Town Didn't Vote Sewer Charge Hike

Although the Manchester Board of Directors hasn't taken action to raise sewer charges to the level of 100 per cent of the water bill, town customers are being billed under the 100 per cent basis — and not 90 per cent, as still is the legal rate.

Town Manager Robert Weiss, informed today about the situation, said he will discuss the matter with Town Council David Barry.

Asked what effect the 100 per cent charge will have on bills already paid and bills due, he said he is not prepared to comment.

Last spring, Weiss recommended to the directors they approve the raise to 100 per cent of the water bill. Mayor John Thompson, in his May 7 budget message for the 1973-74 fiscal year, said he backs the proposal.

However, although the 100 per cent sewerage charge has been instituted, the board hasn't taken any formal action.

State Commission Challenges Exxon Gas Price Increase

HARTFORD (AP) — The Connecticut Petroleum Products Control Commission asked the state attorney general to take civil action against the Exxon Corp. for raising wholesale gasoline prices by one penny a gallon.

The commission also voted unanimously to order Exxon to pay the increase immediately.

By the Associated Press Today is Saturday, Sept. 8, the 251st day of 1973. There are 114 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On this date in 1564, a Spanish expedition landed in what is now St. Augustine, Fla., and formed the first permanent European settlement in North America.

On this date— In 1664, Peter Stuyvesant surrendered New Amsterdam to the British.

In 1790, Wisconsin can under English control after being French territory.

In 1855, the Crimean War ended.

In 1883, construction of the Northern Pacific Railroad was completed with the driving of the last spike near Garrison, Mont.

In 1934, 134 persons lost their lives in a fire aboard the luxury liner Morro Castle off the New Jersey coast.

In 1955, Sen. Huey Long of Louisiana was shot at Baton Rouge. He died two days later.

Ten years ago: A 34-year-old grandmother gave birth to quintuplets in Venezuela.

Five years ago: Black Panther leader Huey Newton was convicted of violent manslaughter in the killing of an Oakland, Calif., policeman.

Today's birthdays: Comedian Sid Caesar is 51. Songwriter Howard Dietz is 77.

Thought for today: Mark Twain gave this advice to young girls: Don't smoke to excess, don't drink to excess and don't marry to excess.

PERSON POWER
Every 500 years there is a surge of it, as every once in a while the storm-charged upper atmosphere brings a storm which clears the air.

State Rep. William J. Smyth, R-Stratford, said Exxon officials notified him of its increase by telegram Thursday night about 18 hours after it took effect.

The increase is clearly unwarranted and in violation of the law," he said.

Smyth said an examination of Exxon's records for the fiscal year that ended June 30 showed the company sold more than 95 million gallons of gasoline in Connecticut last year. At that rate, the penny increase represents more than $95,000, he added.

The commission left it to the attorney general to decide whether to seek temporary relief from Exxon while awaiting a permanent settlement.

Asst. Atty. Gen. Daniel Schaefer said a final decision on what action would be taken would have to come from Atty. Gen. Robert K. Killian and could be made as early as next week.

In Washington, sources said the Cost of Living Council had asked Exxon to justify the one cent increase.

Negotiations To End Strike Broken Off

GROTON (AP) — Talks between the striking Marine Draftsmen's Association (MDA) and General Dynamics' electric Boat Division have broken off after two days of attempts by federal mediators to get both sides back to the bargaining table.

Company and union representatives met separately with mediators Wednesday and Thursday this week in Washington, D.C.

The talks fell through Friday when the MDA accused the company of failing to judge from its original offer.

Ambassador John Lodge Resigns Post

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — John Davison Lodge is resigning as U.S. ambassador to Argentina after four years of keeping a low public profile in this politically turbulent nation.

"They kept their emphasis on the cultural ties between Argentina and the U.S.," one observer said of Lodge, 69, and his Italian-born wife, Frances Braggiotti. "They wisely kept political differences in the background."

Lodge's resignation was accepted Friday in Washington after four years in the post. A former governor of Connecticut and ambassador to Spain, Lodge is the younger brother of Henry Cabot Lodge, the former U.S. ambassador to South Vietnam and a 1960 vice presidential candidate.

A Washington Post article in February said Lodge was best known by local diplomats for "his boisterous after-dinner songfests and an apparent lack of interest in political discussions."

Bowling Results
Tuesday afternoon the action was at the Parkade Lanes where the 1973-74 bowling league season got under way with a record turnout of 19 teams. Bernie Giovino, bowling manager, hopes that we can get a few more bowlers so we can make it a 20-team league.

Disaster Strikes

Once again the awesome power of natural forces has been demonstrated. Thursday's tornado in the north Manchester and Vernon area is testimony to this and we can thank God no lives were lost.

The monetary toll of the sudden and devastating storm may not be known for several weeks but on the basis of preliminary observations it will be several hundred thousands of dollars.

For those who went through the experience, it will never be forgotten. For those who visited the devastated area there must have been thoughts of how fortunate they were not to have been in the path of the destructive wind.

The community services of Manchester and Vernon responded extremely well to the disaster situation, a situation that no one can adequately anticipate nor be completely prepared to meet.

Roads, power services, and other necessities were restored as quickly as human effort and equipment could do so. Many repairs, of necessity, are temporary. Many residents face many hours of labor cleaning up following the storm and in making permanent repairs to homes and businesses.

The financial burdens the storm brought to many will be difficult for some to overcome. Insurance may help, but as in the case of most disasters of this kind, it rarely covers all of the losses for the cost of protection against rare natural violence is often prohibitive or unavailable.

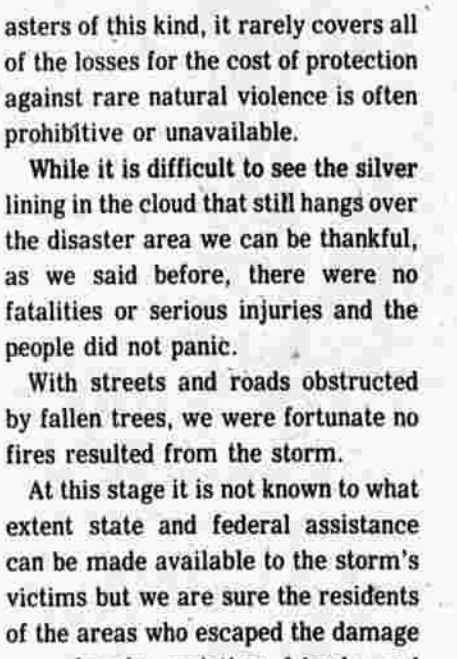

While it is difficult to see the silver lining in the cloud that still hangs over the disaster area we can be thankful, as we said before, there were no fatalities or serious injuries and the people did not panic.

With streets and roads obstructed by fallen trees, we were fortunate no fires resulted from the storm.

At this stage it is not known to what extent state and federal assistance can be made available to the storm's victims but we are sure the residents of the areas who escaped the damage are already assisting friends and neighbors less fortunate and will continue to do so until things are back to normal.

Each of us, who escaped the tragedy, must give thanks and help as much as we can to those less fortunate. It is not only the neighborly thing to do but unpredictable nature may strike again and we, who escaped this time, may be the ones who will welcome the outstretched hand of friendship and help tomorrow.

A part of our community has suffered a damaging loss. All of the community should pitch in to assist in any way it can to help those in need. It is the least we can do for our neighbors in need.

Courts And Climate

NEW YORK, N.Y. — For a perilous moment President Nixon seemed to teeter on the edge of bypassing the appeals process and simply refusing to comply with U.S. Dist. Judge Sirica's decision on the tapes. He had one precedent for it in White House history — that of Andrew Jackson who disliked one of Chief Justice Marshall's decisions which required executive enforcement, and who said tauntingly, "John Marshall has made his decision; now let him enforce it."

But whoever may have counseled this in the President's legal entourage, Nixon wisely didn't follow it up. It would have meant an even sharper constitutional crisis than exists now, and could have spelled grid for him. He is caught in a constitutional bind. He insists on the one hand (as Jefferson used to do) that the courts are co-equal with the President's, and on the other that Sirica's decision is not subordinate to them. Yet he has also argued that the Ervin committee of inquiry has violated the due process rights of the people. It has done so, he says, by making the appeal he submits himself, for the purpose of the appeal, to the jurisdiction he will keep challenging to the end. The highest court will have to make the ruling, both about jurisdiction and about the great constitutional issue of how confidential a President's papers are, and to what degree and in what way the confidentiality can be breached by being made subject to the legal process.

Mr. Nixon has an extremely able constitutional lawyer in Prof. Charles Wright of the University of Texas who is planning and arguing his constitutional strategy. He has an able opponent also in prosecutor Archibald Cox. Both men are conscious of their historic role — as Mr. Nixon himself is — and of the high issues that the Supreme Court will be deciding. As for the Supreme Court itself, I plan to turn in a second piece to what we know of the thinking of each of its members, and of how the logic of their past positions will incline them to vote in the present case.

But I might note one factor now — that the climate. The acquittal by a Florida jury in the trial of the Gainesville defendants, perhaps the last of the "conspiracy" trials in the Nixon Administration, may be a sign of the current climate about national security.

Every court, as well as every jury, operates in whatever political and intellectual climate prevails at the time. This will be true of the Supreme Court as well. Justice Sirica is very aware of that fact, and it may have shaped what he called his "middle way" approach, with an eye to influencing the higher court. Sen. Ervin and the members of his committee would do well to be equally aware of the climate factor, if what they want is a favorable Supreme Court decision on the tapes.

Capital Fare

Andrew Tully

Fascinating

WASHINGTON — Maybe some critics are right when they say the "people" are bored with Watergate. We have always been a community with a short attention span. But the lawsuit over those White House tapes should give a new fascination to the scenario.

Judge John Sirica's order that President Nixon make the tapes available, so the judge can rule on their use by a grand jury, set the stage for final resolution of the issue of Presidential privilege after almost 200 years of fiddling. Whether or not Sirica's opinion is upheld, there will be a showdown. And about time.

The showdown will take place in the courts, where the issue belongs, and Sirica noted that it may develop the taped conversations are laced with so much legitimately privileged material that it would be impossible to extract any parts of them for perusal by the grand jury. But he threw down the gauntlet. This decision, he wrote, is for the courts to make, adding "Executive privilege is not the mode of resolution."

Looking back into history, the unsophisticated might wonder why the issue still survives, and that is understandable. The President's "authority" to withhold certain information from the public has lived the life of a bastard child over the years. It is granted certain rights by default of the legitimate siblings. This curious background reflects the reluctance of both the legislative and judicial branches to engage the Presidency in a winner-take-all battle.

And yet the framers of the Constitution actually refused to make executive privilege a part of that document. During the 1787 Constitutional Convention, James Madison asked that the delegates consider "what privileges ought to be allowed to the executive." As recalled, "none were deemed necessary, or at least that the constitution need not record any."

That would seem to have been that. Indeed, the intent of the Constitution makers was buttressed by two Supreme Court decisions during the Republic's waning years. In Marbury v. Madison, Chief Justice John Marshall ruled "It is emphatically the province and duty of the judicial department to say what the law is." During the treason trial of Aaron Burr, Marshall ordered President Jefferson to produce documents demanded by Burr, ruling that "the property of introducing any paper into a case, must depend on the character of the paper, not on the character of the person who holds it."

Nevertheless, the Supreme Court since then has recognized an executive privilege "for military secrets," and it was not until 1952 that the highest bench — in reaffirming that doctrine — reserved the right to determine whether the privilege had been properly invoked. Sirica exercised that right in concluding that he was "simply unable to decide whether the President's stand was valid without inspecting the recordings himself."

Sirica's ruling would seem to pose a conflict with that provision of due process which says the prosecution must prove a suspect guilty. He said flatly that "The burden here . . . is on the President to define what it is about his office that court process commanding the production of evidence cannot reach there."

However, Sirica has not ordered Nixon to produce evidence, but only to let Sirica listen to the tapes so the judge can decide whether the contents constitute evidence relating to a criminal activity. Moreover, he said he would rule everything in the tapes he is privileged if he finds "privileged and unprivileged evidence, inextricably connected."

Fair enough — if you're Special Prosecutor Archie Cox. But unthinkable if you're Richard Nixon, who has taken the firm stand that not even a member of the judicial branch may make himself privy to a President's confidential communications. Fascinating.

International Law: A Vehicle For Peace

At least two events in recent days have underscored — if any underscoring were needed — how close the world still is to the jungle.

At one extreme was the indiscriminate slaughter of airline passengers at the Athens airport by Arab terrorists.

At the other was the interception of a Lebanese airliner — "on the high seas," as it were — by Israeli jets in hopes of capturing Palestinian guerrilla leaders.

These are extremes, of course, and they are not the worst atrocities spawned by the Arab Israel conflict, nor will they be the last. Yet between these extremes is a vast gray area of non-existent or ill-defined or unenforceable international law.

It is in this area that a sovereign nation like France, for example, placing her own perceived security above any other consideration, can conduct a series of atmospheric atom bomb tests despite the strongest protests from the world community.

"Humankind's most ancient, most constant, most universal desire has been for peaceful order with justice among peoples and among nations," says Charles S. Rhyne. "Translating this desire from dream to reality is indeed humankind's greatest need."

Rhyne has done more than probably any other person, jurist or otherwise, to realize that dream and fill that need."

In 1958, while president of the American Bar Association, he established the World Peace Through Law effort as a special committee of the association.

This evolved into the World Peace Through Law Center, created at an international conference of the world legal profession in Athens in 1963.

There have been four more conferences since then and the Center, of which Rhyne is president, now includes judges and members of the legal profession, as well as non-lawyers, from 135 countries. Included are the high court judges from almost every nation and in some cases the state memberships of supreme courts.

During the week of August 25-31, thousands of these world law leaders met in Abidjan, Ivory Coast, for the Sixth World Conference on World Peace Through Law — the first such summit conference on the law of the world to be held on the African continent.

In the most ambitious program ever to go before a conference, the delegates examined such areas as: Controlling dangerous drugs; international terrorism — kidnapping, extortion, skyjacking (with a "demonstration trial" involving an actual skyjacking case); refugee rights; environmental protection; United Nations reforms; making the World Court more used and useful; law of the sea.

"International law grows only by voluntary acceptance of treaties, conventions and other forms of transnational law and law agencies," says Rhyne. "There is no world legislature."

Through its unique position and the prestige it has acquired in the past decade, the World Peace Through Law Center continues to work toward building and strengthening the world's law system through acceptance and use by nations of more international law.

Dummy had, after all, started with only three trumps. If the opponents took two trumps out of the dummy, declarer would be able to ruff only one club.

Play For Long Suit
Resigning himself to this defense, South had to play for the ace of hearts, ruffed a spade, ruffed a club in dummy and ruffed another spade. Now he could draw the last trump, lead a diamond to dummy and ruff still another spade.

By this time, dummy's last spade was good. South could get to dummy once more with a diamond to cash the last spade. This was his tenth trick, and the contract was safe.

Daily Question
As dealer, you hold:
Spades, J, Hearts, K, Q, J, 7, 5, 3, Diamonds, 9, 7, 3, Clubs, J, 7, 5.

What do you say?
Answer: Pass. Change one of the small cards to an ace, and you'd have a minimum opening bid. You need more than a fairly good suit for an opening bid.

"Still Life" by Paul Cezanne. It is from the Chester Dale Collection at the National Gallery of Art in Washington, D.C.

"Still Life" by Paul Cezanne

Paul Cezanne (pronounced Say-zahn), the most famous painter of the 1900's, is known as the father of modern art.

Still lifes are pictures of objects such as bottles and fruits arranged on a table. Cezanne often painted this kind of picture because he worked so slowly that most models could not sit still long enough for a portrait. He was very exacting in every stroke.

Cezanne was born in the south of France in 1839. He was the son of a rich banker. At age 22 he went to Paris. He was very sensitive and could not keep friends. He spent his last lonely years back in southern France. People did not think his work was any good. He would give paintings away. He would even let his son cut them into puzzles.

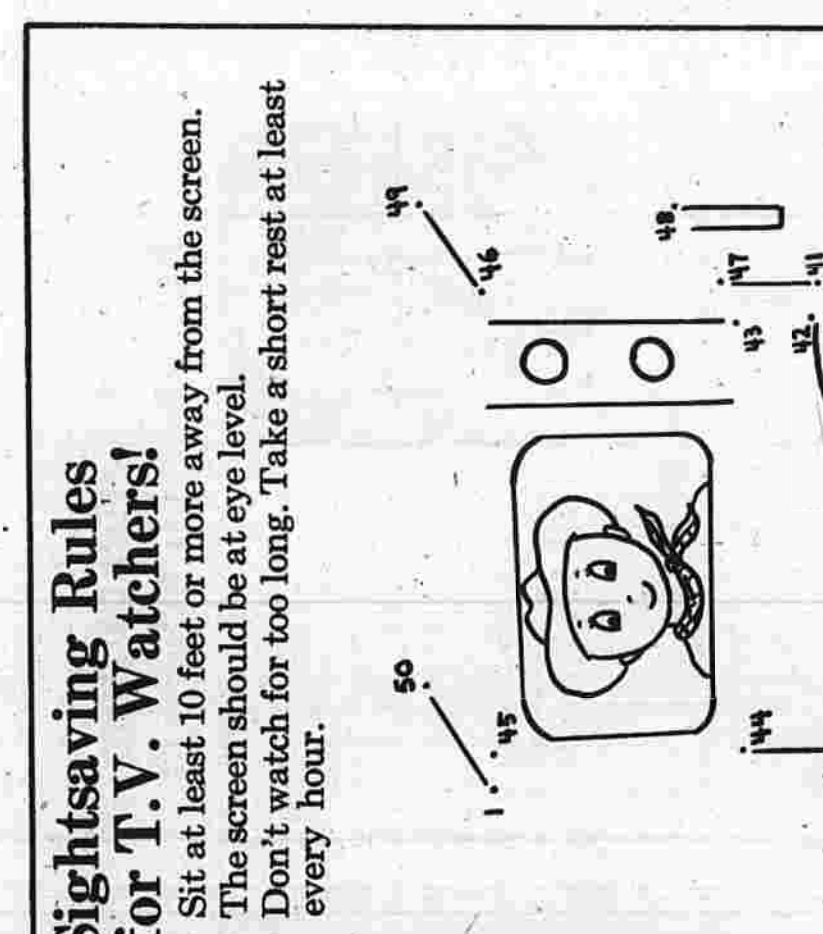

Finally, people began to buy his pictures. They offered as much as 30 dollars for one of them. But fame came too late. Cezanne died in 1906 from a cold he caught while painting in the rain. Note the shapes in the painting. See the oval fruits. See the triangles in the table cloth.

His work was mainly evangelistic, establishing congregations and working with schools and kindergartens. He spent two years in the production of a Japanese Christian television program, "A Grain of Wheat." He and his family returned to the United States in the summer of 1972 and shortly afterwards, he accepted the invitation to the pastorate of Trinity Lutheran Church. (Herald photo by Ofiana)

Florence Henderson, "Mister Rogers' Neighborhood" Show

What's New in Public Television for Kids

"Mister Rogers' Neighborhood" returns for its eighth season on Public Television. The host is Fred Rogers, a minister and an authority on child behavior. This year, the show continues to publish a monthly newspaper called "A round the Neighborhood." A poster and a record for children will be included with the issues from time to time. There will be 10 issues each year.

"Zoom" returns for its third season. It features the old ZOOMERS—Lori, Edith, Neal and Danny, as well as three new ZOOMERS—Michael, Donna and Timmy. The cast will be wearing brand new striped T-shirts. There will be more ZOOMtraps, less doodles. More plays, Try-It-At-Home, games, barrets and ZOOM do's. More specials, ZOOM guests and ZOOM recipes.

"Sesame Street" will begin its fifth year when it starts in November. The same cast of characters will be back again. Spanish words and phrases will continue to be an important part of the show.

Did you know that "Sesame Street" and "The Electric Company" have eight offices scattered throughout the country? The people in these offices work with teachers, parents and other interested adults in carrying out the educational aims of the show.

"The Electric Company" will return for the third year with much the same cast. This year, more meaningful material will be used. Children will be taught to read phrases rather than just one word at a time. "Love of Chart" is to return as part of the show. There are plans to begin an "Electric Company" magazine sometime in the future.

"Cartoonists" is a program for Spanish speaking children, will also return to stations in cities where there is a big Spanish speaking population. Plans are also underway for another Spanish speaking program probably to be launched the first of next year.

Meet the Pros:
Meet John Brockington

John Brockington is a 6-1, 225 running back for the Green Bay Packers. He was "Football of the Year" in 1971. He is the only player ever to gain over 1,000 yards in each of his first two pro seasons. The biggest thrill of his career came when he was picked by his fellow players for the 1971 all pro team.

The player he admired most when he was growing up was Jimmy Brown, the running back for the Cleveland Browns.

John did not start playing football until he was in high school in Brooklyn, New York. While he was growing up, he played basketball and Little League baseball.

What advice would he give young players? "Don't get too selfish. Play each game one at a time and try to do your best. Play each game one at a time."

John played college football for Ohio State where he was an All-American. He plans to play pro ball for 10 years. His hobby is raising quarter horses in Ohio.

Congress Offered Olive Branch

Members of the family of John F. Shea Jr. posed with Gov. Thomas J. Meskill Saturday prior to a testimonial in Shea's honor at the Colony Club recognizing his appointment as a superior court judge.

Judge Shea Honored At Testimonial Fete

FLOYD LARSON (Herald Reporter)
It was officially called a testimonial dinner, and to the extent that John F. Shea's past achievements as a citizen, attorney, public servant, Republican party worker and family man was concerned, this was true.

Special gifts were presented to the judge by Raymond "Sonny" Damato, Taylor and Thomas Bailey. They introduced by Taylor were Shea's mother, Mrs. John F. Shea Sr., and Sister Mary Catherine, who was Shea's first grade teacher at St. James School who claimed the honor of being the first to seat him on the bench reading bench.

Other head table guests were: Mrs. Paul Martine, Mrs. Loiselle, Mrs. LaBelle and Mrs. Taylor. Darnato and Marion O. Mercer were dinner co-chairmen and members were Constance Albert, Bailey, A. Paul Berte, M. Adler Dolkin, Elinor M. Hashim, Martie and Mrs. Taylor.

During the testimonial to John F. Shea Jr., Manchester, honoring his elevation to a judge on the state superior court, there were lighter moments mixed with serious matters, too. Shea sports an "official" British-type wig worn by judges here which was presented him by his former law partner, Paul Martie.

Five Killed On Highways

By The Associated Press
Five Connecticut residents died in car accidents, while a variety of other incidents claimed the lives of six persons in the state during the weekend.

Authorities said the plane was owned by Donald Casazza, 40, who lived near the crash site. The second victim was a woman, police said. Authorities said that she died in a car crash on Route 25 in Monroe. In Brookline Mass., Joy Bernier, 19, of West Hartford, a Boston University student, died when the small car she was in struck a tree and she was thrown through the windshield.
