Flanders began.
In 1945, the French occupation leader, Pierre Laval, surrendered to U.S. occupation authorities in Austria.
In 1946, President Harry S. Truman dedicated New York's Idlewild airport, now the John F. Kennedy airport.

Five years ago: President Lyndon B. Johnson warned that an increase in steel prices in the United States might have dire economic consequences.
One year ago: Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton of Missouri withdrew as the Democratic vice presidential nominee after questions were raised about his medical history.
Today's birthday: Former big league baseball manager Hank Bauer is 81.

Thought for today: There's one consolation in inflation: The money you haven't got isn't worth as much as it used to be. — Anonymous.

In the past, many grocery stores discontinued the practice of giving stamps with the intention of lowering food prices and to develop a discount image. Well, the fancy names have all disappeared and the word discount in the food business has become a thing of the past. However throughout this transitional period food prices have risen considerably but the stamps have not returned.
Our pricing, weekly specials and the giving of S&H Green Stamps is without question your best deal today.

Rare Night for Lyle, Down Yanks' Ace

BOSTON (AP)—Sparky Lyle of the New York Yankees is rated one of baseball's top relief pitchers, but he doesn't intimidate the Boston Red Sox.

RICO PETROCELLI

Lyle, traded by Boston to New York before the 1972 season, was his usual confident self Monday night as he stroled from the bullpen after the Yankees had pulled into a 3-2 tie in the first of the ninth. A few minutes later he retired to the clubhouse, a loser.

Rico Petrocelli, who had hit a two-run homer in the second, led off against Lyle on his first at-bat, with a line single to center and scored on Rick Miller's two-out single to right center.
