tual confirmation of Dr. Henry Kissinger as secretary of state by the Senate, we hope it can be achieved without the acrimony which has sometimes accompanied senatorial hearings in the past.

Dr. Kissinger has become a respected and acclaimed international figure in his role as national security adviser to the President. His feats in dealing with the North Vietnamese, the Russians' and China has made him a great reputation as a very skilled and effective diplomat.

Kissinger has been de facto secretary of state, even though he did not have the title, nor the responsibility of the administration of the State Department. He has emerged as the most outstanding figure that the country has had since Dean Acheson and Cordell Hull.

A long, nit-picking session with the Senate Foreign Relations Committee could send Kissinger to the State Department with a bruised image which would hinder his efficiency in foreign affairs by reducing his stature. When dealing with nations which put a great premium on "face," it is important that our chief foreign officer be of equal or superior stature to those with whom he deals.

The foreign relations committee One is electronic surveillance of subordinates shortly after Kissinger became national security adviser. The

The fear has been expressed that Kissinger, as national security adviser, may be considered as a presidential aide and hence be less accessible to Congress. He has answered this, we think, by his assertion that he hopes to initiate a new era of cooperation and communication between the State Department and Electronic surveillance of subordinates took place only four months after Kissinger had taken the position as adviser to the President. It. further, was endorsed by the then attorney-general and the FBI head, J. Edgar Hoover. While it could not place now, without court warrant, it obviously seemed justified at the time for national security and the prevention of leaks of important documents.

the Congress.

Senate committees, in hearings, too, often seem to become enamoured of their publicity and lose sight of the objectives of the hearings. To us, Senator Fulbright, chairman, has often in the past seemed to be working against national interest. We would hazard that Kissinger will find a strong supporter in Senator Gale W. McGee of Wyoming, who has been a strong supporter of bi-partisan foreign policy.

The committee, and the Senate as a the country if they use the hearings as an opportunity to downgrade Kissinger or settle old scores with the

Now - an organic hair remover

Hair's off in minutes, stays off for weeks.

Leaves skin beautifully smooth, free from hair . . . without shaving, waxing, using smelly creams or foams or resorting to electrolysis.

There is now a way to remove unwanted hair from lace, arms, thighs and legs, and keep it off longer. You use a gentle, odorless, organic compound called Delila, and the results are simply great. Delila actually lifts out the whole hair from the follicle . . . leaves your skin beautifully smooth and free from hair for weeks.

The little extra time Delila may take at first won't matter once you find you can really forget about hair removal . . . yes, for weeks. There are no blunt ends. No prickly stubble, no nicks or cuts. And there's no guick grow back as there is using razors or creamy or foamy depliatories.

Gasoline Ceilings Debated

- WASHINGTON (AP) - Gas station owners have told the Cost of Living Council that some of them are closing down because of the council's price ceilings and some others are defying the regulations. As the council's Phase 4 price ceilings on retail gasoline were being debated in court elsewhere in the city, representatives of Western gasoline station operators and several senators spent nearly two hours Monday with council officials in a meeting arranged by Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M. Bud Walch, an Oklahoma City gas station owner said 25 per cent of Oklahoma City gas
